2 Billion Bonus Given to Senate; Vote Next Week

Veterans Fight On For Rival Schemes

Gore Amendment Would Allow Roosevelt to Use Works Fund.

The Harrison compromise bonus bill, authorizing a $2,660,000,000 ultimate payment to veterans in cash or in bonds, yesterday was rushed to the Senate calendar following brisk approval by the Senate Finance Committee.

Temporarily sidetracking the inflationary House bill, providing immediate full payment in cash, the compromise was speedily adopted in a strategic move for a test vote in the Senate probably next week.

Plans to call the measure up in the Senate today, displacing pending anti-lynching legislation, were tentatively abandoned by leaders last night.

Two significant changes were written into the bill before the favorable report was ordered. One, sponsored by Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, gives each veteran the option of collecting his bonus in cash or in bonds. The other, by Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), of Oklahoma, grants the President discretionary power to draw on the $4,880,000,000 works fund for payment.

To Fight for Other Bills.

Both the Patman bill, approved by the House, and the Vinson bill, leaving financing up to the Treasury, were thrust aside by the committee. Veterans organizations sponsoring both said they would be offered as substitutes when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

"The Veterans of Foreign Wars will redouble its fight for the passage of the Patman bill, which is the only pending plan that will satisfy the former service men and end the so-called bonus issue," said Commander in Chief James E. Van Zandt, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He declared the Finance Committee report "just another parliamentary step toward what we expect will be the enactment of legislation for full cash payment."

Spokesmen for the American Legion voiced equal confidence the Vinson bill, indorsed by that organization, will come out on top.

Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, author of the compromise plan, made no forecasts. A more liberal measure, he contends, will be stopped by a veto. Despite official silence at the White House, the Mississippian insists the President will sign his bill.

May Adjourn Till Monday.

To a move by Southern Senators to shelve the pending Wagner-Costigan antilynching bill was attributed committee haste in bonus action, although committeemen denied this.

Senator Harrison originally intended to try for bonus consideration today. Alternate strategy later agreed upon calls for a move to adjourn over until Monday.

This would automatically remove the antilynching bill as the immediate issue before the Senate, and pave the way for bonus debate

COMP. GEN. McCARL.

Davis Claims Wheat Victory Over McCarl

Comptroller Finds AAA Has Right to Pay Now for '36 Reduction.

The New Deal came off with a victory in its latest skirmish with Comptroller General J. R. McCarl last night when AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis announced that the 1935 supplementary wheat contracts had been approved.

Under these contracts cooperating wheat farmers may plant their full acreage and at the same time receive benefit payments for 1935, despite the fact that the benefit payments originally were conditioned on a reduction in acreage.

The AAA was moved to propose this action because dry weather in the West had made wheat production uncertain. The modified program, which will now go ahead, provides that growers who had agreed to reductions this year must make them next year instead.

Wallace Has Discretion.

When this plan was broached to McCarl, he raised objections and asked additional data. This information satisfied him on legality of Secretary Wallace's discretionary use of power—but he suggested in a letter that the contracts might well have been annulled, as one solution to the problem.

Terming the McCarl ruling "entirely satisfactory," Administrator Davis declared, "At no time has the Adjustment Administration been in disagreement with the office of the comptroller general regarding this matter."

The comptroller general's letter to Secretary Wallace set out:

"Inasmuch as the need now appears for greater production in 1935, but existing contracts are standing in the way, the remedy suggests itself of offering annulment of such contracts with a view to saving the benefit payment and releasing the producers to plant and to harvest following the dictates of their judgment, and with adjustments of such contracts in line with your suggestion only in the event of refusal of such offer.

"However, in view of the broad

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the seventh thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life dramas broadcast Wednesday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

"He can't do nothing," Judd Patterson shouted, his evil voice lifting above the noise of wind and water. "It ain't the concrete's fault. It's an act of God."

"Dad, dad," Mollie cried, "save our farms, save us!"

"Chief engineer's standing by for orders, sir," Frank Maxwell called in for the third time. His voice was a message of love to Mollie even in the despair of the storm.

Grant's eyes blurred. All he could see was his daughter—no longer young, lovely, trusting, but tired, worn, poverty-stricken—bitter at a father who poured out his last dollar to save a dam made rotten by a crooked partner. He threw out his hands. "Don't be afraid, my friends, the dam will be saved!"

Orders arose above the wind. All night human hands toiled! Carloads of earth came over the sidings! Truckloads of gravel labored up the hill! At daybreak the sun rose over a dam with waters still churning and rising—but safe. Tom Grant, with Mollie and Frank, started down the valley to begin life again. Overnight he had become old, penniless. But he was still an honest man!

50,000 Hear Pope's Plea At Lourdes

140 Masses Will Be Said in 72 Hours, Ending 2-Year Jubilee.

By the Associated Press.

Lourdes, France, April 25.—Prelates in red and purple today led 50,000 pilgrims at Lourdes' famous grotto in prayers for peace which, lasting three days and nights, will be shared by Catholic faithful throughout the world.

At 4 p. m., in the presence of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, personal legate of Pope Pius, took place the first of 140 masses which will be celebrated in 72 hours as the closing solemnities of the church's two-year "jubilee of the redemption."

The grotto where Saint Bernadette reported the apparition of the Virgin and the streets outside the shrine were brilliantly illuminated for the all-night supplications to the Deity.

Lourdes sparkled with unusual splendor as lights gleamed from silver helmets of Vatican officers and emphasized the resplendent robes of papal dignitaries.

Sixty high ecclesiastics from North and South America, European nations and India, China, Japan, Australia and Africa, were here to greet the papal secretary of state. Among these churchmen mingled the members of noble European families, including former Empress Zita of Austria and the Archduke Otto, whose claim to the throne of the ancient Hapsburgs is one of the thorny problems of the present.

Pilgrims Jam Sidewalks.

Cannon roared in salute and church bells pealed as the legate of Pius XI left his train and passed under a triumphal arch to be hailed as "the ambassador of peace."

Throngs of pilgrims jammed sidewalks which were lined with mobile guards, and cheered the cardinal as he drove past in a carriage behind six magnificent horses.

The streets were riotous with flags, banners and spring flowers. The tricolor of France and the papal banner of white and gold predominated.

Showers of rain did not affect the religious ardor of the crowds, to whom the cardinal brought the pontiff's order that "the Catholic universe for three days from sunrise to set, with a single voice and a single heart, lift ardent supplications for grace, peace and salvation."

The cardinal expressed hope that the prayers "will bring to a humanity plunged in anguish the grace and blessings of true peace."

The first mass was said by Cardinal Van Roey, Archbishop of Malines, and then the bishops and priests from distant dioceses took up the prayers.

Cardinal Pacelli appeared in the church beside the grotto where the papal bull was read accrediting him as the legate. The grotto itself was massed with flowers, sent from afar.

The pilgrimage is the second to the grotto within the year, for 80,000 war veterans of 19 nations prayed for peace there last September.

Pact Instructions Speeded by Soviet

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 25.—Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, after conferring with the council of people's commissars, tonight wired new instructions to the Soviet ambassador in Paris on the basis of which an early agreement as to the terms of the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact was expected.

While the contents of Litvinoff's message to Ambassador Vladimir Potemkin was not made public, it was learned he drafted the instructions after reporting to the council on the difficulties causing recent suspension of negotiations.

Church Press Is Subjugated As Hitler Pushes Dictatorship

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 25.—Nazi Germany moved today to eliminate the last vestiges of non-Nazi influence from the German press.

A new law, effective immediately, makes the entire church press, Catholic and Protestant, and all Jewish organs still existing directly subject to Nazi control.

The law, signed by Max Amann, president of the Reich press chamber and manager of the Nazi Party's publishing organization, gives owners and publishers three to six months' grace to bring their publications into line with the new requirements—if they can.

Salient features of the legislation are:

1. No newspaper henceforth may serve interests other than those of the Nazi state.

2. No newspaper may be subsidized by any outside interests.

3. Publishers must prove their Aryan ancestry as far back as the year 1800, although this point may not be insisted upon "unless definite indications point to the contrary" if documentary proof is unavailable. Like provisions apply to boards of directors of publishing houses.

Still another law warned German newspapermen that the Nazis intend to clean house, especially among provincial newspapers, July 31 in order to "create sound competition."

"If several publishers can not reach the necessary circulation to keep their papers running," this legislation provided, "one or several publishing companies can be closed * * * to grant sound business conditions."

Nazi supervision already has forced out of business most organs showing the slightest leanings toward independence.

An explanatory statement accompanying the legislation lays down the principle that newspapers under Nazism must not be operated for profit "as under the corrupt old regime," but must serve the interest of the country alone.

Slayer of Parents

Boy, 20, Admits Killing Parents For Insurance

'Revenge' Also a Motive in Death of Texas Judge and His Wife.

By the Associated Press.

Austin, Tex., April 25.—Authorities announced tonight that if Howard Pierson, 20, is sane they will ask death in the electric chair for him as the confessed slayer of his father, a State Supreme Court justice, and his mother.

"If we determine he is sane, we will prosecute him as hard as we can," said James P. Hart, district attorney.

Hart witnessed the signing by Pierson, sobbing and broken, of a confession that he shot his father, William A. Pierson, associate justice, and Mrs. Pierson in a desolate cedar brake late yesterday.

Letter Praising Son.

"I wanted to go to school and become a great scientist, but father said he couldn't send me," he told a cousin, Walter Pierson.

"I hope you don't think I am a cold-blooded murderer. I'm not. I don't know why I did it."

Hart withheld details of the written confession, but officers previously said that Pierson orally gave as motives a desire for $17,000 in insurance money and "revenge."

In an inside pocket of young Pierson's coat, police reported finding a recommendation, full of praise, written by his father in an effort to get his son a job with an oil company.

Dr. Joe Wooten, family physician and old friend of the Piersons, expressed the opinion Pierson undoubtedly was suffering from dementia praecox.

In his confession Pierson said he left the Gulf Coast last Saturday. Driving 100 miles out of his way, he purchased a .38-caliber revolver in Galveston, then came to Austin.

Dr. Wooten said Pierson told him he "went out before noon and

Silver Soars; May Hit High Of 90c Today

World Price Rises to 77c, an Increase of 5⅜c in Day.

Treasury Is Expected to Boost Newly-Mined Offering Again.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Another boost in the Treasury price for newly mined silver is expected to be announced momentarily as a result of yesterday's phenomenal jump of 5⅜ cents in the world price for the metal, bringing it to 77 cents an ounce, the highest in 15 years.

The 77-cent price quoted at New York was only 0.57 cents under the newly mined price of 77.57 announced Wednesday night by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr. The Administration has committed itself to bring about ultimately a world price of $1.29 an ounce for silver, either by purchases of the metal or by keeping the newly mined price ahead of the free market quotations.

To Keep Boosting Price.

The Treasury, it is understood, is ready to keep boosting the price of newly mined silver until $1.29 is reached, meanwhile buying moderate quantities of the white metal in the world market from time to time. It is possible the Treasury will increase its price today to 84.04 cents, or, if the world price surges up again today, to 90.51 cents an ounce.

Feverish speculative activity from Wall Street to the bazaars of the Far East was held responsible for the unprecedented overnight jump of 5⅜ cents an ounce in the price of silver bullion. Apparently foreign speculators are convinced that the Treasury will drive the price much higher and consequently are bidding only a fraction behind the United States Government.

Secretary Morgenthau late yesterday announced he contemplated no change in the Treasury silver price until this morning. It was thought that Treasury experts wished to determine to what extent silver markets would support the new price level without another "shot" from the Treasury.

As long as the belief remains widespread that the Treasury intends to push silver prices higher, the market will remain bullish, it is contended. Should the idea develop that the Treasury will slow down its operations, there is danger that a rush of speculators to take profits may send the price down.

Markets Surge Upward.

The upward surge of silver prices at London was quickly followed at New York and Montreal. Led by shares in mining companies, stocks on the New York market moved upward. The buying boom, reaching 1,693,000 shares—the second largest turnover for any day this year—sent prices up from $1 to $5 a share. Commodities, however, did not follow the upward surge, due to various factors.

Silver and copper mining shares enjoyed the largest price increases. It was computed that nine silver issues—six on the New York exchange and three on the curb—yesterday had added $25,941,900 to their market value—a sum sufficient to pay $1 an ounce for the entire output of American silver mines last year.

These nine stocks, it was further estimated, have increased in value $102,469,000 from their 1935 lows to yesterday's closing prices. The prices of these stocks from their lows for

Miss Earhart Considers Plan For Mexico City-N. Y. Solo Hop

She Writes That High Altitude May Balk Attempt at First Such Flight; Lauds Mexican Hospitality to "Itinerant Flier."

Miss Earhart, who flew solo from Los Angeles to Mexico City, 1,700 miles, last week, tells of her tentative plans for the first nonstop solo flight from the Mexican capital to New York, 2,075 miles, in the following article.

By Amelia Earhart.

Mexico City, April 25.—Mexico, officially and privately, has been overwhelmingly hospitable to an itinerant flier. Since dropping down at Valbuena Field on Saturday, my schedule has been pleasantly crowded with new and varying adventures.

Even in the midst of this welcome, however, I find myself planning my departure. Always there is much to be done in preparation for any flight.

Immediately on landing here I telegraphed to my technical adviser, Paul Mantz, at Los Angeles, to come and help check the equipment and plan the details of the take-off. Yesterday we went over the plane and, happily, found that the overheating which occurred in an early stage of my trip here did not injure my precious Wasp motor.

I intend to move the plane to a civilian field and there make the necessary adjustments and test flights in the next day or two. By Sunday I hope to take an aerial sightseeing trip over and around snow-topped Popocatepetl (17,543 feet). As my Lockheed is filled with fuel tanks to the exclusion of passengers, Mantz and Mr. Putnam (George Palmer Putnam, Miss Earhart's husband) will trail along in another plane and take pictures.

It happens that heretofore no one has flown nonstop from Mexico City to New York. The difficulty lies in the high altitude of Mexico City, whence it is difficult to get off in the thin air with the heavy load of gasoline required for such a hop. Whether I will attempt it I do not yet know.

"It is not the heat, it's the humidity," that standard American summertime saying, is transposed here, so that the blame for almost everything rests on the altitude. That is the alibi for anything that goes amiss at a height of a mile and a half. When visiting bull fighters, tenors or tennis players

Will Call On Governor to Commute Sentence of Doomed McGee.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 25.—Dark-eyed Mary McElroy, keeping her promise to the condemned man who kidnaped her for $30,000, will plead tomorrow for his life.

With her father, City Manager H. F. McElroy of Kansas City, the slender 26-year-old brunette will ask Gov. Guy B. Park of Missouri to commute Walter McGee's death sentence to life imprisonment.

McGee, sentenced to hang May 10, said two weeks ago Miss McElroy had promised to "do what she could" for him on one of several visits to his cell.

Miss McElroy divulged her plans today a short while after McGee, first kidnaper to be sentenced to death in the United States, had been denied a rehearing by Division No. 2 of the Missouri Supreme Court.

The word was carried to McGee—lolling carelessly-dressed and unshaven in the Jackson County (Kansas City) Jail—by the deputy on his death watch.

"She ought to be able to do some good," the heavy-browed kidnaper cried. "Her wishes ought to be law."

Another woman also made plans tonight for a further fight to save McGee from the gallows as his attorney, Miss Lillie Knight, said she would carry an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Tormented by thoughts of McGee's fate, Miss McElroy often has expressed her sympathy for the man who led the gang which kidnaped her two years ago.

Shortly after her release and before the capture of her abductors, Miss McElroy said she believed they "were not bad at heart" and she would "hate to see them sent to the penitentiary."

"I would fight to keep them from such a fate," she added.

Later she adopted a more an-

Mrs. Elmhirst Gives Up U.S. Citizen Status

Whitney Heiress, Born in D. C., Takes Step Due to Dual Tax.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 25.—Mrs. Dorothy Payne Whitney Elmhirst, sister-in-law of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and heiress to a share of the vast Whitney fortune, today renounced her American citizenship.

Mrs. Elmhirst, who is descended from a family which came to this country in the seventeenth century and whose ascestors fought in the Revolution and helped frame the Constitution, announced she did so "because of the burdens of dual citizenship." She is the wife of an Englishman, Leonard Knight Elmhirst.

On her paternal side, Mrs. Elmhirst is descended from John Whitney, who came to New England in 1635 with Sir Richard Saltonstall.

A statement given out in behalf of Mrs. Elmhirst by her attorneys said:

"Inasmuch as Mrs. Elmhirst is a British subject by operation of law she can not change her status in that respect. She feels that the burdens of dual citizenship are such that in fairness to her family she must give up the one which it is in her

Army Rebukes Col. McMullen; Trial Planned

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Committee chalked up its first major victory yesterday in an effort to have the War Department censure Army officers the committee charged with business misconduct.

In a short letter to Chairman McSwain (Democrat, South Carolina), Secretary Dern reported that Col. Joseph I. McMullen had been rebuked for "scandalous" misconduct in allegedly accepting legal fees from firms dealing with the Government and swinging business to a law firm in which a relative was employed.

Dern's action encouraged the committee to intensify its effofrts to have Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of air corps, censured for what it charges were irregularities in aviation equpment procurement.

Since the statute of limitations prevented court martial, Dern handed the McMullen case over to the Justice Department, which passed it along to Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, for "appropriate action."

Charges against both McMullen and Foulois were raised after a military sub-committee under Representative Rogers (Democrat, New

Story of 'Sin' Among U. S. Aids Dropped by House as Trivial

The controversy over whether the marriage clause of the economy act is encouraging companionate marriages among Government employes yesterday narrowed to a two-man debate as the House Civil Service Committee agreed to drop the issue.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government employes, and Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, continued to hurl verbal darts at each other, however.

Chairman Robert Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, was inclined to dismiss the charges as trivial, in that Babcock had stated he knew of only nine cases in which Government employes had decided to live together without benefit of marriage, for fear that one or the other might be dismissed.

"Nine such cases out of all these Government employes doesn't seem to be enough to get excited about," he said.

"I expect to propose that original appointments to Government jobs be limited to one to a family if the marriage clause should be repealed."

Babcock scoffed at Cochran's suggestion that he resign because he had slandered the women employes of the Government.

Ramspeck said that Babcock's testimony regarding the morals of Government employes had aroused several department heads who had rushed to him with the assurance that the employes under their supervision are observing the marital conventions.

Many Government employes, he added, have written to him in opposition to repeal of the marriage clause, as proposed by Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York.

Ramspeck said the committee has no intention of investigating the charges further and will not vote on the Celler bill until the hearings are printed.

New 'Progress Division' Adds Mystery as to President's Plan.

Word Is Awaited On Hopkins' Role

Will Be Important; Talk Over Radio Sunday by Executive.

Text of the announcement of the board—Page 3.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt late yesterday named Secretary Ickes chairman of an allotment board to determine the disposition of the $4,000,000,000 works relief fund.

At the same time, he added to the fog still surrounding his plans by including in the list of members of the new board an individual known as "the director of the progress division." Heretofore, no such division had been mentioned and no explanation was forthcoming.

In the list of the 22 members of the allotment board the name of Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, did not appear. An announcement today is expected to reveal Hopkins has been given an even bigger job.

In the list was "the director of relief," who, it was explained, will not be Hopkins, but some one appointed to have charge of direct relief and to work under Hopkins.

Conference Tonight.

At the same time, it was announced that a group of seven men who will have much to do with relief work will meet at the White House tonight in what was described as the first relief conference.

President Roosevelt will go on the air at 10 p. m. Sunday to explain his relief plans to the country.

Members of the allotment board, the persons who, with the President, will determine where the money is to be spent, are:

Secretary Ickes, chairman.
Secretary Wallace.
Secretary Perkins.
Frank C. Walker, chairman of the National Emergency Council and head of the newly formed Division of Applications and Information.
The director of the Progress Division (not yet named).
Admiral Christian J. Peoples, head of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, who is expected to be general purchasing agent for the works program.
D. W. Bell, acting director of the Bureau of the Budget.
Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of engineers of the Army.
Elwood Mead, commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation.
H. H. Bennett, director of soil erosion.
F. A. Silcox, chief of Forest Service.
Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work.
Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads. (It was explained that a representative of the Interstate Commerce Commission probably would work with MacDonald in connection with grade-elimination work.)
Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture and head of the new division of rural resettlement.
The director of rural electrification (not yet named).
The chief of the division of grade-crossing elimination (not yet named).
The director of relief (a newly created job, not yet filled).
Col. Horatio B. Hackett, chief of the Urban Housing Division of the PWA.
A representative of organized labor.
A representative of farm organizations.

President Asks Gift of Holmes Be Set Aside

Wants $250,000 Bequest Devoted to Use Worthy of Great Jurist.

President Roosevelt proposed to Congress in a special message yesterday that the $250,000 bequest of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes "be devoted to some purpose worthy of the great man who gave it."

He suggested that disposition of the fund be held up until a selected committee of Congress, acting with a committee of Justice Holmes' associates on the Supreme Court, can "evolve the wisest uses to which this noble bequest should be put."

Only Wednesday, the House Library Committee reported favorably a resolution to accept the Holmes bequest and use it to establish a memorial library on jurisprudence in the law department of the Congressional Library. Presumably Mr. Roosevelt prefers further consideration.

President Eulogizes Him.

The President's message eulogized the late justice's contribution to American jurisprudence.

The message follows:

"The Congress is aware that Mr. Justice Holmes bequeathed his residuary estate to the Government of his country. It is the gift of one who in war and peace devoted his life to its service. Clearly he thereby sought, with a generous emphasis, to mark the full measure of his faith in those principles of freedom and justice which the country was founded to preserve.

"I shall, I think, be interpreting aright the feeling of the country and the wishes of the Congress if I suggest that this striking gift be devoted to some purpose worthy of the great man who gave it. Mr. Justice Holmes was fond of saying that we live by symbols. Our fellow citizens of this generation would, I am confident, desire the Congress to translate this gift into a form that may serve as a permanent impuse for the maintenance of the deepest tradition that Mr. Justice Holmes embodied.

His Attitude Toward Law.

"That tradition was a faith in the creative possibilities of the law. For him law was an instrument of just relations between man and man. With an insight into its history that no American scholar has surpassed; with a capacity to mold ancient principles to present needs, unique in range and remarkable in prophetic power; with a grasp of its significance as the basis upon which the purposes of men are shaped, Mr. Justice Holmes sought to make the jurisprudence of the United States fulfill the great ends our Nation was established to accomplish. Our generation will not soon forget, as the learned the world over will long remember, his extraordinary achievements as judge, as historian, and as philosopher of the law.

"The Congress will, I am sure, agree that it is fitting to utilize this opportunity to remind those who will come after us of our sense of the eminence of Mr. Justice Holmes. In so doing we do not merely commemorate the distinction of an American to whom the whole world has paid tribute. We also mark for posterity our pride in his faith in American democracy, his confidence in the power of our legal institutions to realize, when rightly used, the highest American ideals. Posterity which learns the significance of a life such as that of Oliver Wendell Holmes, jr., draws inspiration from its understanding.

"I therefore commend to the Congress that the bequest of Mr. Justice Holmes be not covered into the general fund of the Traesury, but that it be set aside in a special fund at this time, and at a later date be devoted to purposes which will effectively promote the contributions which law can make to the national welfare. Once it is decided that the Holmes bequest be set apart for special use the precise object may await ample deliberation. A select committee of the Congress, acting in collaboration with a committee of the Supreme Court of the United States, will doubtless evolve the wisest uses to which this noble bequest should be put."

Jubilee Cost Hit By British Reds

Rule Called '25 Years of Robbing Workers.'

By the Associated Press.

London, April 25. — "Royal Squandermania" drew the ire of British Communists again today as King George approached the silver jubilee of his reign, May 6.

A manifesto issued by leaders of the "London first of May committee" termed the period "25 years of robbery of workers in which millions of our brothers have been slain, mutilated, gassed and tortured," while the Communist newspaper, Daily Worker, jibed at prices paid for vantage seats to view the jubilee procession.

Radicals meanwhile were busy organizing workers' rallies to demonstrate by voice and banner in view of the crowds which will line the procession route to St. Paul's Cathedral against the great cost to the state of the celebration.

Simultaneously the air ministry announced plans for an elaborate review of the Royal Air Force before King George at Mildenhall and Duxford in East Anglia July 6.

Between You and Me

Relief Program All Important; The Mystery of Robert Wood; Two-Thirds Rule Going.

By Raymond Clapper

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is feeding out the news of his works relief program in carefully spaced installments instead of in one big smash. He believes it will be more easily understood by the country if presented in sections. Sunday night he will make a radio fireside talk to summarize and explain the program.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt is taking greater care to see that the public understands this undertaking than he has with any other phase of his program except, perhaps, the bank holiday. That is an indication of the importance of the works relief program in his own mind. He can not permit it to fail. None of the measures thus far tried has measurably reduced unemployment or relief. PWA has been disappointing. NRA and AAA are subject to increasing criticism. Gold-price fixing was exposed as a mistaken means of increasing commodity prices. To repeat these failures with the works program would have a decidedly bad effect both upon the country and upon the Administration's political prestige next year.

The first essential is to be sure that there is adequate understanding by the country as to what is being attempted and the method. Significantly the first announcement brought to the front the calm, sure-footed personality of Frank C. Walker, a businessman not closely identified with previous experiments, although an Administration intimate. Equally significant is the emphasis which the President lays upon his own role. The quarter back is carrying the ball himself. Meantime he has built up curiosity as to what Harry Hopkins will do by making a mystery of it.

• • • • •

What has happened to Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck, who, it was announced some weeks ago, would be an advisory representative of business in the works relief set-up? Part of the new organization has been announced and the wheels have begun to turn, but Gen. Wood has not yet figured in it and is not even in town.

The most signficant sign of life on the Republican side is the announcement of Republican National Chairman Fletcher that John Hamilton, of Kansas, will join the committee's national staff and assist in organization work.

Hamilton, an aggressive young red-head, is Kansas national committeeman and general counsel of the national committee. He first became page one news last summer when he was the runner-up against Fletcher for the national chairmanship, a gesture of young Republicans who were irked at the domination of veteran Eastern leaders.

Supporters of Hamilton were recognized by his appointment as general counsel of the national committee, but he was not given the active role in party affairs that had been expected, was seldom called to Washington, and was left to work largely on his own. However, he continued to be active in his own territory and aided in the reelection of Gov. Landon of Kansas, one of the few Republican governors to live through two Roosevelt landslides.

Hamilton is a regular, a protege of the late Dave Mulvane of Kansas, and usually has been allied on the conservative side in Kansas primary battles, so that his appointment now is recognition of the younger generation of party workers rather than of any insurgency. He recently completed a survey trip to the West Coast and returned reporting a decline of administration strength. He was emphatic in urging upon party leaders in the East that the time had come to start Republican fireworks.

The selection has no connection with the potential presidential candidacy of Gov. Landon of Kansas, despite the suspicions yesterday among some rival aspirants that this was the case. Hamilton was one of the promoters of the forthcoming Midwest Republican rally, which also was regarded suspiciously as a Landon movement, but which originated quite independently of it.

Another thing which Mr. Roosevelt expects to do while making America over is to bury the two-thirds rule which has plagued Democratic nominating conventions for 100 years.

Democratic party managers are set to take this action at the national convention next year, when there will be no question about the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt.

Some zealous followers of Huey Long have dreamed of gathering up enough delegates behind the Kingfish to block Mr. Roosevelt's renomination under the two-thirds rule and they probably will regard any move against the two-thirds rule as an attempt to frustrate them. But they flatter themselves. The Administration does not attach that much importance to the Huey Long opposition.

The fact is that the Roosevelt forces at the last convention had an unpleasant experience with the two-thirds rule. They were certain of a majority of the delegates, but under this ancient rule they were menaced temporarily by an alliance of stray candidates who were playing for a deadlock. Roosevelt forces started a fight on the two-thirds rule right there. It proved so unpopular, that it was dropped.

However the Roosevelt forces, in control of the rules committee, brought out a proposal which was adopted by the convention. It recommended that the next national convention consider the question of changing the two-thirds rule to a simple majority requirement for nomination.

Raw cotton is coming in from Brazil! Yes, sir, raw cotton, while we are paying Southern farmers not to grow it.

Imports tripled last month. The Department of Agriculture admits it. In February 400 pounds came in and in March, these imports jumped to 1,200 pounds. Worse yet, the Government bought some of it. Last month the Agriculture Department brought in 20 pounds, almost 2 per cent of the imports, and is about to buy more. It is used for testing purposes in Government laboratories. In checking up on the remaining imports, the Government found that private brokers and others interested in cotton also were buying Brazilian cotton for testing. Practically all of the Brazilian imports are being used for testing or as samples.

Precautions reminiscent of wartime are taken whenever the Government Printing Office is preparing a revision of Army and Navy code books. Intelligence officers are detailed to watch every step in the process. Close surveillance is maintained over all employes having anything to do with the job. Copy is cut so that only a few key employes see the completed forms. Every sheet of paper in the pressroom must be accounted for. The Government Printing Office has an unimpeachable record in handling confidential material, but Army and Navy Intelligence men are personally responsible for safeguarding codes in their care and can not delegate this to another Government agency.

For a short time yesterday it looked as though Gov. Martin Davey of Ohio might have an opportunity to make good on his threat to arrest Harry Hopkins, relief administrator.

Davey filed criminal libel charges in Ohio, after Hopkins asserted that administration of relief funds in Ohio had been accompanied by corruption, and dared the relief administrator to come into the State.

Yesterday Hopkins announced he would go to Chicago to make a speech. A few hours later the trip was canceled because, it was stated, of the press of business here.

Memorial Is Held For Judge Green

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—The bench and bar of Anne Arundel County and the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Maryland held memorial services today for the late Judge Nicholas H. Green, associate justice of the circuit.

Addresses were delivered by former Judge Robert Moss and Attorneys James M. Munroe and Ridgely P. Melvin. Chief Judge Francis Neal Parke, of Westminster, and Associate Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., Howard County, were on the bench. Judge Parke responded in behalf of the court.

Gov. Nice is expected to appoint former Representative Linwood L. Clark, Republican, to Judge Green's seat. Mr. Clark opposed Judge Green at the late election.

Smith Assails Lynching Bill For Dixie Slur

By the Associated Press.

A day of sluggish Senate debate on the filibuster-beset antilynching bill rose spectacularly to an electric climax late yesterday with a shouted assertion by Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, that:

"This bill is aimed at the Southern States! A!"—his tone switched to sarcasm—"our barbarism and lack of civilization. The man who introduced it had a purpose. I know what it is and so do you."

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, one author of the bill, sat placidly nearby. He did not even look up. His co-author, Costigan, of Colorado, was not present.

Smith's outburst interrupted a speech by Bailey, of North Carolina, in which the theretofore thinly concealed threat of a filibuster was brought squarely into the open.

"This bill is not going to pass!" Bailey shouted at the dozen Senators in attendance. "We'll fight it out, as Gen. Grant said, if it takes all summer."

Anyone who wanted to charge him with condoning mob violence could do so, he continued, adding pointedly that they would not do so in his presence.

"The bill transcends race and sections," he said. "There is no necessity for it even if it were tolerable."

His speech and one by Connally, of Texas, together with a short address favoring the measure by Wagner, filled the day's entire session. Meanwhile the Southern opposition was busy behind the scenes.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, active 13 years ago in a filibuster against a similar measure, opportunely rushed the Administration compromise bonus bill into the Senate with the empty formaltiy of a "dummy report."

When the Senate is confronted with a choice between going on with the lynching argument and taking up the politically popular question of cashing the bonus, its decision, there was little doubt, would be in favor of the latter. On this the Southerners pinned their hopes of sidetracking the lynching measure.

Racial Commission Calls for Lynch Law

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 25.—A call for a Federal anti-lynch law came from the Inter-racial Commission here today.

Composed of 50 members from 11 States, the commission in its seventeenth annual meeting came out for a Federal law against lynching for the first time. The organization expressed itself as "disappointed" by the record of State and local officials in lynching cases.

The commission also gave its indorsement to the Bankhead farm-tenant bill now pending in Congress.

Lorton Man's Car Hits N. Y. Woman

Mrs. Ann Rosen Hurt on Road at Engleside.

Mrs. Ann Rosen, 25, of New York City, was critically injured yesterday when she was struck by an automobile while walking across the Washington-Richmond highway at Engleside, 8 miles south of Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Rosen, with her husband, Joseph Rosen, and Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Penzer, were traveling north on the highway when they decided to stop at Engleside. Mrs. Rosen, according to Deputy Sheriff George P. McCan, stepped from behind her husband's car and into the path of one driven by Norman Shepherd, jr., of Lorton.

She was taken to the Alexandria Hospital, where it was found both legs had been broken and she had suffered internal injuries.

Child's Skull Broken In Taxicab Accident

A 4-year-old child was critically injured last night when, police say, she ran into the side of a taxicab in the 600 block of A street southeast.

The victim of the accident is Florence B. Ammerman, 4, of 612 A street southeast. She is in Casualty Hospital with a fractured skull, internal injuries and lacerations. The child's mother, Mrs. Beulah Ammerman, saw her daughter injured. Police said the cab was being driven by Peter C. Taulelle, jr., 31, of the 1600 block of Seventeenth street northwest. He was not held.

Oil Worker Slays Wife, Officer, Self

Madill, Okla., April 25 (AP).—Bill Viers, 32-year-old oil field worker, shot and killed his estranged wife, Geneva, 22, and Chief of Police Homer Moss in a restaurant here tonight and then committed suicide with the same pistol.

In slaying Mrs. Viers, he kept a threat he had made several times against her life. Moss was killed when he attempted to intervene. Police had ordered Viers to stay out of town.

Socony-Vacuum Profits Rise.

New York, April 25.—A $1,575,835 increase in 1934 profits, as compared with the previous year, was today reported by Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., one of the largest units in the petroleum industry. Net income last year, the company's annual pamphlet report revealed, was $24,121,297, equal to 76 cents a common share, compared with $22,545,462, or 71 cents a share in 1933.

President Gives Charles Edison NIRB Vacancy

Membership Is Filled as Inventor's Son Succeeds Whiteside.

President Roosevelt yesterday completed the membership of the National Industrial Recovery Board with the appointment of Charles Edison, son of the late inventor, to serve until July 1. Mr. Edison will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Arthur D. Whiteside.

At the same time, there were reports in Administration quarters that Howard Sutherland, of West Virginia, shortly is to be named to some official post, perhaps as a Republican member of the Federal Tariff Commission. Mr. Sutherland, the father-in-law of "Bucky" Harris, manager of the Washington Nationals, is a former Senator and served as Alien Property Custodian from 1925 to 1933.

Mr. Whiteside's resignation was announced last month at the time Chairman S. Clay Williams quit the recovery administration. Subsequently, Donald R. Richberg, former chief counsel of the NRA, was named chairman of the board.

The appointment of Mr. Edison was anounced at the White House in the form of a telegram to the inventor's son. The telegram, in part, said.

"In conformity with your request you will not be asked to serve beyond July 1 and during this interim service you will be relieved so far as possible of your duties as State Director for the National Emergency Council for New Jersey. I appreciate very much your willingness to undertake this additional public service."

More Time Urged On Banker Loans

By the Associated Press.

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, told a Senate Banking sub-committee yesterday that executive officers of national banks had borrowed $93,743,000 directly and $43,487,000 indirectly from their banks in the last two years, but had reduced these liabilities by $33,272,000 and $13,206,000, respectively, by last December.

The present banking act prohibits such loans, but gives the borrowers until June 30 to liquidate them. O'Connor said in view of the large amount of unpaid obligations the provision in the new omnibus banking bill, on which hearings are being held, to extend the liquidating time limit to June 30, 1938, should be adopted.

Going into the question of National Banks, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, developed from O'Connor that 2,179 of the 5,467 National Banks had sold preferred stock amounting to $531,075,800, of which the RFC took all but $75,366,945. A total of 193 banks had retired $11,496,962 of this stock, O'Connor added.

Students to Observe Congress Six Weeks

Members of Congress will become guinea pigs in the prying hands of Colgate University students of political science next September, according to an announcement yesterday by the Public Administration Clearing House.

A limited number of superior third-year students will come here not for just a day, not for just a week-end, but for six months. Their studies will be under supervision of a faculty member.

"It is believed," says the announcement, "this will be the first time that a college has undertaken to send a group of students to Washington under one of its own instructors for intensive training in Government."

The students will meet not only Congress members but lobbyists as well. The executive departments also will be subjected to their critical observation. Latin-American specialists will make their working headquarters at the Pan-American Union and visit the embassies and legations of South and Central American countries.

Alleged Killer of 3 Caught as Woman

Gun Chase Drives Car Over Bank Into Creek.

By the Associated Press.

Madisonville, Tenn., April 25.—Wearing a woman's dress, hat, slippers and underclothing, Bill Lee, 23, sought since February on charges of slaying his grandparents and a friend, was captured today after an exciting 48-hour chase which ended near Murphy, N. C.

Lee's automobile, tires shot down by pursuing North Carolina officers, plunged over a 40-foot embankment into Hanging Dog Creek, 5 miles from Murphy. Lee and two youths riding in the car with him swam out and were taken into custody. Sheriff Hugh Webster returned Lee to jail here tonight. Lee was injured slightly when a bullet grazed his hip, Sheriff Webster said.

The youth's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Shaw, both about 60, and Matt Hensley, 65, were killed at the Shaw home near Tellico Plains the night of February 22. Shaw and Hensley were slain with a shotgun and Mrs. Shaw was clubbed to death with a gun stock.

Atlanta Paper, Long Friendly, Raps Talmadge

Georgia Governor Lashed for His 'Outbursts' in Editorial.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 25.—Georgia tonight was treated to one of its biggest political sensations as the Atlanta Constitution, his supporter in every State race, editorially condemned Gov. Talmadge for his attacks on President Roosevelt.

The editorial came directly after the return of Clark Howell, sr., editor and president of the Constitution, from attending newspaper meetings in New York.

It was during Mr. Howell's visit to the East that the Governor said President Roosevelt was a "radical in the extreme," that his renomination would be a "calamity" and predicted a third party for the 1936 general elections.

Aid Also Attacked.

The editorial, appearing on the streets in the early night editions, also flayed Commissioner of Agriculture Thomas M. Linder, for years Talmadge's right-hand man and, until his election as commissioner, the Governor's executive secretary.

The Constitution has been the supporter of Talmadge since the day, some ten years ago, he announced for commissioner of agriculture in opposition to J. J. Brown. Mr. Howell personally has been a friend of the Governor.

The editorial, captioned "Our Don Quixotes," said it was not surprising that the "hysterical outbursts" of Talmadge and Linder against the President and the Democratic Administration "are being universally condemned."

Lauds Roosevelt.

It said some of the experimental policies of the Administration may be subject to reasonable objection, "but taken as a whole the recovery program has brought about amazing change in the conditions existing when President Roosevelt assumed office."

Expressing the belief that the President is certain of renomination "without serious opposition and that he will be overwhelmingly re-elected," the editorial said:

"The Governor is serving no good purpose in his continued attacks on the Administration. They have served only to discredit Georgia and to fan the flames of Democratic opposition. Every outburst gives new hope to the leaders of what was, a few months ago, a practically defunct Republican Party."

Graham to Speak At 4-H Club Fete

Montgomery County Units Will Hold Banquet.

A. B. Graham, U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be the speaker at the tenth annual banquet of the Montgomery County 4-H clubs to be held Saturday at the Masonic Hall at Gaithersburg, Md. Roosevelt Picks Board to Allot Billions on Works; Ickes Is Head

Harris & Ewing Photos.

With plans for utilization of the huge works relief funds steadily going forward, truckloads of office furniture are being hauled to the headquarters of the National Emergency Council, where Frank C. Walker will administer the newly-formed Division of Applications and Information.

'Progress Division' Adds Mystery; Word Waited on Hopkins' Role.

Gen. Robert Wood, of Chicago, Secretary Roper announced some time ago that Gen. Wood, who is a member of the Advisory Council, would have a part in the works program. It was indicated he would have a place other than as a member of the allotment board.

Hopkins spent most of the afternoon at the White House, after a visit there of Secretary Ickes. The relief director canceled a trip to Chicago, where he had several speaking engagements.

Other than an indication that Hopkins still was slated to play a very important part in the works set-up, there was no hint as to what his job would be. It is possible he might be the head of the mysterious Progress Division, but there was no statement to that effect.

Those to Attend.

Attending the relief conference at the White House tonight will be Walker, Hopkins, Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission; Ickes, Secretary Morgenthau, Undersecretary Tugwell, and Charles West, former Ohio Representative, now with the Farm Credit Administration and President Roosevelt's contact man of the "Hill."

Kennedy, Morgenthau and West had not heretofore been in the relief picture. The only explanation of their presence in the list was that the President had invited them.

In setting up the works allotment division, the White House explained this division will receive the lists of projects sent to it from the division of applications and information "after the various projects have been studied and reported on by the agencies under which they fall."

On District Basis.

It was explained that before the allotment board gets the projects the estimates of cost will be checked, the length of time necessary for completion will be passed on, the percentage of direct labor will have been certified, the proportion of self-liquidating projects to the whole number will have been studied and the economic justification determined. The allotment board will then recommend projects to the President for his approval. Thus President Roosevelt will have the final word on where the money will go.

The projects will be allotted by districts, not by States or other political subdivisions. Hopkins has been working on formation of these districts and it is understood that this task is almost completed, although no announcement has been made.

Appointment of Secretary Ickes as head of the allotments board upset previous reports that Hopkins might get the job. With President Roosevelt having the last word, however, the chairmanship of this board assumes less importance.

Meanwhile, even more confusing than the series of White House announcements was the preliminary work of setting up the new Division of Applications and Information and the new Division of Rural Resettlement. Adding to the confusion was an army of job seekers attracted by the fact that the works program will mean thousands of new Government employes. At the Applications and Information office it was estimated 1,000 applications had been received yesterday. At the Agriculture Department, where the rural resettlement offices will be located, 1,500 job hunters had appeared.

Lists Checked.

The Civil Service Commission was checking its lists pursuant to a request of the Treasury Department for 1,000 more workers to write checks and handle the pay roll, which is expected to include 3,500,000 persons.

At the National Emergency Council offices in the Commercial National Bank Building many of the workers were being moved to other office buildings to make room for the new DAI. No new employes were being hired, pending more certain plans. It already was becoming obvious, however, that the building will not be adequate to house the new organization.

Even more confusion was brought about by a deluge of requests for allotments, coming in by mail, telephone and telegraph from all over the country. Usually they were accompanied by the question:

"How do we go about getting an allotment?"

To which was made the invariable reply:

"We don't yet know."

The general scheme for making allotments has been revealed through the series of White House allotments, but the actual mechanics of the huge undertaking were still a mystery.

No forms have been provided for making applications.

Question on Method.

There is a question of whether engineers and legal experts will work through their own existing departments or directly under the Walker organization.

No one seemed to know whether projects already thoroughly examined and approved by the PWA—there are about $100,000,000 worth of them—will have to go to Walker for a second examination and approval.

Early in the afternoon Secretary Ickes said he did not know whether he was expected to turn over the Walker all the applications he has on file—some approved, some in the process of investigation, but most of them almost untouched. There are 136,000 such applications. Their mere physical bulk would almost fill the present emergency council offices.

Later, after his visit to the White House, Ickes said he expected to turn these applications over to Walker. He said he would be "glad to get rid of them."

Thus Ickes will be relieved of the job of investigating applications. He will have one vote out of 22 in recommending allotments to the President. He is expected to continue supervision over PWA work already begun and over the urban housing division.

Tugwell Silent.

Tugwell refused to throw any light on his plans for administering the new Rural Resettlement Division, which will include subsistence homesteads and other projects involving rural populations. He conferred with the President yesterday, but insisted he had talked about the forest shelter belt.

The Urban Housing Division is in shape to go ahead rapidly. It has 39 approved projects to cost $200,000,000, and 77 other projects under consideration. Thus far it has let two contracts for Federal housing and seven for non-Federal housing projects.

Referring to President Roosevelt's statement Wednesday that he opposed allotting money for projects requiring more than a year for completion, Secretary Ickes suggested money could be allotted for the first year's work on such construction and that "we could trust to the future for the rest."

Trade Gain Predicted.

While President Roosevelt was announcing his plans the American Federation of Labor, in its monthly survey of business, was predicting a business pick-up, but not one of sufficient size to cut unemployment appreciably. It estimated that 11,500,000 persons were unemployed and that 22,000,000 were on relief.

The federation assailed "chamber of commerce, business and financial interests" for attempts to keep down relief costs. These groups, it contended, had "no real understanding of the human problem back of relief."

Terming present relief budgets wholly inadequate, the federation said "at least 1,500,000 American children are being undernourished, permanently handicapped for life." It continued:

Text of Roosevelt's Announcement Setting Up Works Allotment Board

Following is the text of the White House statement announcing appointment of the allotment board to designate expenditures under the $4,000,000,000 works program:

On Tuesday, the President announced the organization of a Division of Applications and Information to act as a general clearing house for projects under the $4,000,000,000 work relief bill. On Wednesday, the President announced that by far the greater part of the administration of the actual work to be undertaken would be under the 40 or 50 existing Government agencies, which now and for many years have been conducting similar work. A careful study of the several hundred different types of work shows that it will be necessary to set up only three agencies, one in charge of grade crossings, one in charge of rural electrification and one to consolidate various kinds of work relating to rural resettlement.

Today the President announces the organization of a third step—the appointment of a Works Allotment Division. This division will receive the lists of projects sent to it from the Division of Applications and Information after the various projects have been studied and reported on by the agencies under which they fall. The Works Allotment Division will, therefore, receive projects large and small in final shape. In other words, the estimates of cost will have been checked, the length of time necessary for completion will have been passed on, the number of persons from the relief rolls who can be employed in each vicinity or, to put it another way, the percentage of direct labor will have to be certified; the proportion of self-liquidating projects to the whole number will have been studied and the economic justification determined. With all this information in its possession, the Works Allotment Division will be able to recommend the projects to the President by districts, for his approval.

In order that all points of view in making the allotment recommendation may be obtained, the works allotment division will meet in round table conference at least once a week for the next few months and will be composed of a large number of persons.

(Here was inserted a list of members of the allotment division.)

The Secretary of the Interior will act as chairman of this works allotment division.

Under the law, the actual allocation of amounts to be expended under the work-relief bill must be made by the President. The President will, therefore, receive the recommendations from the works allotment division before allocations are made by him. After such allocations have been made they will be transmitted to the many Government agencies already referred to, which will be charged with the prosecution of the work.

License Renewed Despite Protests

In spite of protests from a delegation of citizens, the Prince Georges County liquor license commissioners yesterday renewed the "off-sale" liquor license of Abraham M. Kaufman, of Bradbury Heights, Md.

The commissioners, meeting at Upper Marlboro, also heard a delegation opposing renewal of a license for Meadow Brook Inn, on the Livingston road, near Oxon Hill, Md.

An "on-sale" beer license has been at the Meadow Brook Inn by John E. Jarolman. No application for renewal, however, has been made yet.

Ickes Tired? No! He Just Wants Wallace Jobs

Hold on! This doesn't mean that he is tired of the job—not by several jugfuls of Virgin Island rum that repose unopened in a corner of his office.

But he doesn't like the title itself.

"It doesn't mean anything," he remarked yesterday.

That is one of the reasons, he said, for a bill introduced by Senator James Hamilton Lewis to change the name of the job to Secretary of Conservation and Works.

But the plot goes deeper than that, much deeper.

The bill permits the President to shift functions out of the Interior Department and to give it other jobs that now are in other departments or in no department at all.

Wants Jobs Permanent.

For instance, Ickes believes that the PWA should be a part of the Interior—beg pardon, Conservation and Works—Department. Ickes is head of the PWA, but that is an entirely separate job from being Secretary of the Interior. The PWA was intended as a temporary set-up—but Ickes thinks it should be permanent. Putting it in a regularly constituted department would go a long way to assure such permanence. Few things started in a department ever are abandoned.

Furthermore, Ickes, who also is oil administrator, a job that has nothing to do with being Secretary of the Interior, thinks the oil administration should become a part of his department—also tending to insure permanency.

Included also, Ickes believes, should be the Government's conservation work. Maybe the Office of Education should be transferred to the Labor Department.

Flare-up in the Offing.

The conservation proposal is the one that is likely to cause a flare-up. Ickes made such a suggestion in a speech some time ago. Secretary Wallace didn't like it and said so.

The Agriculture Department has charge of a lot of conservation work.

Secretary Wallace, and particularly Undersecretary Tugwell, think so, too. That's why they want to hang onto it.

The argument is not going on in public this time, however. There's a reason. It is reliably reported that the bill was sent up from the White House.

Wallace "On the Spot."

Secretary Wallace can't very well object to a White House bill—not in public.

Incidentally, Senator Lewis dropped around at the White House yesterday and talked with the President about the measure.

Then there is another proposal in which Ickes is much interested. It would create the job of undersecretary of Interior. But there is considerable opposition in Congress. Some members feel that Ickes doesn't treat them with respect due their positions.

But Ickes also has his friends on the Hill. Said Representative Taylor of Colorado, acting Democratic floor leader:

"The Lord knows Ickes has enough work to justify an undersecretary. Why, he's got a bigger job than any Secretary of the Interior ever had. Some folks in the House might want to hit at him, but I think we'll give him the undersecretary."

Woodrum Cries "Stupid."

"First, I'm against increasing the size of bureaucratic agencies. That is my basic objection. I think that Ickes' record is all right but I think he has shown an utterly stupid attitude toward members of Congress. I'm going to fight as hard as I can against that new job."

The proposal comes up in the House next week. It is included in the Interior Department appropriation bill.

Roosevelt Kids Lewis On Close of Congress

In semi-serious vein, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, yesterday reported after a conference at the White House that President Roosevelt had told him Congress should get through by May 6.

"I told him, 'Boss, more likely August 6,'" the Senator confided. "He said, 'Oh, Jim, you have gotten sour. Have you lost confidence in yourself as a whip-cracker?'"

Senator Lewis is Democratic whip of the upper House. He said he had called at the White House to talk appointments, but that the President is more anxious to get legislation enacted into law to end business uncertainty.

Mooney Gains House Victory In California

Commutation of Life Sentence to Time Served Is Voted, 51 to 28.

By the United Press.

Sacramento, Calif., April 25.—The Assembly of the California Legislature today passed, by a vote of 51 to 28, a resolution asking Gov. Frank F. Merriam to commute the life sentences of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings.

The final vote was announced after all members of the House had been called to vote on the measure.

The resolution was introduced by Assemblyman James F. Brennan, San Francisco, who personally prosecuted Billings and was an assistant district attorney under Charles M. Fickert at the time of the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing.

It asked that sentences of the two men be commuted to time served for their alleged participation in the affair.

Witnesses who testified against Billings and Mooney "have shown a degree of unreliability" and most of them since have made statements inconsistent with their sworn testimony, resulting in a wide divergence of opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the two defendants," the resolution said.

Assemblyman Charles Fisher, Oakland, one of the 40 persons injured in the bombing—10 were killed—was one of the most vigorous opponents of the resolution as the assembly discussed it.

Billings recently was denied an application for a parole. Mooney, still fighting in the courts to obtain a pardon, now has a habeas corpus action before State courts. Judge Edward Butler, of Marin County, denied the writ at a hearing, but Mooney's attorneys planned to carry the action to the State supreme court, then to the United States Supreme Court.

The resolution was passed after comparatively brief debate. Brennan pointed out that commutation of the sentence of the two men, who have served 19 years, offered "the only practical way of relieving a problem of social welfare."

Assemblyman Claude Minare, Fresno, gave notice he would ask reconsideration of the vote by which the resolution was adopted.

Gov. Merriam declined to comment on the resolution.

French Export Ban Hampers Nazi Campaign

Shipping of Material From Which Aluminum Is Made Is Forbidden.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 25.—A French decision to forbid exports of bauxite, raw material from which aluminum is made, served today to emphasize difficulties the Nazis are having in their efforts for military self-sufficiency.

Determined to bring Germany back to the level of Europe's great powers, Adolf Hitler's aggressive administration is finding the marshaling of war materials more troublesome than the mobilization of men.

France's ban on bauxite shipments, newspapers and experts pointed out, must seriously hamper the self-sufficiency program since Germany, producing no bauxite herself, has been buying half her supply of that material from France.

A further difficulty, it was asserted, is that Germany has devised an elaborate scheme for substituting aluminum for hundreds of more expensive metals.

The Boersen Zeitung charged considerations other than the labor market obviously prompted the French embargo which it termed another defense measure on the part of France.

So expensive is the Nazi drive for military self-sufficiency started two years ago as an emergency move, but now a long-range policy dictated by military expediency—that experts foresee the abandonment or modification of some of its outstanding features.

The Reich's dependence on foreign raw products and initial successes in the campaign are shown by figures revealing that in 1934 she imported 2,600,000,000 marks worth of raw materials from abroad. In 1933 such commodities costing nearly 6,000,000,000 marks were used in the production of 40,000,000,000 marks worth of industrial goods. (The mark is currently quoted at about 40 cents).

The Nazi task now is to reduce still further imports from abroad so that Germany, in case of war, can get along for an indefinite period without importing raw materials.

Hundreds Fight Wide Forest Fire

Delaware Blaze Sweeps 50 Acres Near Seaford.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Seaford, Del., April 25.—Members of the Seaford and Blades fire companies, five truck loads of Civilian Conservation Corps men, summoned from Camp Redden, Sussex County, by William S. Taber, State forester, scores of country and townspeople fought a forest fire this afternoon in Broad Creek Hundred. The flames burned over ten acres of timber lands on the farm of William J. Whaley and 40 acres on the farm of Charles Hastings before it was gotten under control. The blaze is believed to have been started by a brush fire on the farm of Whaley. The loss totals thousands of dollars.

Then, last February—"to get away from it all"—Miss McElroy fled her luxurious home. She was found next day aboard a Chicago-bound bus at Normal, Ill. "I must have gone haywire," she said.

Miss McElroy, held 29 hours in a dungeon-like basement near Kansas City, was unharmed when she was released May 28, 1933, after her father had paid $30,000 ransom. Most of the money was recovered.

One of the kidnapers, Clarence Stevens, never has been caught. Walter McGee's brother, George, received life. The other member of the gang, Clarence Click, received eight years.

Silver May Reach 90c Price Today

the year have increased between 7 and 33 points.

Meanwhile the sweeping increase in silver prices—approximately 12½ cents in the last two weeks—made more critical the Chinese economic situation. Chinese Minister of Finance H. H. Kung last night appealed to the people of his country to exert every effort to "conserve the nation's money."

He appealed to the patriotism of the Chinese to spurn the profits which might be obtained by sending silver out of the country and not to participate in any transactions having to do with export of the metal. The Associated Press reported that business and financial circles in Shanghai expressed resentment against this Government's action.

Chinese Minister Sao-ke Alfred Sze yesterday called on Secretary of State Cordell Hull regarding a matter other than silver, but incidentally referred to the added economic difficulties of his country as a result of this Government's silver program, State Department attaches asserted.

Leaving the department, Dr. Sze told interviewers that the sharp increase in silver prices was plunging China deeper into deflation. His government last fall formally protested in a series of notes against the American sliver-purchase program.

The American silver operations, likewise, were disturbing the monetary system of Mexico. The dollar in relation to Mexican currency fell from 3.60 pesos to 3.50 pesos. At the new silver price it had become profitable to melt down Mexican coins and sell them as bullion. The Mexican government, as a result, may reduce the silver content of its money.

The rise in silver prices, however, will benefit Mexico, a silver-producing country, just as it will bring prosperity to the silver mine owners and communities in this country. At the present prices silver production is expected to increase sharply within the next few months, although for the present domestic producers may slow down operations in anticipation of higher prices in the next month or so.

Davis Claims Wheat Victory Over McCarl

provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and you as the responsible administrative official having determined adjustment of contracts to be necessary to a carrying out of the agricultural adjustment program adopted thereunder and to avoid a serious wheat shortage, this office is not requited to object thereto if carried out as outlined in your submission."

The modified program is expected to result in planting of an additional 900,000 to 2,300,000 acres of wheat and an increased production of 10,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels, depending upon weather conditions.

The comptroller's opinion heartened New Dealists who are still fearful that certain projects under the $4,000,000,000 works program may not be approved. Those about which some doubt has been raised include purchase of submarginal land and rural rehabilitation. It was learned at the comptroller's office that no ruling has yet been asked on any part of the works program outlined by the President.

Swanson Avoids Issue.

Meantime, it became known that the Navy Department so far has failed to go through with the threat of Secretary Claude A. Swanson, backed up by the President, to violate an adverse decision of McCarl on the question of paying transportation for dependents of officers called home from distant posts for retirement.

The Secretary announced that such payments would be made, the McCarl ruling to the contrary notwithstanding, but no record of any payments of this character has reached the General Accounting Office.

Instead, the Navy Department has had a clause inserted in the pending Navy bill authorizing such payments in the future and making them retroactive to July 1 last. This solution to a long controversy was suggested by McCarl 10 years ago, associates said.

Favors AAA Amendments.

Meanwhile, a prediction that the House "later in the session" would pass the latest version of amendments to the agricultural adjustment act was made yesterday by Chairman Jones of the agriculture committee.

Jones said there was little opposition to the revamped measure in committee as contrasted with sharp protests by several members at original form of the resolution.

The chairman added his committee would file a favorable report in a few days. Another version of the amendments was reported several weeks ago, only to be recalled almost overnight.

"As it now stands," Jones said, "the licensing clause probably won't encounter any great difficulties."

He interpreted the revised measure's provisions for licensing of processors, associations of producers and other dealing in farm commodities as much less stringent than the original bill. He emphasized producers and retailers, as such, would not be subject to licenses.

Chicago's 600,000 OnAid FaceHunger

Relief Till Empty; County, State Wait on U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 25.—Six hundred thousand relief clients in Cook County—a population larger than several of the States—tonight faced complete cessation of all relief activities as the local branch of the Illinois emergency relief commission announced its funds have been drained.

"We are insolvent, as of tonight," said Leo M. Lyons, Cook County administrator for the commission.

Work projects terminated abruptly, throwing 55,000 commission-employed men and women off the pay rolls, and direct relief was to end tomorrow.

Lyons' announcement came as the Illinois relief funds situation involving the Federal Government, the State Legislature and the Cook County board remained virtually deadlocked.

Vinson Denies U.S. Plans Navy Building Race

Reassures House as Vote Nears on Bill; McLeod Assails Budget.

America has no intention of entering a building race with other powers, the House was assured yesterday as a vote appeared imminent on the Navy appropriation bill.

The other high point of the debate came when Representative McLeod, ranking Republican on the Appropriations sub-committee in charge of the measure, assailed the Administration for drafting what he termed a "stage prop budget."

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the Naval Affairs Committee, in defending the $450,000,000 appropriation, discounted the prospects of competitive shipbuilding.

"There will be no naval race," he promised, "unless some country goes beond the ratio fixed by the Washington and London treaties, and this country does not propose to go beyond these ratios."

Denies Beirmann Contention.

"The gentleman," interrupted Representative Beirmann (Democrat), Iowa, "says there will be no naval race. Does he mean to say that the United States, in increasing its expenditure $172,000,000 over last year for the Navy, will not encourage a naval race in the world?"

"It will not," Vinson responded. "It is already limited by the treaty. It may cost more in this country to build ships than it does in England or Japan and the money question is not one that brings about a naval race."

McLeod charged that in numerous instances Federal funds ostensibly intended for emergency purposes were used for regular operating expenses of the Government.

"This practice of attempting to disguise normal Government expenditures by labeling them 'emergency,'" he protested, "is chiseling away at the very elements of enlightenment and honesty upon which all good government depends.

"This rank deception can not be excused by saying that these expenditures were necessary. That is not the issue.

People Misled, He Charges.

"The point is that the people have been grossly misled by the Administration into believing that funds were being spent for emergency projects when the question of emergency was not even involved. The unpalatable fact remains that a dishonest protest has been resorted to for the sake of concealing the true operating expenses of the Government."

"The present Administration," he said, "has shown by more ways than one that it is adept at borrowing pages from the book of filmdom. Imitation and adaptation of cinema studio technique to Government routine began with the age-old practice of hiring professional ballyhoo artists.

"The latest innovation is the stage prop budget. For many years the country managed to get along with one budget. Those days passed with the inauguration of the double budget system."

2 Virginia Counties Boost Tax Levies

Loudoun and Brunswick Order Higher Rates.

By the Associated Press.

Increases in tax levies for the coming fiscal year were reported yesterday by two Virginia counties, Loudoun and Brunswick.

The higher rates were ordered by supervisors assembled at Leesburg and Lawrenceville, respectively, despite protests from taxpayers at the meetings against any increase.

The Loudoun rate, which was raised from 80 to 90 cents per $100 assessed valuation, is expected to return $132,000, of which $85,000 will be appropriated to schools. A $1 levy was proposed, but energetically fought by taxpayers.

The Brunswick supervisors, faced on one hand by a $10,000 school deficit and the need of raising funds for a nine-month term and on the other hand by the protests of a large assembly of taxpayers, struck a compromise of 75 cents on the new rate. It had been proposed to increase the levy from 60 to 90 cents.

Reich, Britain, Trade Troops; Normalcy Seen

No Significance Attached to Revived Exchange of Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 25.—German, British and American military circles here tonight agreed that Germany's and Great Britain's decision to resume exchanging officers represents mere "return to normalcy."

"A routine matter," and "an attempt to cement friendlier relations," were other phases employed in discussion of the move, disclosed today.

All quarters pointed out that the custom of exchanging officers was common to many countries, the United States and Japan being cited as examples, with the purpose of giving each opportunity to observe military practices and improvements of the other.

One foreign military observer, who said he saw "no deep political significance in the move," asserted:

"It is very likely both the British and German armies will gain a great deal in the exchange—each will get a line on what the other is doing. Surely Germany stands to get valuable pointers for her rebuilt army."

Authoritative quarters, meanwhile, revealed that the Reich would like to exchange officers with other nations, especially Japan. The custom has not been observed since the war, it was explained, because Germany has not been armed officially.

A news bureau statement that German artillery, infantry and cavalry officers already are in England, while British officers are expected here shortly, was widely displayed in Berlin newspapers. One propaganda minister spokesman said "I am astonished the newspapers are making so much of it" since "it is an old custom."

The foreign observer said resumption of officer exchange "is certainly a sign of better feeling and maybe it is a straw in the wind."

"It seems apparent Germany wants British friendship badly," he commented, "and perhaps this is an attempt to demonstrate openly just what kind of army Germany has."

Five Fire Groups Fight Brush Blaze

Damage at Country Club Is Prevented.

Volunteer firemen from the five Montgomery County departments were called out yesterday to battle a brush fire in heavy woods just north of the fashionable Columbia Country Club in Chevy Chase, Md.

Several hundred acres were in flames in the middle of the afternoon as a steady wind fanned the blaze into what threatened to assume formidable proportions. Bethesda and Chevy Chase fire companies responded to the alarm and later volunteers were summoned from Kensington, Silver Spring and Takoma Park. The fire was prevented from spreading to nearby dwellings and the club property.

Another brush fire at Flower and Jackson avenues in Takoma Park kept the Takoma firemen busy for two hours in the late afternoon. The fire was finally quenched with the assistance of the Silver Spring Department. A brush fire also was fought at Second and Cockerill avenues in Takoma Park. Little damage was reported.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, April 25.—A history of Hopewell Meeting, the oldest congregation of Friends in this section, will be published this summer in connection with the 200th anniversary celebration, it was announced today. Dr. John W. Wayland, of Harrisonburg, is in charge of the preparation of the history. He is being assisted by a large committee of members of the Hopewell Meeting.

Relief Workers Begin 2 Malaria Projects

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., April 25.—Two malaria projects have been initiated in Pittsylvania County by the Emergency Relief Administration. The marshlands contiguous to Shockoe Creek and Sandy Creek are being irrigated and drained by laborers.

More than 500 persons are now on relief work in Pittsylvania County. This, according to W. B. Sours, projects officer, virtually takes care of all of the county's needy employables.

Pope's Legate Leads Concerted Plea For Peace and Dawn of Better Times

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, April 25.—The Papal bull which Pope Pius commissioned Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli to proclaim at Lourdes, France, tonight to open ceremonies which will bring to an end the holy year, contains a prayer for peace.

The text of the apostolic letter which named Cardinal Pacelli the Papal Legate at Lourdes read:

"To our dear son, Eugenio Pacelli, cardinal priest of the Holy Roman Church, titulary of SS. John and Paul, secretary of state, chamberlain of the Holy Roman Church.

"Pius, Eleventh, Pope.

"To our dear son, greetings and apostolic benediction.

"With the happy waning of holy year we are near the days fixed for expiatory supplications which are to take place solemnly at Lourdes, and which we publicly and officially prescribed last January by our letter 'Quod Tam Alacri.'

"Soon, consequently, to the miraculous rock of Massabielle will come either in their bodily presence or in spirit all those who here below, of every race and every nation, truly carry the name of Christians; yes, let us repeat it, all those who know that the blood of the Divine Redeemer like dew has bathed their souls, will turn their thoughts and their hearts toward the Immaculate Mother of Sorrow and, through her august and powerful and maternal intercession, will make to the Father of Mercies a concerted plea that blessed peace may return to poor humanity and that finally the dawn of better times may radiantly announce itself.

"In these ceaseless prayers, as we confirmed in the course of the recent consistory, we wish, above all, to participate in a fashion and for a reason very special and we desire to be represented there by our legate.

"And, in order that our participation and our presence at these solemnities may appear with greater clearness, in order that they may be felt more closely and more profoundly by all of those who will come to Lourdes, to you, our dear son who shares so fully our solicitude for all of the churches and whose daily labors mark you as such in all truth, we grant very willingly that you may be sent with the very honorable mission of "legatus a latere nostro" and may be saluted with this title, not doubting an instant that this grace will be extremely pleasing to you as well as to all of those who will be present at the ceremonies.

"By the present letter, our dear son, we thus choose you and proclaim you as our legate, with the mission to preside at the solemnities of the triduum of Lourdes, just as though we were doing it in person, in our own name and with our authority.

"We have, moreover, the certainty that by reason of the zeal and tenderness which marks your piety and your worship of the divine mother, by reason of the authority which you enjoy at the Holy See, of the prestige of your cardinalate, and by reason of your intelligence and your eloquence which distinguish you in the eyes of all, just as in your recent embassy to the Buenos Aires eucharistic congress, the triumph of which still fills the entire world, you will serve in the course of this holy pilgrimage of penitence as an example and an edification to all.

"And, in order that these coming solemnities may carry to all Christians a more abundant harvest of fruits, we grant you, with a full heart, the power to give, on the day fixed at the end of the holy sacrifice, the benediction in our name to all those present in offering to them for their sins full indulgence, to be obtained according to the prescription of the church.

"Meanwhile, after having prayed God that all may go well, as a sign of farewell and in testimony of our paternal benevolence, receive, dear son, the apostolic benediction which we grant with a full heart to you, very dear son, and to all those who will be present at these solemnities.

"Given at Rome, at St. Peter's, April 12, during the festival of our Lady of the Seven Sorrows, in the year 1935, the fourteenth of our pontificate.

2 Law Experts Clash on Plan For Neutrality

U.S. Policy Called Outworn by Dr. Brown Here at Society's Session.

Clashing viewpoints over the neutrality policy which this Government should pursue were presented last night in two addresses before the opening session of the three-day annual meeting of the American Society of International Law.

Dr. James Brown Scott, president of the society, in his address opening its twenty-ninth annual meeting, declared that the neutrality policy to which this country has been committed in the past, involving it in two wars, was "outworn." He urged adoption of a new policy which should have as its base insistence on neutral duties rather than neutral rights.

Closely following the theme of his recent report on neutrality for the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Dr. Scott proposed that this Government drastically restrict the right of its citizens to profit, through trade and financial undertakings, from a war abroad.

Challenges Warren Ideas.

Fred K. Nielsen, solicitor of the State Department from 1920 to 1922, speaking on "The Future of Belligerent Rights on the Sea," differed fundamentally with Dr. Scott's contentions. He maintained that instead of restricting the trading rights of neutrals, steps should be taken to limit further the rights of belligerent nations on the seas. He likewise challenged some of the contentions made in behalf of a new neutrality program by Charles Warren, former Attorney General.

Nielsen's thesis was that "we are a powerful Government now, capable at all times of effectively asserting legal rights and of meeting the correlative requirement of complying with duties defined by international law." He termed proposals for forgoing neutral rights as "pitiable alternatives."

A general discussion of the two addresses was led by Frederic R. Coudert, international lawyer; Professor Edwin M. Borchard of the Yale Law school and Dr. Charles G. Fenwick, professor of political science at Bryn Mawr.

The International Law Society has dedicated its annual meeting to a discussion of all aspects of the neutrality question, a topic receiving widespread attention both on Capitol Hill and throughout the country. Former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson will address the society tonight on "Neutrality and the Kellogg Pact."

Both of last night's speakers have national reputations as international lawyers. Both have served in the State Department, Dr. Scott having been solicitor of that department from 1906 to 1910 and from 1914 to 1917 he served as chairman of the joint State and Navy Neutrality Board. Through his writings on international jurisprudence Dr. Scott has a world-wide following.

Traffic Forbidden.

At the outset of his address Dr. Scott reminded his audience that the private manufacture and traffic in arms and weapons for fighting were forbidden as far back as the sixth century under the Emperor Justinian. Subsequently he urged restricting the manufacture of arms and munitions to Government-owned agencies in this country.

Conceding there is a generally recognized law of neutrality, Dr. Scott contended that it was "an outworn law—adequate to the circumstances which once existed, but which no longer obtain." Law, he added, should change with circumstances, "the circumstances in the case of neutrality being that, terrible as have been the wars of our century, those of tomorrow will be wars in which the entire populations of the belligerents will be directly engaged or affected, instead of being only remotely touched by war—as was the case when the existing law of neutrality came into being."

This country's neutrality policy, formulated at the Nation's birth, was based on the idea of "the fullest possible trade for neutrals that the law of nations allowed, meaning the greatest possible restriction in the list of contraband," he explained.

United States Subsidized War.

"When, however, the Government of the United States was a belligerent," Dr. Scott continued, "it trimmed its policy to the 'needs' of war as a vessel trims its sails to the winds, demanding an increase in contraband and the maximum restriction of neutral trade with belligerents."

Now that entire populations, instead of merely armies, become integral parts of a nation's war machine, Dr. Scott argued, virtually everything except "ostrich feathers" falls into the category of contraband. Moreover, he maintained that by furnishing munitions on credit to the belligerents of the World War before this country entered the conflict, the United States was in effect subsidizing that war.

He urged that the Government take over the munitions industry and forbid its citizens to trade in contraband with the belligerents. They could trade in other commodities with the belligerents, but only at their own risk, under his proposal.

Nielsen cited the development of international law restricting the rights of belligerents as against neutral trade. He said he found it difficult to regard the existence of a neutrality law as "a delusion" and that he could not concur in the view that "a reasonably satisfactory enforcement of the law is illusory."

Scene of Slaying and Victims of Vengeful Son

On this lonely road in Texas, Associate Justice William A. Pierson, of the State Supreme Court, and Mrs. Pierson were shot and killed by their son, Howard, 20. Deputies Sam Rogers, Jim McCoy and H. K. Parker, farmer who found bodies near car, are standing at the murder scene.

Friends and Relatives Shocked.

Horror-stricken friends and relatives were at a loss to explain the youth's desire to kill his parents. They said he was a quiet, unassuming young man. His grades in high school were average except that he made excellent grades in science courses. He showed little interest in outside activities.

State officials and members of the Legislature were shocked. Gov. James V. Alfred, who participated personally in early stages of the investigation, said he was "stunned" and "it is too terrible for words."

Double funeral services for the Justice and Mrs. Pierson were set for Saturday morning in the University Baptist Church with the Rev. W. H. McKenzie, pastor, officiating.

Activities of the Supreme Court were suspended until after the funeral.

"Had a Reason."

Pierson told newspapermen merely that he had "a reason" for shooting his graying mother and father on a country road about 15 miles from Austin late yesterday. He said he lured them there on the pretext of viewing a scenic drive. His father, 64, had been an associate justice 14 years.

District Attorney Hart said he had not made up his mind as to the motive.

The possibility appeared that young Pierson might be sent to a State hospital for mental observation.

Dr. Wooten said Pierson was laboring under the impression his parents favored his brother and sister and that he had an idea he might become a great scientist.

"He wanted to obtain his father's insurance money so he could resume his studies," Dr. Wooten stated. "But that wasn't the main trouble. The primary cause was this imaginary discrimination."

Heading the official investigation, District Attorney Hart said he wanted to study the matter thoroughly before agreeing to a hospital observation. Previously he had stated he would prosecute the case "as hard as we can." He would not say whether he would seek the death penalty.

If tried on an indictment charging murder with malice and convicted, the penalty might range from five years' imprisonment to death.

For conviction of murder without malice the penalty in Texas is from two to five years imprisonment. The sentence could be suspended by the jury.

Pierson appeared to be growing more nervous and worried, in sharp contrast with the calm demeanor displayed when he viewed his parents' bodies in a morgue last night. He nibbled at his lunch and said he was "not very well."

Wounded Himself.

Questioned as to why he confessed, he said, "It began bothering me and I wanted to get it off my system. I wanted to get it over with, but now I don't suppose I ever will."

He said he shot the couple after luring them from the car "to show them an old Indian grindstone."

He shot himself in the left arm, concealed his father's watch and pocketbook, his own purse and a .38-caliber revolver before driving to Austin to obtain medical treatment and report the deaths.

At Beaumont, Tex., it was learned young Pierson checked out of his hotel there Sunday, saying he would want his room back. He had been living there since April 5, when he went to work in an oil field.

The boy's parents were described by relatives as devoted to him. When he began to fail in his studies at the University of Texas he was withdrawn, his parents fearing he was near a nervous collapse. He attended the university 2½ years.

Amelia Makes Tentative Plan For Long Flight

There have been official receptions and presentations. I have had the privilege of meeting President Lazaro Cardenas and of talking to Foreign Secretary Emilio Portes Gil, whose invitations primarily brought me to Mexico.

Dives for Bearings.

Flying down I contrived to lose myself for half an hour north of Mexico City because the railroads and other check points on the map did not coincide with the world below. So, as opportunity offered, I did what pilots sometimes have to do—I dived down as close as I dared to villages to spot the names on the railroad stations. In this connection I suggested to Secretary Portes Gil that it would be of help to air tourists if the government would identify towns by having their names printed on prominent roofs.

"When you return, a map will be printed plainly beneath you," he replied, and it developed that Mexico already is committed to the suggested roof painting on an extensive scale.

I told my official host that a characteristic of his country was quickly noticed from the air. Ireland is recognizable by its green fields, white cottages and thatched roofs. (Miss Earhart landed near Londonderry, Ireland, after the first transatlantic solo flight made by a woman, in May, 1932—Ed.) Like the ubiquitous baseball diamonds of the United States, every Mexican town has an unmistakable bull ring round a steep-sided saucer in the midst of adobe houses and walled gardens.

No Billboards.

The countryside around Mexico City has much in common with parts of Southern California. There are the same clearcut, colorful mountains rising against blue skies. But the Mexicans have left the hills alone; there are no signs to be seen flaunting the praises of subdivisions or somebody's soothing syrup. It is a pleasantly undecorated country.

My first morning in Mexico I awoke to violin music which filled the hotel courtyard. My talented neighbor across the sunlit way was Mischa Elman.

The great Mexican artist, Diego Rivera, and his wife lunched with us, talked of his work and philosophy and my flying and escorted us on a revealing visit to some of his major murals. Whatever fate is accorded his work in New York (Rivera's $21,000 mural in the R. C. A. Building at Rockefeller Center was destroyed last year because it depicted Lenin in a symbolic group), here we find a prophet honored in his own country, whose people and aspirations he portrays with artistic sweep of color and line.

Rivera we had not known personally before, but an old friend was another distinguished artist, Miguel Covarrubias. Perhaps no pencil today more thoroughly lampoons the great and near-great than his.

It seems to me the Mexican people have a special aptitude for incisive cartoons. For several such newspaper craftsmen my face and proclivities have furnished inspiration in the last few days. I have been cartooned alone and with my husband, and even with the cows of Nopala which welcomed me when I landed in their pasture to inquire my way.

To Have New Costume.

At a concert of the police band on Sunday I admired the cowboy costumes worn by the musicians. The next day I learned to my surprise that Secretary Portes Gil had ordained that I should have such a one for myself.

This outfit is as traditional as the pink coat of the British huntsman or the kilts of the Highlander. There is a certain sentiment and ceremony surrounding the various types of costume and their uses. Mine is to be a formal creation of blue and silver, topped by a picturesque sombrero heavy with corresponding trimmings. I look forward to the special fiesta arranged for Saturday—a Mexican rendition of our own Western rodeo.

How such a colorful costume may be adapted to flying is a sartorial problem that remains to be worked out.

Former Congressmen Set 'X' Dinner in May

By the Associated Press.

The "Ancient and Honorable Order of X's" — men who once were Congressmen — is going to talk about the "Good Old Times" at a dinner here May 11.

Formally printed letter-heads carrying the anouncement of the meeting were distributed around Capitol Hill yesterday, warning present Representatives that "all members of Congress will eventually become eligible" for membership in " The Ancient and Honorable Order of X's."

opening next week. Costigan-Wagner forces, opposed to any such maneuver, will demand a roll call vote if an adjournment motion is made.

Harrison estimates his compromise will cost $500,000,000 more than the present law. It moves up the starting date of the 20-year certificates from 1925 to 1918, but disallows a 25 per cent grant Congress had provided for deferred payment. This means veterans would be unable to collect their full maturities, in cash or in bonds, until about 1942.

Those who held certificates until 1945 would receive a premium. In the case of a $1,000 certificate, for example, this additional payment would amount to $115. The average present full value of certificates, under the bill, would be about $775.

Tax Plan Submitted.

Sponsors of the compromise say it will entail no additional taxes, although Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau insists from $200,000,000 to $600,000,000 in new revenues will be needed, depending on which plan the Senate chooses.

Morgenthau yesterday sent to the committee confidential suggestions for raising this money through graduated inheritance or gift taxes. In addition to funds in reserve, Veterans' Administrator Frank T. Hines estimates payment under the Harrison plan will require $1,199,886,000 in new appropriations.

The Connally amendment, giving veterans the option of taking their payment in bonds or in cash, was adopted by the committee without a record vote. Harrison offered no real opposition. The Finance Committee chairman, it was learned, however, will oppose the Gore amendment, enabling the President to pay off veterans from the works pool.

The committee approved the Gore proposal, 11 to 7. One conservative Democrat will move in the Senate to make bonus payment from the works fund mandatory.

Plan Reported, 12 to 8.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, former national commander of the American Legion, sponsored the Vinson bill in committee. His motion to substitute this for the Patman plan was defeated, 13 to 4. Senator Harrison immediately offered his compromise. It carried, 12 to 8.

Several other amendments were whipped, in rapid succession. One by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, would have eleminated a declaration of policy, intended to head off general pensions for World War veterans other than disabled and hospital cases.

Truckman Is Held For Bristow Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Abingdon, Va., April 25.—E. D. Helms, State trooper, yesterday arrested Freeman Holman, of Todd, N. C., in connection with the collision Monday night of an automobile occupied by M. E. Bristow, Virginia State commissioner of insurance and banking, and W. R. Gardner, of Galax, a State bank examiner, with a truck parked on the Lee highway 3 miles south of Glade Spring, Va. Helms said the truck had no headlights.

Holman was arrested near Marion, Va. He was placed in the local jail, awaiting hearing scheduled for May 10.

K. of P. to Initiate A Gov. Nice Class

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., April 25.—Following a district meeting of the Knights of Phythias lodges in Carroll County, at Frizellburg, last night, it was announced that a meeting will be held at Taneytown, May 7, when arrangement will be made for conferring degrees on a class of candidates to be known as the Harry W. Nice class.

It was stated that the degrees will probably be conferred at a meeting late in May and that Gov. Nice is expected to attend. Grand Lodge officers of the State present at last night's meeting were Charles L. Weigand, Baltimore, grand chancellor; Joseph C. Parker, Annapolis, grand prelate, and David Harris, Baltimore, grand master at arms.

Chewning Raps Virginia Board; Declining Post

Real Estate Bureau Farce, Richmond Attorney Tells Governor.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 25.—In a letter scathingly condemning the the functions of the Virginia Real Estate Commission, A. J. Chewning, jr., of Richmond, has written Gov. Peery to decline an appointment to the board tendered him last week, it was learned tonight.

Declaring that the commission was created for the purpose of "purifying the real estate profession by barring unfit persons, Mr. Chewning asserts that "the rankest of crooks can, upon payment of a $10 fee, receive from this bureau, under the seal of the Commonwealth, a card reciting that he is duly qualified to conduct a real estate business and thus clothe himself with a veneer of respectability."

Mr. Chewning charges that the law, which has been in effect 12 years, does not permit the commission to decline a license, even though the commissioners know the applicant is unfit. He deplores the fee as a tax on the profession, but carefully differentiates between the fee and the regular business license.

"It is futile to assume," Mr. Chewning wrote, "that this bureau can ever become much more than a mechanism to perpetuate itself by an annual charge upon a large number of worthy citizens of the State, who already, dear Governor, are sorely oppressed by the burden of taxation imposed by similar laws."

The Richmonder, who was recommended by the Richmond Real Eestate Exchange and the executive council of the Virginia Real Eestate Association, reminded the Governor that he had urged the repeal of the law at several gatherings of the profession. He was named to succeed the late John W. Moore, of Richmond.

Coughlin Stirs Depths of Hate, Shouts Bailey

N. C. Senator Brands Him Sinister; Long, Friend of Priest, Silent.

By Robert C. Albright.

Political activities of Father Charles E. Coughlin brought a challenge in the Senate yesterday from Senator Josiah W. Bailey, quick-tongued North Carolina Democrat.

Bitterly denouncing the Detroit priest, Senator Bailey, son and grandson of a minister, charged "Coughlin—not Father Coughlin" with "fomenting the fires of revolution" in his radio talks from the Shrine of the Little Flower.

The attack came as Father Coughlin completed organization of his National Union for Social Justice in Michigan, and pressed plans for branches in the 47 other States.

Long Keeps Silent.

Huey P. Long, friend and reputed political associate of Coughlin, sat silent during the Bailey speech. Later Long hopped a train for Des Moines, Iowa, to attend Saturday's convention of the Farmers' Holiday Association. Father Coughlin will be at the meeting.

"There is nothing more sinister in our life right now than this," shouted Bailey, "that Coughlin on the radio from the Shrine of the Little Flower * * * stirs depths of hate throughout this land of liberty; matches class against class; foments the fires of revolution and crucifies the American people upon his damnable ambition, Coughlin—not Father Coughlin."

It was the second assault by a Senate Administration Democrat on the Detroit churchman. Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, verbally lashed both Father Coughlin and Long after a radio speech by the Detroiter flooded the Senate with protests against World Court entry, and precipitated defeat of the protocol.

He Honors Ministry.

"I honor the ministry because it is the ministry," continued the North Carolinian, who deviated from a verbal arraignment of the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill to make the attack.

"But when a minister of the Gospel or minister of the church comes down into the political arena or goes out with his radio incendiarism to stir up the fountains of hate in a distressed land amongst a suffering people, I take it nothing amiss, and I make no apologies, but I will snatch the halo from his brow and throw it into the nearest spittoon and then throw the spittoon into the gutter."

The one-time editor of the Biblical Recorder said he "did not mean on this occasion to speak about Coughlin."

"I will make my point clear," he said. "I left off his title and I did it deliberately. In his church—and I shall always speak respectfully of all churches—he can be called 'Father,' but he can not be called 'Father' in American politics."

Challenges Priestly Power.

"In his church he may have his priestly robes and his power of absolution; but when he undertakes to promise a harp and halo to the American people by political action, I challenge his priestly power."

A scattering of Senators lingered in the chamber as the adjournment hour drew near. Long among them. They made no move to interrupt. The galleries were quiet.

"Some of us here in the Senate find our voices too feeble to stretch across the continent," Bailey said, "and our humble words drowned in a universal din of hysteria and confusion, and the clear patient words of National life all obliterated and obscured in the raucous noise that comes from Coughlin over the radio.

"Perhaps when we cease to be heard, a bill like this (the anti-lynching measure) will notify the Nation. If I do not miss my calculation, the reverberations, if it shall, will drown the voice of Coughlin, and then we may thank God for the bill."

Church Issue Seen.

In some quarters the Bailey speech was viewed as injecting the church issue into the 1936 campaign. Leaders for the most part declined to comment. Father Coughlin has not allowed past attacks to go unchallenged. Long also may have something to say in his Des Moines speech.

Attired in a new brown suit, of less summery vintage than the one he wore in his Easter debut, Long lounged indifferently about the chamber yesterday, contenting himself with only one verbal interchange.

Off the floor, just before the Bailey assault, Huey told reporters he would welcome Coughlin's support in his "share-the-wealth" campaign.

"100 Per Cent for Him."

Two United States Senators—Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma—were returning from Detroit yesterday after addressing Wednesday night's organization meeting of the Michigan unit of Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice.

Both were on the list of ten Senators Long said he was willing to support for the Presidency "on any old ticket." Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, headed the ten. An eleventh Senator was added to the list yesterday by the Louisianan—Bronson Cutting (Republican), New Mexico. To date there have been "no acceptances."

Safety Parley Wins Support Of Red Cross

100 Virginia Chapters to Send Delegates to State Conference.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 25.—The 100 chapters of the American Red Cross in Virginia today reported to the executive committee of the first State-wide safety conference, called by Gov. Peery, that they would be represented at the conference here May 15 and 16.

In addition to the Red Cross delegates, others from community recreation associations, Boy Scouts and Boy Scout executives and fire wardens have notified the committee that they will be present.

The State Chamber of Commerce today announced that these additions to the attendance list boosted the number expected from 1,000 to 1,500.

Two nationally known speakers for the general safety section program were announced. They are John L. Teets, a field director of the American Red Cross, who is scheduled to speak on "First Aid and Its Application," and Harold F. Enlows, national director of first aid and accident prevention for the Red Cross, who is to speak on "Recreational Accidents and Their Prevention."

A number of nationally known speakers for the street and highway safety section have been announced, and Gov. Peery, who is the general conference chairman, is expecting to announce others in a few days.

The addition of a foreman's conference to the sectional program was announced today, and more than 300 working foremen of industrial plants are expected.

More than 100 organizations are cooperating in the conference.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may shock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Interest Sum, Trial Sought By Miss Dorcus

Circuit Court Acts Upon Woodsboro Woman's Battle With Kin.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 25.—Contending she is destitute because her funds are tied up in injunction proceedings pending for a year and a half, Miss Elsie L. Dorcus, of near Woodsboro, filed a petition in the Circuit Court yesterday seeking to force payment to her of interest on $54,000, a part of the funds named in the proceedings.

The court signed an order requiring the complainants in the case, in which Miss Dorcus was a defendant, to show cause by May 2 why the injunction should not be relieved to the extent of the interest payments. The complainants, nieces and nephews of Miss Dorcus are Dr. Roy Melvin Dorcus, Baltimore; Magistrate Harry C. Dorcus, Woodsboro; Mrs. Emma Grace Staley and Mrs. Irene Gross, Middletown; Edwin S. Dorcus, Elkton and Mrs. Myrtle Dorcus Green, Port Deposit, Md. In addition to Miss Dorcus, the defendants are Mrs. Ella Witmer and the Woodsboro Savings Bank, in which the money is deposited.

The complainants allege that as a result of a family agreement Miss Dorcus and her brother, the late William H. Dorcus, deposited $70,000 in the Woodsboro bank. After the death of her brother, it was charged, Miss Dorcus is charged with violation of an agreement by which the complainants said they were to inherit the estate upon the death of the last unmarried child of the late Joseph B. Dorcus, father of Miss Elsie Dorcus. It is said that she withdrew approximately $70,000 and entered it in the names of herself and Mrs. Witmer. The complaining nephews and nieces alleged that this action of Miss Dorcus constituted a fraud and defeated the family agreement.

Miss Dorcus in her petition alleged that before the death of her brother she was the owner of an interest account in the Woodsboro bank amounting to $54,000 and prior to his death she deposited the $54,000 together with $16,000 of his in an interest account in their joint names. After his death, she further alleges, she changed the deposit, about $70,000, to the names of herself and her sister, Mrs. Witmer.

Miss Dorcus contends that she is entitled to the income from the $54,000, which belongs to her and which income she had received for many years prior to the death of her brother.

Clarksburg Pushes Convention Claims

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 25. Twenty-five Clarksburg civic leaders and several school officials will go to Charleston tomorrow for the meeting of State Education Association officers, who are to hear protests against a proposal to make Charleston the permanent convention city of the teachers of the State. The committee was created at the last State convention in Parkersburg.

The Clarksburg delegation will also protest a movement to have the annual baseball tournament removed from Buckhannon to the southern end of the State.

This tournament originated at the West Virginia Wesleyan College gymnasium and has been held there since, until it has developed into a State institution. The Clarksburg section feels that it should remain there as long as Buckhannon desires it.

Tintypes.

March, the Actor.

Hollywood, April 24.

FREDRIC MARCH would appear on the set of "Les Miserables" perfectly made up, take the scenario, and go into his large portable dressing room and read the scene he was about to enact to refresh himself.

This is his working method: He reads the entire scenario soon after it is completed and forms his conception of the character he is to portray. Then he gets busy on his make-up, in which he takes great pride.

He avoids wearing a wig whenever possible, allowing his hair to grow as he did in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Other actors believe this is unnecessary when a wig will photograph just as real. He toyed with different make-ups and masks for six weeks when making "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

• • • •

At home the night before he is to play a certain scene he rehearses it. Then on the set he studies his lines quietly by himself. The important scenes he likes to read over with the player who appears with him. He and Charles Laughton read aloud to each other for practically every big scene they have together.

Once he faces the camera he knows how he wants to play the scene—and generally does it that way. He doesn't care to sit on the set and watch the other actors in his picture perform. He can generally be found on another set watching. When Director Boleslavski wanted him for a sequence he would send the assistant director next door to the stage where the "Folies Bergere" was being filmed.

• • • •

HIS real name is Frederick McIntyre Bickel. Years ago John Cromwell signed him to a stage contract and said: "You'll have to change your name, Bickel—it isn't good. And it isn't romantic. It rhymes with pickle."

Bickel's mother's maiden name was Marcher. He shortened it to March. He also shortened the Frederick to Fredric. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 170 pounds. His right shoulder is much lower than his left. The right shoulder pads of his suits have to be raised so the shoulders will appear on the same level. It is fairly well known that he is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin; that he is an Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity man, and that he won a scholarship offered by the National City Bank. It is not so well known, however, that he was a wild lad when a youngster. He is proud of the fact that he once stole a second-hand stove from a junk dealer. His nickname then was Bottles.

• • • •

He is married to Florence Eldridge. They met while members of a Denver stock company and were playing romantic leads in "The Swan." They were married on Decoration Day, 1927. He always wears a ring on the second finger of his left hand, and on it is inscribed: "No more beyond thine eyes."

It is from a line in Edna St. Vincent Millay's "The King's Henchman," which reads: "Now shall I look no more beyond thine eyes."

Although he is a big-name picture star, he was not a noted actor on the Broadway stage. He was on the road when he was offered the big chance in pictures. Now he has the yen to return to the Broadway stage. He is anxious to find a play in which he and his wife can co-star.

• • • •

HE is fond of eating, and practically any dish is his favorite. He has to watch his weight, though.

He saves pieces of strings and paper bags. He can't see a rubber band on the street without picking it up.

He is fond of keeping accounts, and for a while he used to list the household expenses. He has an elaborate bookkeeping system and can tell you what he's worth to the penny—which is a pretty penny.

One of his most exciting moments was when he was in the road company of the stage play, "The Royal Family," and they were playing Los Angeles. He was playing the John Barrymore character, and one night the stage manager came backstage and said: "Know who's out front tonight? John Barrymore." John Barrymore gave a fine performance in his orchestra seat, according to March, the audience, who watched him from the stage.

Court Denies Kent Free Print of Trial

Not Convinced He's Unable to Pay for Record.

By the Associated Press.

Tazewell, Va., April 25.—The petition of Maj. Robert C. Kent, convicted of kidnaping Mrs. Mary J. Hastings, to have the trial record printed at public expense for use in a hearing before the State Supreme Court, was denied today by Judge A. C. Buchanan.

The court was not convinced of Kent's financial inability to bear the cost.

Kent is under sentence of 13 years.

Dr. Palmer Elected By Culpeper Rotary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., April 25.—Dr. W. G. Palmer, dentist, was elected president of the Culpeper Rotary Club at the annual meeting for election of officers.

Others elected were Charles M. Clement, vice president; C. D. Lewis, secretary; F. H. White, treasurer. New members of the board of directors are T. I. Martin and W. W. Jefferson.

C. D. Rue and T. I. Martin were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the Fifty-sixth District of Rotary International, to be held in Richmond, May 8, 9 and 10, and Dr. C. S. Bruce was named chairman of the on-to-Richmond committee.

Girl Falls at Play, Drowns in Spring

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., April 25.—Funeral services were held at Gretna for Viola Dalton, 20-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Dalton, who fell into a spring at her parents' home and was drowned in a foot of water.

Her father had been playing with her in the yard and had walked around the house. When he returned he found the child dead, lying face down in the rock spring.

Apparently she had been stunned in falling.

School Contests Are Scheduled Over Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 25.—Several hundred boys and girls from county high schools throughout the State will compete in literary and track contests Saturday for the honor of representing their schools in the Twenty-second annual Virginia High School and Literary League Championship Tournament at the University of Virginia May 10 and 11.

Under the general supervision of Charles H. Kauffmann, executive secretary of the league, nine district championship tournaments will be held in eight college and university centers. County champions in debating, public speaking and public reading for boys and girls, and spelling will be judged for district honors, the winners of which will be eligible to enter the competitions for the highest State titles in May.

The tournaments are scheduled to be held at Randolph-Macon College, William and Mary, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Emory and Henry College, University of Virginia, Bridgewater, Washington and Lee University, and Hampden-Sydney College.

Various track events will also be held to determine district champions and select entries for the State meet. The team winning the division championship may enter all of its members in the State contests, and individual first and second place winners also become eligible to take part in the meet at the University of Virginia. Officials of the colleges will assist in judging both the track and literary contests.

Seven Fauquier Youths Enrolled for CCC Duty

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 25.—Seven young men of Fauquier County, the last quota allotted for the CCC, were taken to Richmond yesterday by Mrs. Mary T. Daffan, senior case worker of the Warrenton office, FERA, for their physical examinations.

All were accepted and will go to Camp Meade, Md., for two weeks training, before being sent to a camp.

The following were selected: Stanley Roberts, New Baltimore; Edward McConchie, Summerduck; Ashby Butler, jr., Remington; John Fisher and George Perogoy, Delaplane; Norman Wines and John Brown, Marshall.

Clarksburg Auditorium Urged as Works Project

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 25.—As a public works project, the Clarksburg Kiwanis Club proposes the construction of a mammoth public auditorium and recreational building to be erected on a city-owned lot in the rear of City Hall, and has made application to Washington for the necessary funds from $4,880,000,000 provided by Congress.

The movement has the approval of the Clarksburg Chamber of Commerce. It is the purpose of the club to make the building of a size sufficient to seat at least 7,000 persons.

Former County Commissioner James B. McAlpine, past president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association in that county; William Abbott, honorary member of the local company, and the Rev. Patrick J. Bradley, pastor of the St. Mary's Catholic Church, will speak.

George Eichhorn will be master of ceremonies.

The committee in charge of the affair includes William Marshall, chairman; John Richardson, Elmer Miller, Frank Glenn, Lawson Creighton, Harvey Robertson, Walter Abbott, Thomas Allen, William McIndoe and Henry Robertson.

Geography with Your Milk

THE cow is a lesson in geography.
She is rich in local color.
She moved in before the wide open spaces became real estate developments. She believed in seeing America first.
She is proud of her European ancestry.
For generations the Scotch, and the thrifty folk on the channel islands and in the "low countries" have jealously guarded the purity of their native breeds.
And here in America the trust is faithfully kept.
No strains are bluer blooded than the Ayrshires, Guernseys, Holsteins and Jerseys to which the milkman regularly looks for his stock in trade.
Thanks to the dairyman's active citizenship the cow has been usefully Americanized.
Types and blood lines are carefully selected to assure milk of the highest quality.
There are no scrubs on the dairyman's team.
Folks who speak disparagingly of "herd psychology" don't know the milk business.

Toward Neutrality.

The importance of defining an up-to-date neutrality policy for the United States is demonstrated by two current happenings. One is the manner of the introduction of a resolution to this effect in the House of Representatives by Mr. Maverick, of Texas. The other is the selection of the topic for the current meeting of the American Society of International Law.

Mr. Maverick's resolution is excessive in its provisions, but he was thoroughly logical in introducing it as an offset to the huge pending Navy appropriations bill. For assured neutrality is the only alternative to a tremendous navy. In sum, the resolution would declare it unlawful to make any contract with a belligerent to furnish munitions or articles defined as contraband or to make any loan to a belligerent. Citizens might not travel abroad in war zones and exports to warring nations would be forbidden. Fines not to exceed $100,000 and jail sentences of five years or both would be the penalty for violation.

Of these provisions, the definition of contraband presents the most intricate problem. On the opposite page, Mr. Charles Warren presents the legalistic alternatives open to the State Department and the country. Finely-drawn as these differences may appear to the lay mind, it is apparent that in examining them an important objective in the campaign for peace will have been attempted.

Both the Maverick resolution and the law society's discussions emphasize the shortcomings of the popular enthusiasm for peace demonstrations. However lofty the ideals, it is a sorry truth that peace is not to be had by merely wishing and praying. Peace will be achieved only through hard and careful thinking. The difficulties to be confronted in securing a neutrality policy will attest to this.

Playing To Speculators.

The announcement that the Treasury's buying price for newly mined silver would be raised to 77.57 cents per ounce followed a rapid advance in world market prices that carried quotations above the previously ruling official price of 71.11 cents. This is the second increase (both occurring during the present month) since the President announced the original purchase price of 64.64 cents for newly mined domestic silver at the end of 1933. While the present figure is far above the 42-cent level prevailing at the time the present policy was inaugurated, it is still much below $1.29 per ounce, the goal of the present program.

Although recent advances in the arbitrarily fixed domestic price have followed the rapid rise in world prices, the market increases are themselves due to the Treasury's buying operations. While it is believed that the Treasury has not been purchasing silver in world markets since quotations rose above 60 cents per ounce, the continuous advance is the result of the encouragement given to speculators by the Government's policy. Secretary Morgenthau's assertion that the Treasury would continue to buy until silver either reached $1.29 per ounce or Treasury silver stocks equaled one-third the value of gold holdings will no doubt accelerate the upward price movement and soon bring attainment of the goal.

It is not at all likely that the Treasury could, even if it desired, increase its silver stocks sufficiently to establish the 3 to 1 ratio of silver to gold. That would necessitate the purchase of over 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver, as contrasted with about 291,000,000 ounces acquired since the silver-purchase bill was passed. With Indian government sales limited and with an embargo on exports of silver from Shanghai in force, the floating supplies available for immediate purchase are very limited. That adds to the ease with which foreign speculators can push up prices in anticipation of Treasury buying.

Apart from an unwelcome and unneeded addition to the proportion of silver certificates in use, it does not appear that the country has anything to show for the Administration's weak yielding to the clamor of the silver bloc. Certainly the silver group is not satisfied with the meager subsidies to domestic production that have resulted from the boost in the price of silver. The chief result of our experiment has been to demoralize China's currency system and create anxiety in Mexico for fear silver pesos will be melted up to be sold as bullion.

So far, therefore, the chief beneficiaries of the silver purchase plan have been the speculators operating in foreign markets. They, at any rate, have good cause to bless the ceaseless and selfish agitation of special interests that was the motivating cause of this foolish monetary experiment.

The Unvarnished Fact.

In a recent official statement of the policies that have been followed in negotiating reciprocal tariff agreements, the State Department severely criticized suggestions that we should try to bring about a bilateral balance of trade with each country with which we negotiate trade agreements. Such practices lead, it was said, to "impairment or destruction of multilateral trade based upon an economical and mutually advantageous international division of production."

Although these conclusions are set forth as the "carefully considered view of the Government of the United States," they have not been indorsed by the President's special foreign trade adviser, George N. Peek. While fully aware of the cogency of theoretical arguments in favor of a policy which aims to lower all trade barriers, Mr. Peek believes that the chief trading nations of the world are already committed to a bilateral bargaining policy that leaves the United States "out in the cold." Consequently, he has argued that a realistic view of present-day problems requires the United States to follow the example set by other nations, even if the eventual outcome is further shrinkage in total world trade.

Chester C. Davis, AAA Administrator, now seems to range himself on the side of Mr. Peek to fight the battle of the so-called realists. He asserts flatly that "foreign countries can buy from the United States only in proportion to what they sell to this nation." Consequently, Mr. Davis concludes that there is only a limited amount of foreign exchange to go around and that our exports should accordingly be restricted.

In the long run, and for all countries engaged in overseas trade, imports must roughly balance exports. But Mr. Davis is not thinking in these general terms. He is trying to find a plausible argument to account for a 30 per cent decline in our cotton exports during a year which witnessed an increase of 27 per cent in our exports of all classes.

Echoing Secretary Wallace, he asserts that the countries that used to buy our cotton no longer have dollar exchange with which to purchase it. That, too, may be true in some cases, but it fails to explain the increase in consumption of non-American cotton by foreign countries. Moreover, customers able to purchase necessary imports do not have to hold their favorable balances in any particular currency. Foreign trade, as Secretary Hull says, is multilateral and the funds obtained from sales to country A can be used to buy the goods of country B.

The plain, unvarnished fact is that the reduction in exports of American farm products, especially cotton, is attributable chiefly to the artificially high prices ruling in domestic markets. As a vice president of Mr. Peek's Export-Import Bank stated recently, "competition from other foreign growths (of cotton) offers an ever-increasing impediment to the disposal of American cotton." So far as the AAA now recognizes the acute need for cotton exports, Mr. Davis' statement is constructive.

But his suggestion that we might guarantee outlets for huge stocks of farm products by forcing other nations to curtail purchases of our automobiles and other industrial products would tend to put foreign trade in an intolerable strait-jacket. If the proceeds of goods sold in this market had to be used to buy cotton, raised to exorbitant price levels by AAA restriction policies, the upshot would probably be loss of other export outlets without regaining that for cotton.

In A Year?

Among the new organizations to be set up under the $4,880,000,000 work relief program are agencies devoted to "rural resettlement" and "rural electrification." In view of the fact that only three new units have thus far been created to help spend this vast fund, these two appear to occupy places of signal importance.

Since Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell has been appointed head of the "rural resettlement" program it is assumed that he will undertake the transplantation of stranded families which he has so frequently discussed. Undoubtedly that is a desirable objective. The depression, drought and dust storms have left a good many Western communities in almost hopeless condition. With expert planning and careful execution, it may be possible substantially to improve the status of these destitute families.

The same may be said for rural electrification. Farming will become easier and more attractive when homes and barns are electrically lighted, when churns, cream separators, pumps, stoves and sweepers are operated by electricity. Enthusiasts sponsoring the program expect a movement back to the farm when these conveniences are available.

But these are clearly projects that will require years for adequate development. And President Roosevelt has asked that the major portion of the enormous fund entrusted to his care be spent in a single year as a stimulus to recovery. Will these new organizations take one grand leap toward an objective that is impossible of attainment in twelve months? Or will they launch extensive projects at a slower pace on the assumption that funds allotted to them now are only an initial installment?

Some other questions might well be asked as these ambitious undertakings get under way. In a current article Congressman Rankin points out that cheap electric power will relieve the farmer of the expense of feeding a horse and hiring an extra "hand." Is not such displacement of labor a rather strange result of a work relief project? In this same attitude of looking before leaping, Undersecretary Tugwell might well ask how many submarginal farmers will resist transplantation schemes as long as the Government advances funds to finance cultivation of unproductive lands.

The Airport Tangle.

Like all previous investigations of this subject, the inquiry of the House District Sub-Committee into sites available for development of the municipal airport has ended in vigorous disagreement. The full District Committee has adopted the report of the special investigating group. But several members intend to attack the committee bill on the floor. Congressional opinion on the subject seems to be hopelessly divided.

In these circumstances selection of a commission to choose a site appears the only means of avoiding complete stalemate. Probably the committee's bill can be amended so as to set up a satisfactory agency for this task. It would be a mistake to suppose, however, that such procedure would automatically dissolve the complications in which the airport problem is involved.

The committee has aroused needless antagonism to its plan by trying to close the door to selection of the Gravelly Point site. Testimony for and against Gravelly Point was presented at the hearings. T. S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, charges that the conclusions on which the condemnation of this site is based "appear to be diametrically opposed to the grave preponderance of testimony given."

Every disadvantage of the Gravelly Point site, and they are many, should, of course, be freely recognized. But they must be matched against disadvantages of other available locations. It is evident that no perfect airport can be developed near the heart of the city without prohibitive expense. The objective should be to designate the best site available, with due precaution against unnecessary expense, favoritism to any group, and interference with orderly development of the Capital City.

To follow that course, however, is more easily said than done. Preponderant opinion is that the airport should be located on the south shore of the Potomac. Yet it would be unsatisfactory for the District to establish a municipal airport that might fall under control of Virginia. And the boundary line in this section has never been definitely established.

The Government claims ownership to substantial tracts of land in the vicinity of both Gravelly Point and Washington Airport. A commission would find it impossible to determine the ownership of parts of these areas, much less a fair price to pay for them, until the work of the boundary commission has been finished and ratified by Virginia and Congress, or until the case has finally been settled in the Supreme Court.

Moreover, the personnel of the proposed airport commission is giving rise to criticism. It gives the District one representative as against four for the Federal Government, while the expenses of acquiring and operating the airport would be divided equally between these two governmental units. If the project is to be so predominantly Federal, certainly the costs should be adjusted accordingly.

When, as and if these objections to the committee bill can be overcome, it should quickly win the support of all who are really interested in securing a modern airport for Washington. Selection of the best available site is of primary importance. But local groups must be willing to leave this decision to experts. Interminable wrangling over the relative merits of specific projects can not be justified when the danger of a major tragedy on the existing airport is ever present.

Nearing A Last Stand.

Stripped of part of its camouflage, the Harrison bonus bill has been sent to the Senate. The predominant bonus sentiment in the Senate Finance Committee suggests that this so-called compromise, or a more liberal measure, will be adopted. In face of pressure from the bonus lobby, warnings from the Treasury apparently mean little more to Senators than they do to members of the House.

Only Representative Patman knows how to pay the bonus without embarrassing the Treasury. Inflationary ideas carry him happily over Secretary Morgenthau's warning of the threat to Government credit. Fortunately, the majority of the Finance Committee have not so completely lost their heads. Their emphatic rejection of the Patman bill is the bright spot in an otherwise gloomy situation. The Senate will probably be able to defeat the inflationary features of the Patman bill in conference, but the differences between the two houses may not prevent the enactment of bonus legislation of some sort.

If an unwarranted strain upon the credit of the Government is to be avoided, the President must stand with his veto ax ready for any bonus measure that is sent to the White House. Any wavering in a case where the public interest is so clearly evident would be a severe blow. It might easily offset virtually all the confidence that the President hopes to inject into business through the work relief program.

"A man can manage to get along with only half a brain," asserts a Mayo Hospital surgeon. Can this be news in a country overrun with politicians?

Don't Forget The Departing Voyager.

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Nonconstructive Sarcasm.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The outlying districts are rejoicing over improved congressional decorum. Satire, sarcasm and innuendo are, at their best, too flippant and nonconstructive at this time, and at their worst are a menace to good government. Yet they possess so diabolical an attraction they are the warp and woof of much that is said and written on the vital, engrossing questions of the hour.

We seem to have forgotten that criticism can be commendatory as well as condemnatory, two similar sounding words of such dissimilar meaning that just an "m" or an "n" means to praise or to damn. Nobody disputes the essential need in statecraft for both converse and adverse criticism. The point we would make is just this: That if in congressional debate and on the editorial page, that great molding foundry of thought and opinion, all the good to its very minutia be searched out and played up to the full, and all the bad in past accomplished acts and facts be ignored, and threshing of old straw ceases, the benign effects on the national outlook and the flowering of optimism would be immediate.

Consider Transportation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The location of the new buildings for the War and Navy Departments and the new Naval Hospital, etc., should be made so as to avoid the traffic congestion that the triangle development has caused. We hope that these proposed new buildings will be spread out over sufficient area to permit buses, street cars and railway lines not now overloaded to carry the Government workers to these new buildings.

The new Navy Building could be located where the Naval Hospital now is, but should face on Potomac Park, so as to have an appropriate setting. The new Naval Hospital should be located south of the Arboretum, east of Nineteenth street northeast and north of Maryland avenue, where many acres are available and where the Anacostia River and Anacostia Park are in view.

A memorial highway connecting Mount Vernon, Va., and Gettysburg, Pa., will likely be approved this session. It will pass the Lincoln Memorial and probably pass the Capitol, out Maryland avenue through Anacostia Park, past the site of the Battle of Bladensburg and tie in for 10 to 15 miles with the scenic highway connecting Washington and Baltimore that Col. U. S. Grant 3d proposed. These new highways would open new residential suburban territory for Federal Government workers.

In planning new Federal buildings, transportation of Government workers to their homes must be considered.

German Psychology.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Conry's letter of April 6 ends with the phrase, "Do justice to Germany," but does not say what would constitute justice to Germany; neither does he touch upon the point which is at the back of the whole question—the German psychology. No one seems willing to state what the German terms would have been if they had won the war or to indicate in what manner such terms would have been enforced.

I enclose a map which hangs in German schoolrooms. You will notice that Austria is already designated as German, and that, apparently, we are to assume that about two-thirds of Switzerland should belong to Germany. Would Mr. Conry be willing to trust German statesmen in the light of past performances, such as Bismarck's deliberate editing of a telegram in order to influence the French to declare war in 1870, or, to take more modern instances, the violation of the neutrality of Belgium or the blood purge of June 30, 1934?

Mr. Hickey's Challenge Accepted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although I have no share in the debate between "Decency" and Francis E. Hickey, whose letters concerning the Mexican church and state conflict have appeared in The Post, I would like to intrude in it long enough to clear out the two points under discussion.

Mr. Hickey presents two questions, and adds: "These are two clean-cut, straightforward questions. We challenge anyone to discuss these in the open under a real, not an assumed name." These two questions imply assertions so contrary to facts that I can not refrain from "answering" them.

First. There is no such an institution as public relief in Mexico, where unemployment is practically unknown. Furthermore, it is entirely untrue that the Mexican government has required federal employes "to deny their faith in order to get food."

Does Mr. Hickey know that the great majority of the 50-odd thousand officials employed by the Mexican government are Catholic and that not a single one of them has been discharged merely on account of religious affiliations?

Does Mr. Hickey know that scarcely three months ago a census was taken in order to prepare statistics on federal employes? The questionnaires sent to all employes mentioned, among other things, the religious faith of each individual. I do know, as every other Mexican in or outside the government knows, that, as expected, since Mexico is a Catholic country, most of said employes declared to be Catholic. Not a single one of the 48,730 employes was discharged, although, I repeat, most of the answers which are a matter of public record, show Catholic affiliation.

Second. Mr. Hickey charges that an "atheistic oath is required in the public schools of Mexico." This is also untrue. On February 28, 1935, the Mexican Embassy in Washington sent to the press the following statement: "The Mexican Embassy has been officially advised that the secretary of public education has never authorized any federal board of education nor any single teacher throughout the republic to compel anybody to sign to a pledge declaring themselves 'irreconcilable enemies' of the Catholic religion or promising to end all religious practices in their homes."

Mr. Hickey challenged anybody "to discuss these two clean-cut, straightforward questions." I felt it my duty, in view of the manifest unsoundness of these questions, to send the Editor of The Post the "two clean-cut, straightforward" answers.

Contented Taxpayer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Today in America we, the citizens of the United States, have a great deal to be thankful for. In our beloved country we have peace, thanks be to God, and may we never have another war.

I have been reading a recent article in a New York newspaper which interested me very much. It was in regard to the taxes we are paying today. May I say that we are not paying such high taxes when you take into consideration what we are receiving from our Government. Today our poor unfortunate good people are being fed, clothed and sheltered in warm domiciles and to every right-thinking American, I ask you this question—do you want a balanced budget or do you want those unfortunate citizens of ours to go hungry, go without clothing and go without work, which is the right of every able-bodied citizen? I say thank God for Franklin D. Roosevelt and his "New Deal;" thanks be to those Americans who saw fit to vote for a real American in the election of 1932.

"Palpable," But How Accurate?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Rural New Yorker, a conservative farm paper, in its issue of March 9 states: "Surely the issue of money and the regulation of its value must be taken out of the hands of the small group of international bankers who use it as a private business to make profits."

In its issue of March 30 it states: "Banks are run for private profit. It is not proper to give them power to create credit money out of paper and ink, to increase and decrease prices at will, to inspire wild speculation, to extend credit without limit, to withdraw credit after they have gathered in all the lawful money and then to demand that creditors pay them lawful money which is cornered and locked up in their own vaults."

Why do you favor such palpable wrongs?

Bird Collecting—New Style.

An expedition sent out under the joint auspices of Cornell University and the American Museum of Natural History, and starting from this city in February last, has traveled 3,000 miles in trucks equipped with cameras for making motion pictures of birds and with devices for recording their notes. The expedition has explored the fields and forests of Georgia, Florida and Louisiana and is passing on through Texas, Oklahoma and the Southwest to the Rocky Mountain States.

This is the best way of collecting birds, better than filling museum cases with stuffed specimens. Taking motion pictures of birds is not exactly a novelty in photography, and the mechanism of sound reproduction has been employed occasionally to record their notes. But never before has an expedition been organized to cover the continent for the purpose of combining the two processes on a really comprehensive scale. The work, when completed, should present a review of bird life in the United States which will be without parallel here or elsewhere in the world. It can be observed not only by bird lovers of this generation, but by those of generations yet to come. Also, the expedition is setting an example that bird collectors all over the world are likely to follow.

The Post Impressionist

Byron Of The Steppes.

Post Office, Friday.

PUSHKIN was the subject, a few days since, of one of those sensitive little essays which the lovable and loved Dr. Phelps contributes to The Post. We nearly always wish they were longer, because we almost always agree with their point of view—but this time we wish it because we find that too few people in America know the details of Pushkin's fatal duel, whereon Dr. Phelps merely touched in passing.

* * *

The greatest American authority upon Russian Pushki is Russian-born Boris Brasol. He has told much of Pushkin's story in "The Mighty Three." And he has translated a lot of Pushkin.

The translations by the Hartford lady, which Dr. Phelps provided, were pleasant, but we prefer Brasol's. It is said that there was once a Washingtonian who spent the better part of a dozen years making a dozen translations of one of Pushkin's poems—and, when Brasol pronounced the twelfth version perfect, the Washingtonian, rashly considering that this crowned his life-work, immediately . . . shot himself.

* * *

A Byronic figure, Pushkin—influenced by Byron, yet greater than the influence. He sang despair, then found it in the smile of fame. He celebrated unbelief, and, at the summit of his career, wrote what is perhaps his best poem—about a prayer!

* * *

He was only 30, but a national hero, when, in 1829, he had the misfortune to fall in love with Natalie Goncharova. It was for her that he was killed eight years later. They were married at Moscow early in 1831.

* * *

Natalie was beautiful and young. She was considerably younger than Pushkin, "of unusual beauty," Brasol avers, "but," he adds, "with a mind both shallow and uncultured."

* * *

"Natalie loved attraction, lavish and gleaming entertainments at which she could be displaying her scintillating smiles to an ever-growing crowd of her admirers and wooers . . . She sadly failed to create in her home that atmosphere of loving care and gentle tenderness for which Pushkin so intensely longed and which he knew not in his earlier days when, 'by stormy passion driven forth,' he was swept from one amorous adventure to another."

* * *

This is all very sad, and so Pushkin must have found it. It is all very bad, and so Natalie should have known. But, after all, it is only another way of saying that the poet made a not uncommon mistake. Having had his fling, he wanted to settle down with a thoroughly domestic and adoring wife—for which role he selected a young girl whose temperament was just what his had once been and who, not yet having had her fling, might well have been expected to have it now.

* * *

Anyway, she, writes Brasol, lacked all understanding and appreciation "of the radiant genius of her husband. Nor did she spare his self-respect and honor, which, to Pushkin, were man's most treasured gifts and most inviolable possessions. Empty gossip"—Brasol insists that, despite Natalie's levity, it was empty—"like a dark shadow followed Pushkin and Natalie."

* * *

It rose to clamor in '36: a handsome Guards' officer, the Baron Haeckern-Dantes, was involved. For some time, Pushkin shut his eyes and ears. But he went to pieces while reading, at the traditional October dinner of the Lyceum, a poem in which he had tried to chant lost youth, lost hope, lost adventure—and the loss of faith.

By the following January, the Baron's insults became flagrant. Pushkin challenged him.

* * *

They fought on the 26th. The poet fell. While his blood stained the snow, he cried to the surgeon hurrying toward him:

"Ne bougez pas! Je me sens encore assez fort pour tirer mon coup!—Don't move! I still feel strong enough to fire my shot!"

He did fire, too—though wounding his enemy only slightly . . .

* * *

While the sledge drove him to his deathbed, he joked, in painful intervals of consciousness, with his seconds.

* * *

Certainly not an edifying end. The odd thing is that it didn't quite reveal the man's heart. This unbeliever had "a favorite prayer." It was that one known throughout the Near East as the Prayer of St. Ephraim the Syrian:

"O, Lord and Master of my life, grant that I may not have a spirit of slothfulness, or of despair, or of ambition, or of vain talking; but grant unto Thy servant the spirit of gentleness, of meekness, of patience and of love. Yea, O Master, Lord and King, grant that I may see my own faults and not judge my brother. For Thou art blessed to all eternity. Amen. Lord, have mercy!"

Neutrality To Depend On Contraband Rules

All Commodities Are Necessary To Modern Warfare; U. S. Must Define Policy Soon.

The necessity for a clear-cut and modern American neutrality policy, to be declared in time of peace, is now universally recognized. The State Department has for months been working toward this end. Legislation designed to insure neutrality has this week been introduced into Congress. The general topic features the program of the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law, now in session here. In the following article the problems involved are examined by a former Assistant Attorney General, who is a leading authority on the subject.

By Charles Warren.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THERE are many in this country who believe that it is possible for the United States, by maintaining a strict neutrality, to keep out of any war, even out of a war in which a major sea power is engaged. There are many others who believe that, as has been well said, "the best way to avoid getting into a war is to cooperate with all peoples in order to effect the fact that there be no war to get into."

Those who find in the status of neutrality a magic escape for us from international trouble must, however, make up their minds what policy they want to adopt with regard to the conditions (certain to arise) which will tend to disturb that neutral status. The condition calling most imperatively for their attention relates to the law (or want of law) as to contraband. For many controversies in which the United States as a neutral became involved from 1914 to 1917 arose out of the fact that practically every useful article of trade was declared by the belligerents to be contraband.

The protests of the United States at these vast extensions of the term "contraband" and at the consequent interferences with the trade of our citizens in such contraband, even with other neutral nations, were to no avail. The contentions of the United States as to the violation of our neutral rights of trade were never agreed to by the belligerents. And today, 17 years after the end of the war, the definition of contraband remains, in fact and effect, so far as the belligerent nations then at war are concerned, exactly the same as it was in 1918. If another war breaks out, unquestionably the same policy as to contraband will be pursued by the belligerents as in the World War.

What are we going to do about it, and what can we do about it?

* * * *

THE easy, simple answer, based on national pride and sentiment and not on rational facing of the facts as to changed conditions of warfare, is that we must protect American trade at all hazards and not allow belligerents to dictate to us how, where, and in what we may trade.

This answer, of course, leads us straight into the war; for the problem is not quite so simple as such an answer would imply. We must consider carefully what this trade consists of, from the belligerents' point of view. The reason given by them for the extension of the term "contraband" was that, under modern conditions, the success of a war depends not only on troops but on the labor of the civil population; and that supplies to that population are of as great importance in their effect upon the outcome of a war as supplies to the troops.

One question for us to answer, therefore, is this: If a belligerent regards any particular article of trade as of such war importance to the enemy as to warrant its being placed in the same category as munitions of war as contraband, should or should not the United States as a neutral treat shipments of such articles so declared to be contraband, in the same manner as it treats shipments of munitions of war (which are recognized everywhere as contraband)?

Another question to be carefully considered is this: Since most of us now condemn profits made out of a war in which the United States is a party, should or should not the Government protect profits made out of a war in which other nations are parties—at least, should it protect them to the extent of entering into controversies with belligerents during the progress of the war? And especially should the Government protect profits made out of trade in goods which the belligerents have classified as contraband, i. e., in the same category as munitions of war?

* * * *

ONE may agree that it is highly desirable that neutral trade should not be unduly restricted by belligerents. But ought we not to ask ourselves whether it is desirable that this country should risk being involved in war, simply for the purpose of defending alleged trade rights of its citizens?

In other words, why should enlarged profits arising from trade in war time be protected by our Government, during the war, if such protection might lead the country itself into war? Is the right of a citizen to trade superior to the right of the Nation to preserve itself from danger of involvement in war? Has a citizen a right to engage in acts which may endanger his country?

These are some of the questions that Americans should put to themselves, in determining what attitude they should take toward the subject of contraband.

There are at least nine ways of meeting the problem, open to the United States. But each possible policy stated below (except the first) involves either concessions or sacrifices of alleged rights hitherto claimed by us or else danger of being involved in war. To maintain neutrality, American citizens must be willing to pay the price. The question they must consider is whether they do not prefer to remit some trade and some profits rather than endanger lives.

* * * *

THE nine possible policies are as follows.

1. Our Government may attempt to obtain some international agreement upon the definition of contraband through an international conference. But this was tried at The Hague Conference of 1907 and in the Declaration of London of 1909, and it was a complete failure. After the experience in the Great War, there is even less likelihood that nations will restrict their contraband lists, by agreement or otherwise.

2. Our Government may by threats of retaliatory measures attempt to force belligerents to recognize the neutral rights of trade claimed by us. Such a policy might easily lead us into war. But, if determined upon, we should at once proceed by legislation to arm the President with effective powers to employ retaliation in his discretion, if no other measure could affect the desired aim.

3. Our Government may protect what we have termed, in the past, our neutral rights of trade, by the use of our naval fleet. That is the policy advocated by many of our naval officers. It would, in all probability, lead to armed conflict and would amount to enforcing our status of neutrality by going to war to preserve it.

4. Our Government may pursue the same course which it did from 1914 to 1917, i. e., continuously challenge, by diplomatic correspondence, the right of the belligerents to interfere with our trade. But such a policy would again only lead to increasing frictions and irritations which might at any moment drag us into war.

5. Our Government may, either before or at the outset of the war, attempt to enter into agreements with the belligerents as to the manner and extent of interference with contraband trade which may be allowed, and as to adequate compensation to our citizens whose trade is interfered with. In bringing about such agreements, the presence on our statute books of authority to the President to put in force retaliatory measures might have some persuasive force.

6. In case belligerent nations shall not be willing to enter into such agreements, our Government may restrict all trade by our citizens in contraband articles to the pre-war average amount shipped to both or all belligerent countries as well as to other neutral countries. Such action might discourage a belligerent nation from too great extensions of their contraband lists; for each addition made by them to such lists would automatically operate to cut down their imports of such contraband article from the United States.

7. Our Government may, by statute, forbid the export of any American goods declared contraband, unless title to such goods should be vested in the foreign purchaser, prior to shipment. This would eliminate controversies, for the goods on the high seas would be at the purchaser's risk. But it would undoubtedly lessen American trade, if payment should be required by American traders or exporters prior to shipment.

(8) Our Government may forbid the making of loans or extensions of credit to any belligerent nation or to any person acting directly or indirectly for such nation, for the purchase of articles declared contraband. This also would greatly restrict American trade.

(9) If none of the above policies shall seem practicable, then there would seem to be only one other course for our Government to pursue. Viz, by congressional action or by Presidential proclamation, to give formal notice to all persons exporting or selling for export any goods listed as contraband by any belligerent that all such sales and exports are to be made at the risk of the seller or exporter, and that during the war, our Government will not enter into controversy with the belligerents but that after the war it will assert claims for damages in behalf of such persons, based on any rights of trade found to exist under international law.

* * * *

IT is frequently stated that failure by our Government to insist on the rights of its citizens to trade in goods proclaimed as contraband by belligerents would be a departure from the long-established American principle of "freedom of the seas." This, however, is a completely mistaken view. There never was any American principle or any American contention that its citizens had a right to trade in contraband.

The American principle was summarized by President McKinley in his message to Congress of December 5, 1898, and this principle was embodied in a joint resolution of Congress, of April 28, 1904, contending only for the exemption from capture of "private property at sea not contraband of war."

Since, under the practice by the belligerent nations during the World War, practically every useful article of trade was made contraband, the above joint resolution of Congress has today no meaning or significance. The only choice before the United States, therefore, is not whether or not it shall adhere to its principle of freedom of the seas as defined in the joint resolution of Congress of 1904, but whether or not it shall take the risk of being involved in war simply to protect the trade and profits of citizens who wish to engage in contraband trade.

Whichever or whatever policy may be adopted by the United States Government, such policy should be determined upon, in advance of war and before we get into trouble. And whatever legislation, if any, may be needed to carry out such policy should be adopted during time of peace.

After the outbreak of a war, the various commercial, economic and racial pressures and prejudices which are certain to be created in favor of one or the other belligerent or in favor of one or the other neutral policy will make it almost impossible to adopt the laws necessary to protect our neutrality.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Coordination At Last.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S announcement that 60 governmental agencies are to handle the $4,000,000,000 should be a definite lesson to the newspaper boys as well as the critics of the President. It was probably intended to be.

BARGERON.

Several weeks ago the newspaper boys jumped to the conclusion that Rex Tugwell, Harry Hopkins and Harold Ickes were to be the big fellows in the gigantic expenditure and immediately there was excitement on Capitol Hill. The enemies of Tugwell, Hopkins and Ickes set up a howl. The works bill was held up a couple of days and there was some question as to whether it might not be kept definitely in a jam.

Mr. Roosevelt rushed to the front then, figuratively speaking. What he actually did was to send a reassuring note from the yacht Nourmanhal that the newspaper boys were very, very wrong—that he, himself, was to administer the fund. This elicited a howl of derision from the President's critics and even his friends had to admit the statement was very thin.

* * * *

But I guess they will all think twice before they go off half-cocked again. When Mr. Roosevelt says anything, he means it. Why, Speaker Byrns said yesterday of the announcement that it meant the President had carried out his promise.

Messrs. Hopkins, Ickes and Tugwell are not to administer the fund. It is to be administered by the 60 regular governmental agencies, with Mr. Roosevelt at the head. He read off the names of the agencies at his press conference Wednesday to 150 newspaper boys, and not a one of them laughed, proving that it was not an insult to their intelligence, as one might think. The Associated Press sent the long list out over the country, and, so help me goodness, a lot of newspapers published it under the heading: "Here are the agencies which will administer the fund."

* * * *

Well, sir, it must make the newspaper boys and the critics feel sick, to have been so utterly wrong. But one can't escape facts. Mr. Roosevelt is right, 60 agencies are to participate in the fund. The Treasury, for example, is to issue the checks and the Bureau of Fisheries is to have charge of all matters relating to fish. Undoubtedly the reason the boys overlooked these two agencies' participation is that they forgot checks would have to be issued and they didn't know fish figured in the great program. There is apparently to be a big rehabilitation program among them, however, and naturally the Bureau of Fisheries comes in here. And believe it or not, the Bureau of Public Roads is to have to do with the roadbuilding, the Navy with naval building, the War Department with military building. It is revolutionary. It is amazing.

* * * *

One can only guess as to what Mr. Roosevelt had in mind in putting out this hunk of propaganda. The first one is he wanted to show he was carrying out his "promise." This is the angle Speaker Byrns chose to take. A second guess is that he wanted to create a picture of the whole Government, the vast governmental machinery, all ready and set to move in the emergency.

If the latter is what he had in mind he is unquestionably right. Every one of those agencies he named is set to get just as much of the money as it can. Observers say there has never been such feverish activity among them as in the past few weeks when the word was passed around for them to think up as much as possible of the money they could spend.

There has been a lot of criticism against the lack of coordination among them. They have seemed to be acting at cross purposes at every point. But they are together at the starting line now and all looking the same way. At last coordination has been achieved.

And incidentally the earlier stories about who are the real influences in the fund were all true. The 60 agencies which Mr. Roosevelt so naively listed are to participate. That is, they are to get all they can.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

"SOME places cry aloud for murder," or words to that effect, said R. L. S. somewhere. Looking for his more urbane phrasing just now, I got into his "Essays on Literature" in the "South Seas" edition—and didn't find it. Then to add temptation to distraction, I thought I might find it among the Stevenson selections in Rollo Walter Brown's symposium: "The Writer's Art: By Those Who Have Practiced It" (Harvard U. Press, 1921) only to discover all over again what an enticing and valuable book Mr. Brown gathered. To have frank, honest, inspiriting words on their art by Hazlitt, G. H. Lewes, Conrad, James, Thackeray, De Maupassant, Quiller-Couch, Thoreau, etc., was too much of a red herring on my trail for a catchphrase. I still don't know what Stevenson said.

But—let's take a new breath—some places cry aloud for murder, and some places, plainly enough now, for confession. Clifford J. Druce, young English writer worth watching, imagined one of the latter: a rambling, gloomy decaying farmhouse in "Midshire," inhabited by a dour woman who seems to have more brains than she shows, and her husband who, in spite of the most elegant behavior, probably has less.

Motoring up to it on a dark evening—all this, I'd better say at once, in Mr. Druce's first novel, "No Through Road" (Holt, $2)—and stopping in its dim, shabby yard because they made a wrong turn (at "Calamity Clump," by the way) and the road went no farther, comes a party of upper-crust Britishers homeward bound from the races. With their way lost, their engine "missing," and night coming on, there's nothing for it but to stay the night. That is, if the farm people will have them.

Out, then, in all the pride and assurance marked by a 5,000-guinea car, step Julius Jordan (pompous self-made financier); his wife, Vida; Stannard Jordan's schoolmate, now confidential secretary and factotum); Nancy (Vida's sister, empty as an early A. Huxley heroine, but less spectacular); Cheyne (Nancy's fiance, Oxford hallmark); and old Polstead (reminiscing relic of Edwardian grandeur). It's not assurance which gets them in, though, but the situation at the farm peculiar enough to add tensity to the novel.

A PRIME and various crew, you see, and meat for a good novelist. Which, I am persuaded Mr. Druce is. For he takes them through a quiet but revelatory evening, lets the atmosphere of the house work most convincingly on their nerves, and—tour de force of all, but carried off with honors—causes each of them to come to an inner crisis and solve it at dead of night by one of the distinctly interesting, even amusing, scenes of recent letters: a free-for-all, hysterical, compound confessional.

Old Polstead has the most torturing and pathetic reason for spinning anecdotes about everyone from Queen Alexandra to George Moore, Jordan throws overboard his pomp, cries out that he aches for the comfortable life of the ordinary suburban citizen. "You think that a comfortable life? I think it's heroic!" explodes Cheyne; "it's the most perilous, most beset of all." And on he goes to expose his academic retreating. Nancy blurts out that her trouble is just the ordinary inferiority complex—scared, she still keeps on wanting the impossible—"I fancy a lot of women secretly cling to the illusion that the last miracle is being kept in reserve, for them!" And why Vida keeps the "Indian sign" on her husband, and why Stannard consoles himself as a second-rater, become equally plain.

Then in the morning, of course, they must do what they can to regain "face," and to pick up and establish any advance that their curious evening brought them.

But I have made these notes too simple. How complex are these lives, and how adeptly delineated, you had best find by reading Mr. Druce's skillful first novel yourself. He shows that, even with the aid of what is pretty close to melodrama and deus ex machina, the human animal finds "no through road" to what it wants.

RESEARCH on the shelf of the light romantic novel is not, by the very nature of the case, likely to bring forth anything startling. The last thing a confirmed reader of that genre desires is to be surprised—he (though it's mostly she) expects no more than to be soothed, sweetened, and given a nice little bloom of heart-warming by one more variation on the damsel-swain theme. Enough, then, to state whether Romeo is a barber or an employe of TVA, whether Juliet loves him at once, and then ponders, oh how deeply) or takes a toothsome bit of persuading. And such-like.

But at once I'm confronted with rather more subtlety in Clarissa Fairchild Cushman's pleasant and heartening tale, "But For Her Garden" (Little Brown, $2). Judith came out of the South to marry New York's stiffest and most conventional young gentleman. Homesick for landscape (and also for deeper values—this is a Pictorial Review story) she took solace in a farmhouse and country garden, made it bring everything out right between herself and her husband. Decidedly one of the better romances.

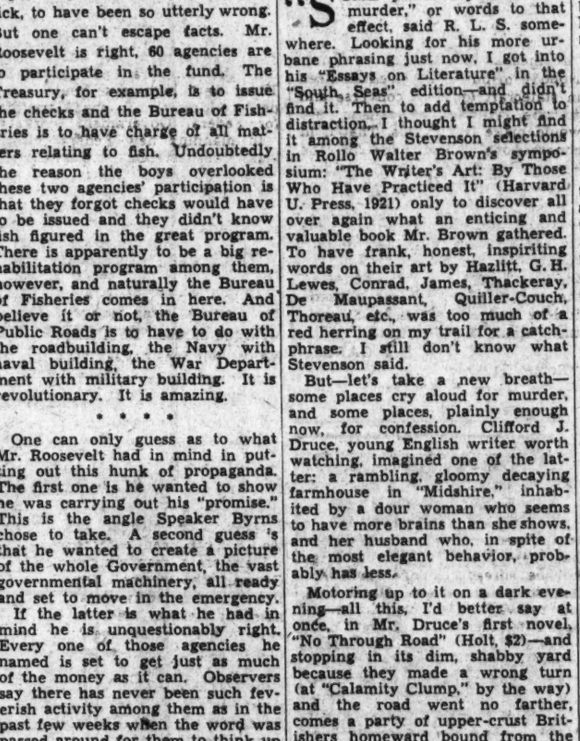
"Or Else a Park Bench" (Penn, $2)—another of these neatly conditional titles—is a tale with a certain contemporary ingenuity from the pen of Edwin Bateman Morris. Donna, on one side of town, and Paul, on the other, are on their uppers, close to their penultimate penny. When they get there, in steps a rich newspaperman and philanthropist (ha! the fine breath of fiction!) with a scheme for putting couples on abandoned farms. Donna and Paul draw the same house, must occupy it—or the delicate "Or Else——." So what starts in with a good deal of antagonism ends as you can guess. Neatly and amusingly told.

Next on the shelf comes "Lovers' Luck" (Penn, $2), and to show you what good fortune can be, it holds three brace of lovers—old Timothy and his childhood sweetheart; Brian, his heir, and Althea, the fiancee who just isn't worth our hero; and Felicity Ann, nurse to the old man, who romps in with the bacon—I mean, Brian. Gertrude Knevels tells the tale. The sweetening is nigh unto saturation.

If you happen to know any empyreally lovely and abysmally selfish Southern girl about town here, look up Mary Badger Wilson's "Borrowed Plumes" (Penn, $2). It has just such a heroine going about our fair city and getting—this should please you, if you know the type—what she deserves. Another couple, naturally, learn what true love is.

For romance in the West, sans sheriff, sans posse, sans gun-play, but not sans everything, try Agnes Louise Provost's "Hills of Destiny" (Macrae-Smith, $2). She really loves He, but She is a cold and cruel one, and it takes the little Mexican girl ("Bah! I fight for heem!") to bring She to her senses.

Or, better yet, Gipsy Clarke's "Out Yonder" (Crowell, $2)—the Western man and the Eastern girl who marry—and make a homestead in the painted deserts of Arizona. Sand storms and cattle drives give action, some excellent scene-painting gives distinction to this genuine and uncloying romance. I almost think I could recommend Mrs. Clarke's book to Dean Inge.



"How about giving that thing a toot? My battery's down!"

Longfellow Sentiment

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

A VERY interesting letter comes to me from the librarian of the Free Public Library of Camden, N. J. He refers to previous article of mine in this column on Longfellow.

You say: "There is a commonplaceness about Longfellow's sentiment and his moralizing that is not adapted to our ways of thinking."

If, in "our way of thinking," we have outgrown Longfellow's sentiment and moralizing, what should we think? Taking the present condition of mankind, we are not thinking at all, and we have lost the power to feel for our fellowmen.

What better sentiment and moralizing have you to offer, Doctor? Don't call me impertinent in that question . . . "Commonplaceness," you say. Are you disposed to tell me that I am an old-fashioned "Victorian"? . . .

Perhaps I am dense, or, it may be, that I am sitting on the platform of a flag station, back in the hills, while the train of modernism, which I missed, has long ago disappeared around a distant curve. Perhaps that is Modernism, a series of curves to get away from the old and straight road, which grows brighter to our feet as we near our destination.

Tell us again, and in detail, Doctor, what we are thinking, or should think, as a substitute for Longfellow's sentiment and moralizing.

With profound respect and admiration for you and your work, I am

Sincerely,

WILLIAM H. KETLER.

* * * *

I am very grateful to Mr. Ketler for so frank a question, which certainly demands an answer.

About a year ago, a British writer said that Longfellow was the most popular author in the English language. That is, he is more popular than Shakespeare or Milton or Byron or Pope or Dickens. This is probably true. Everybody who has read anything has read Longfellow, and he has been translated into all European and many Oriental languages.

It is my belief that he was a great poet—the sonnets on Dante, many other individual sonnets, the poem called "The Day Is Done" and other works, are really great poetry. But the very reason that made Longfellow instantly and eternally popular with young and old in all countries was his tendency to fall into the obvious, to write platitudes both in moral exhortation and in sentimental narrative.

* * * *

"The Psalm Of Life" is a good example of the one, and "Excelsior" is a good example of the other. "Life is real! Life is earnest!" Quite true; but isn't it a little like saying solemnly that two and two equal four? And doesn't the sentiment of "Excelsior" seem slightly ridiculous?

Perhaps I ought to have said in my original article not that we have outgrown Longfellow's sentiment and moralizing, but that we demand a fresher, a more original, a more challenging way of expressing sentiment and moralizing.

I agree with Mr. Ketler that Longfellow's sentiments and ethics are both true and not obsolete; but we reserve the highest rank in poetry for the poets who stimulate our thoughts rather than for those who soothe our senses.

Longfellow was a great poet, because he wrote at times far greater poetry than "The Psalm of Life" and "Excelsior," just as Kipling's reputation as a poet depends on far greater poetry than the moralizing if.

Engineer School Fete Takes Place Tomorrow

The banquet in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the George Washington University Engineering School will be held at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow evening and not tonight, as previously reported.

Dr. William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., will be the principal speaker. Buildings of the school will be open to the public today and tomorrow.

Boom In Automobiles Due To Lower Prices

By Elliott Thurston.

ONE dilemma leads to another. The latest, most miraculous proposal comes from Administrator Davis of the AAA. Because our exports of automobiles increased by 120 per cent last year while our exports of cotton declined 20 per cent, according to figures given out through the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Mr. Davis proposes to say, in effect, to foreign customers: "You must quit buying our automobiles and buy our cotton."

There is, perhaps another and even more fantastic way to solve the riddle that seems to be in Mr. Davis' mind. Why not plow under every third automobile? That would, no doubt, quickly drive up the price of automobiles to the point where no foreigner will be able to buy one—and precious few Americans.

For, clearly, the basic trouble in the automobile industry, judged by some New Deal standards, is that automobiles are too cheap. The result has been that the automobile industry has been leading the country out of the depression more than any other industry. Production is back to levels unapproached since the lush days of 1929. Wages have more than doubled in the industry. The quality of automobiles has steadily improved. Exports, as noted, increased by 120 per cent last year.

* * * *

NOW contrast this sad state of affairs with the cotton industry. Here the major objective was a high price. To that end, crops were plowed under. The processing taxes were applied to pay the producer for not producing. Higher prices were achieved. The results were just the opposite from those in the automobile business. New England is in a rage over the closing of more mills. The manufacturers are up in arms against the processing taxes. They want them abolished. They want Japan's increased but still minor (compared to our production) imports banned. They want wage differentials removed. Some manufacturers are moving to Brazil!

Not only have exports fallen off, but as our cotton has left world markets it has been supplanted by production in other nations. In time we may achieve the logical end of this policy—a fabulous price for a bale of cotton and the loss of every last customer, foreign and domestic. Already, the whole cotton industry is seriously, perhaps fatally, stricken, a victim of the delusion of high prices artificially achieved.

* * * *

STILL another contrast is to be found in the building industry. Leonard Ayres, of the Cleveland Trust Co., demonstrated not long ago that the retail price of the average automobile declined steadily from $1,662 in 1909 to about $678 in 1934. At the same time, he showed, the cost of the average one-family house increased from $2,173 in 1909 to $4,020 in 1934. And of course the results in housing have been quite like the results in cotton.

Housing has been and is at a standstill. Wages are high, in theory, and almost non-existent in actuality. The cost of materials is exhorbitant and scarcely anybody is buying them. The consequence is a vast unemployment, a denial of decent housing to countless millions of American citizens. The prostration in construction is another vivid example of the fallacy of prohibitive prices, just as the boom in the automobile industry evidences the soundness of non-artificial prices adjusted to consumption and capacity to pay.

* * * *

THE obsession with prices, as a major objective, is the more curious because so many prominent New Dealers know that it is wrong — that the promise of the more abundant life can not be realized by destroying the abundance. Prohibitive prices are perhaps the surest means of destroying production, as has been amply proved by experience in the cotton and building industries.

Conversely, the automobile industry by steadily lowering prices, until today, new lows and greater quality than ever have been attained, has demonstrated that this is the way to increased production, to recapture of world markets, to higher wages and to that distribution of wealth which politicians preach, but for the most part would defeat by their policies.

In testifying before the House Banking Committee on the pending banking act of 1935, Gov. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, repeatedly stressed the fallacy in artificial high prices. To get prices back by other than normal processes, he told the committee, "to get them back through an artificial restriction of production or the fixation of prices," is "not desirable." And he added—this being highly important: "In other words, to raise prices and reduce production does not add anything to the national wealth."

* * * *

IF the obvious lesson to be learned from the contrast between the boom in the automobile industry and the collapse in the cotton and building industries could only be absorbed by a few more New Dealers, the cost of the artificial high price follies might be worth paying.

But to suggest that the export of automobiles be spiked in a vain attempt to force cotton down the throats of foreign customers is, to say the least, to add fresh dilemmas to the overabundance of old ones.

"I don't know what to think. Mae says she never was in Formosa in her life."

"No, but you know how those opera singers are."

Just So-So.

Well, it seems that Miss Verna Long, recently voted "Miss Typical Consumer," met Roy L. Gray, chosen as "Mister Average Man." Their conversation was full of generalities, we understand, their tones moderate and their reception medium.

Hitch-hikers are showing so much resentment when refused a ride these days when Elmer Twitchell now stops the car and says, "I'm sorry the auto is so full that there's no room for you, but I'll get out and walk with you to show I mean well."

Hollywood is producing an all-midget picture. In response, probably, to the demand for more shorts.

Or maybe the use of dwarfs in pictures came as a result of a producer's fiat order to cut everything down.

Triduum Begins Today At Catholic University

A three-day triduum, during which public prayers will be offered for the preservation of world peace, will begin today at 10 a. m., when the Most. Rev. James H. Ryan, Bishop of Modra and rector of Catholic University, will celebrate a pontifical high mass in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the university campus.

Tomorrow the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, as representative of Archbishop Curley, also will celebrate a mass in the shrine at 10 a. m. The third and final pontifical mass will be celebrated Sunday by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognanni, apostolic delegate to the United States.

Phthisis Group Elects Dr. Ruhland to Board

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, was elected unanimously a member of the board of directors of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association at a meeting yesterday.

In accepting the post, Dr. Ruhland said:

"I recognize tuberculosis is the outstanding problem that we are confronted with in the District and I am very grateful for the assistance which the Tuberculosis Association gives the Health Department. I could not begin to undertake a campaign without this genuine assistance."

207 of Annapolis Class To Remain in Service

Two hundred and seven Navy ensigns of the 1933 Annapolis class will be retained in the naval service, it was announced yesterday at the Navy Department by Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

The young officers have been serving under two-year revocable commissions. Now their commissions will be made permanent. Secretary of the Navy Swanson has approved the findings of the Naval Examining Board, which retains the entire class.

Ernest L. Jahncke, jr., son of the former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and William V. Pratt 2d, nephew of Rear Admiral William V. Pratt, former chief of naval operations, are among the ensigns.

Four Counties Choose Dates In Spelling Bee

Stafford, Greene, Madison and King George Rush Plans for Match.

Four counties in Virginia yesterday announced the date of their matches to determine their champions who will take part in the area finals of the National Spelling Bee, sponsored by The Washington Post.

King George and Stafford counties, of which T. Benton Gayle is division superintendent, will hold a joint match in Falmouth High School, Friday, May 3, at 8 p. m. Use of the school has been made possible through the courtesy of William B. Bolton, principal.

While school champions from both counties will convene at Falmouth the same evening, the two matches will be run off separately. This will be done in order that the two prizes promised in each county can be awarded, and the two best spellers from each county will advance to the area finals.

Greene County Bee May 1.

A. Waverly Yowell, division superintendent of schools of Greene and Madison counties, yesterday set the dates for the spelling bees in these counties.

The Greene County bee will be held in Monroe High School, Standardsville, on Wednesday, May 1, at 8 p. m.

Madison County will hold its match in Madison High School, at Madison, on Thursday, May 9, at 8 p. m.

Mr. Yowell has advised schools eligible in his division of details of representation in these matches, which are to decide the county champions who will take part in the finals of the National Spelling Bee, sponsored by The Washington Post.

Schools in all four counties which have not enrolled are asked to notify The Post at once so that the word list can be sent to them.

14 More Enter.

Fourteen schools entered the contest yesterday. With the names of the principal or teacher who enrolled them, they are.

Shenandoah County — Pleasant Grove, Miss Katheryn Keller; Williamsville, Mrs. Cecile Litten; Kellers, Miss Lela Gardiner; Seven Fountains, C. H. Munch; Oak Ridge, Miss Helen Clinedinst.

St. Mary's—St. Joseph's Sisters of St. Joseph.

Winners Announced.

T. W. Trozell, principal of Gaithersburg High School, announces that Rachel Mussetter has won first place in the school match; Hazel Glover, second, and Margaret Costello and Marie Schwartzback tied for last place. As Gaithersburg is one of the schools that will be allowed four contestants in the Montgomery County match, all four pupils will take part in the contest.

Dorothy Trammell, seventh grade, and Muriel Trammell, sixth grade, will represeent Forestville School in the Fairfax County match, Miss Madeline Long reports.

In Orange County, Miss Forest Craun reports Paige Faulconer as winner in the Sunnyside School match.

Two phases of the contest are now in process; some schools are just entering; others are selecting their best spellers. Details of county matches may be obtained by writing Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, The Washington Post.

Perry Seeks Reelection As Mayor of Orange

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orange, Va., April 25.—Frank B. Perry has announced his candidacy for reelection as mayor in the municipal election of June 11. He will be opposed by Keesee Brooking, for a number of years county surveyor. Dr. Perry has served the town of Orange as mayor for 40 years.

Charles R. Butler, business man and contractor, has filed notice of his candidacy for the town council; A. O. Moeller is also a candidate for the same office.

Buckhannon Girl Named Wesleyan's May Queen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Buckhannon, W. Va., April 25.—Elected May Queen by popular vote of the student body, Miss Margaret Helen Watson, of Buckhannon, a senior, will reign over the May Day festivities at West Virginia Wesleyan College on May 6.

A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Watson, the brunette May Queen has been active in many campus organizations during her four years at Wesleyan. She is doing work on her master's degree and will be graduated in June.

Shopmen Granted Ballot Injunction

Luhring Bars Mediation Board From Vote.

An election dispute between the Shopmen's Association of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, the National Mediation Board and the American Federation of Labor was temporarily settled yesterday when Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in the District Supreme Court, granted the shopmen a preliminary injunction restraining the board from holding another election and at the same time dissolved a prior order restraining the A. F. of L. from waging a membership campaign among the carrier's employes.

The Shopmen's Association has been acting as representative of the company' employes in negotiations with the management. Not satisfied with that arrangement, the mediation board ordered an election, and then, after that was held, decreed another. At that point the dispute was carried into the District Supreme Court.

Justice Luhring's opinion will remain in force until the case can be tried at a full hearing next fall.

Post Carriers Start For N. Y. Outing

Holiday Includes Visit to Liner Aquitania.

Prepared for two days of sightseeing and adventure in New York, including a special trip through Radio City, and a visit to the Atlantic liner Aquitania, 60 Washington Post carrier salesmen left Washington yesterday morning on the B. & O. under the direction of Post circulation officials.

Two of these carrier-salesmen, J. C. Sharp, of Annapolis, and Aaron Steiner, of Hancock, Md., high men in the contest, were guests of David O. Hance, engineer, and Joe Conrad, firemen, riding in the big B. & O. locomotive during a part of the trip to New York.

On Saturday, May 4, 100 carrier-salesmen, also from the country division of The Post circulation department, will visit Washington as guests of The Post. An aerial tour of Washington in the Goodyear blimp Enterprise will be the feature of this visit, which will include trips to the Capitol, the Rock Creek Zoo, the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and the White House.

"HOLY SMOKES, MA! THEY STAY CRISP!"

GUARANTEE

"If you are not delighted with Kellogg's Wheat Krispies, just return the empty package and your money will be cheerfully refunded."

W. K. Kellogg
OF BATTLE CREEK

RECENTLY, you received a free sample of the new Kellogg's Wheat Krispies. As soon as you taste this new cereal, you know why the Kellogg Company selected samples to introduce this unusual product.

Just pour milk or cream on Kellogg's Wheat Krispies. And taste them! They actually keep their crackling crispness—right down to the last delicious spoonful!

It's never been done before

That's a brand-new feature. For years the vast Kellogg kitchens have experimented with whole wheat in various forms.

Just recently, came the BLENDING idea. As coffee is blended from berries that grow in different parts of the world—so a ready-to-eat cereal was blended. Different combinations of grains were tried until, finally, this new cereal was created with surpassing crispness and flavor.

Just enough rice is blended with whole wheat to make a marvelous difference in crunchy goodness. Wheat Krispies have something that no wheat cereal ever had before. Buy a big package from your grocer. Enjoy them often for nourishment. For flavor. For new lasting crispness. Always oven-fresh and ready to eat. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Chest Trustees Named; Willett Makes Report

Director Urges Flexible Programs; Thanks Voiced for Cooperation.

Picturing the Community Chest as the focal point for the co-ordination of all the city's welfare interests, Herbert L. Willett, jr., director, stressed the need for flexibility in the programs of Chest agencies to meet changing needs in his report made at the organization's annual meeting yesterday.

Willett paid tribute to the service being rendered by public agencies and by other groups without the Chest. The director pointed out that an essential part of the Chest's work is the collection of pledges. The Washington Chest, he said, can not report as high a percentage of collections as is possible in other cities. The reason, he indicated, seems to lie in the transiency of the population.

Thanks Voiced for Aid.

Clarence Phelps Dodge, Chest president, expressed the appreciation of the board of trustees to the city's newspapers and radio stations for co-operation. He also thanked the Board of Public Welfare and the Council of Social Agencies.

"I would like to see the Community Chest become the central clearing house for all welfare work in the Capital," Mr. Dodge said. "Only as the Chest cultivates a community-mindedness—only as it becomes big enough to interest itself in all efforts to relieve the needs of its citizens, will it function at its best."

William J. Flather, jr., treasurer, reported that it would be necessary to borrow $135,000 in order to pay the agencies during the year. He pointed out that in 1934 it was necessary to borrow $163,000 in order to finish out that year. The smaller sum necessary this year, he indicated, is due to economies and earnings on endowments.

Annual Election Held.

The annual election of the board of trustees was held. Each of the 64 agencies nominated one board member and one staff member, while the nominating committee presented the names of another 123 persons, representing the contributors. The following were elected:

The Best Dog Is—The Commoner

In concluding the best dog series, The Post offers an interesting climax that should appeal to many of its readers. All dogs, it is agreed, are good, and the mongrel has a high place on the list. In fact, as the following article shows, there is esteem aplenty for the chap without a pedigree.

Fred Lees, attorney in the solicitor's office of the Department of Agriculture, likes a fox terrier, an English bull terrier and a collie—all in one, thank you.

Any one of these three breeds are grand dogs, but if they happen to be combined in one dog, then, and then alone, have you got an unbeatable combination of brains and beauty. Mr. Lees never had a dog until he had Billie, 10-year-old specimen of the above breeding. And he declares he'll never have another unless it is just plain mutt.

There have been many rooters of pedigreed dogs, but none that The Post reporter has interviewed in the past three months has been more enthusiastic than this lawyer, who lives at 3105 Garfield street, for his mongrel. The owners of the so-called canine aristocrats may exhibit their dogs at shows and proudly boast of blue ribbons. Mr. Lees shows his pet on the boardwalk of Atlantic City or along Fifth Avenue.

"Billie's mother came to us over 10 years ago," Mr. Lees explained. "She was part wire haired and part bull terrier, as far as we or Dr. Buckingham could judge. Billie's father was a pedigreed collie. Billie looks like a small-sized collie with a terrier head.

"Our pet is a handsome dog, with a beautiful collie-like coat of white and red. People are always asking me what he is and I always tell them 'just mutt.' He is beautifully marked, with one side of his face white and the other brown.

"As for intelligence, well I don't think any pedigreed dog can stand up with Billie for smartness," Mr. Lees continued. "We have never trained him to do tricks, yet he always goes after the paper and the mail, bringing them back to wherever Mrs. Lees is in the house. He knows certain days of the week quite definitely. He will refuse to get into the car on Thursday night because he knows that we go out for dinner on that night and he will have to wait for us. Any other night, he is crazy to go for a ride. He never gets excited when I get ready to go to the office except on Sundays, when he knows that he is going out with me. When I tell Billie I am going to the market, he refuses to go along—he has an awful aversion to being left alone in the car at any time.

"I could go on and tell you enough stories to fill columns about Billie's intelligence, but I'll just say what I said before," Mr. Lees concluded. "The mutt is the best dog."

'Healer' in Court, Cancels Lectures

Bragg Gets Continuance Until Today.

In deference to "wishes of the court," Prof. Paul C. Bragg, self-styled healer of physical ills—faced with charges of violating the District healing arts practice act—will discontinue his lectures on health secrets of the South Sea Islands until "matters are straightened out," he announced reluctantly yesterday.

Prof. Bragg was arraigned before Police Court Judge Ralph Given, and at the request of his attorney, Herbert H. Grossman, was granted a continuance until this morning. Maximum penalty on the count is a $100 fine, 90 days in jail, or both.

Prof. Bragg was arrested Wednesday night in his dressing room at the Masonic Auditorium, Thirteenth street and New York avenue northwest, as he was preparing to deliver a lecture. Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, said Prof. Bragg was arrested in a drive to end illicit healing practices.

Sea Monster 'Like a Monkey' Reported by Drinkless Crew

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, April 25.—Another tale of a strange sea denizen, this time a creature which one observer said looked like a monkey when it blinked, was brought to the Seattle water front today by the startled crew of a fishing boat.

Made credulous by the many stories of a sea serpent supposedly inhabiting Puget Sound, the fishermen told how they encountered the queer-looking object of marine life off Vancouver Island.

Capt. Fred Hovick, master of the fishing schooner Bolinda and his crew of six men vowed they sighted the freak at 8 a. m., April 16, swimming about 50 feet off the starboard bow.

"We were all cold sober, without a drop of liquor on the boat," said Hovick, who has fished in the Pacific for 30 years.

"It was of ashen gray with a round head like a man and very small eyes," related the skipper.

"We looked at each other with inquiring glances as if to say: 'Do you see what I do?'

"The crew prepared a lasso made out of fishing lines with the thought of capturing the queer-looking fellow, but he disappeared beneath the waves before we could launch a boat.

"However, he reappeared three different times astern, whipping the sea with his tail. I judge he was from 12 to 15 feet in length.

"Some of us thought he was a mermaid and one fisherman said he looked like a monkey when he blinked his eyes. He had no shoulders or arms, but a large mouth.

"I have been in all parts of Alaska and as far South as Panama and never saw anything like it before."

Capt. Hovick added that recently he has been seeing in the north Pacific strange round fish which usually inhabit waters off Mexico and Central America. California tuna, he said, are appearing in increased quantities off the mouth of the Columbia River.

Could Not Identify Kidnaper, June Admits

Tucson, Ariz., April 25 (AP).—Standing on the spot where she was abducted just a year ago, June Robles, 7, said today she would be unable now to identify the man who kidnaped her in a dilapidated sedan.

It is the country's only major unsolved abduction.

Assault Convict Granted Reprieve

Nice Stays Hanging Until Other Suspect's Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 25.—A few hours before he was to hang in the Maryland Penitentiary, William Harold, colored, was granted a 30-day reprieve today by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Harold, alias Alexander Jones, was convicted of assaulting a white girl near Chevy Chase, Md., last September. The Governor granted the stay of execution pending the trial of George Poindexter, arrested this week.

Poindexter, Harold said at his trial, committed the actual attack. The two were indicted together, but Poindexter was not apprehended until after Harold had been sentenced.

Brooke Johns' Maryland Barn Ready to Open

By Kay Ware.

"The whole Johns family invites you out to the Old Barn."

So reads the menu, and so says Brooke Johns, who is all full of spring vigor and new gags, and very excited about the Barn's opening tomorrow night.

"I'll tell you there's always a crowd at the Old Barn," he chortles, "we feed the family first and the guests can have what's left over. But seriously, we're serving the best spring chicken. It's terrific.

"I'll tell you the country is a great place. Except for the well water. I'm a little rusty from drinking it."

But when Brooke quiets down enough to talk business you discover that the Barn will serve special fried chicken dinners from 5:30 to 8 daily, and a luncheon from 12 noon to 2:30. If you make a reservation you can get a special Sunday morning breakfast.

Dancing will be nightly from 9 until 1. Horses for hire if you're kind to the horses. Special attention to private parties, banquets, smokers, bridge teas, etc.

And best of all, Brooke hints that he'll open an out-door dance floor on the terrace.

Remember, the opening's tomorrow night. Location: ten miles out Seventh Street pike to Norbeck, Md.

La Paree opens today with a new revue headed by the comedy dance team, Herwyn and Miller, and backed up by a parade of eight Broadway girls, all of whom are on the job with specialty acts.

Marie Fowler and Ray Beck do well with vocals, Emory Daugherty continues with danceable tunes. That lad has a sense of rhythm that is rare and inspiring.

One of the funniest impromptu acts of the week occurred last Sunday at the Madrillon. Seems that the evening had waxed well on in time, and Leon Brusiloff stepped up and introduced a lad—nobody was sure who he was. He turned out to be a hog-caller—stood on the floor and called hogs, sheep, and cows.

Child's high-spot is Dotty Rozelle, pianist and singer. Her favorite number is "St. Louis Blues," and favorites of her guests are war-time songs, "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "My Buddy" and the like.

Another "Melancholy Baby," crops up and this time it's sung by Fenton Froom, at the Willard's Bamboo Room. Thus making Ernestine Gardner "a girl singer with individuality."

Two most intimate cocktail lounges in town—the Carlton and the Washington Tap Room. Both make you feel rested and festive at the same time.

Shoreham's offering of the week is the Royal Palm Revue, with a group of Ziegfeld beauties all dressed up in feather fans. Alma and Roland are the dance team. Eddie Collis the master of ceremonies.

Held over for another week at the Heigh-Ho are Elizabeth Houston and Danny Harden singing new songs and dancing new dances.

Napoleon's entertainment is now featuring Ann Arlen trio—Ann Arlen, violin and vocal, Peggy Hurdle, piano and vocal, and Dick Sweeney, saxophonist. The mysterious Frenchman who has sung "Dites Moi Ma Mere" several times at Napoleon's, by request of friends, is one Monsieur Raymond. The last name still is a secret.

At Hi-Hat they're keeping tabs on the type of drinks sold. With warm weather coming on there'll be demand for mint juleps—sometimes as many as 600 a night. And that doesn't include all the other nice long beverages served there.

Last week Mrs. Ben Lindas, of San Antonio, tried out a nice contralto voice with the Hawaiians as accompanists.

Another sign of spring—the steamer Potomac leaves Sixth and Water Street Dock for a 70-mile cruise down the "historic Potomac."

Today and tomorrow the Mayfair presents a singer of whom they are very proud. Ethel Barrymore Colt, daughter of the great actress, will entertain from 3:30 to 5:30, during cocktail hour.

Wife of Peabody Heir Wins Nevada Divorce

Carson City, Nev., April 25 (AP).—Frederick Griffith Peabody, heir to the Peabody shirt manufacturing millions, was divorced by Mrs. Gladys Ruth Peabody, San Francisco and New York socialite, at a private hearing today before District Judge Clark J. Guild.

She charged cruelty.

They were married August 7, 1926, in San Francisco. A property settlement was approved by the court. Its terms were not disclosed.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

New York, April 25.

The other night I thought back to the greatest thrill I'd ever received, the day that the postmaster at Port Chester, N. Y., appointed me to deliver the special delivery letters that came into our town. It doesn't sound like an impressive job, but every kid in the village had tried to get it. For each special delivery letter, the deliverer received 10 cents. In one week I made $3.20, which was a lot of money in 1915. A special delivery letter, in those days, created as much excitement as the arrival of a telegram. Both of them were resorted to only in cases of vast importance. But whether the news was good or bad, I got 10 cents for every receipt, and whether they laughed or cried, I wouldn't let them go until they had signed my book. At least, I didn't charge any more for happiness than I charged for sorrow. The other night I sat with my friend Postmaster General James A. Farley at the Central Park Casino.

* * * *

Four of us dined at the Rockefeller Rainbow Room Sunday evening. A fine organist played the famous color organ, and as he pressed certain keys, the lights in the domed ceiling changed from green to red to blue to orange. In response to the pressure of his fingers. I thought of the organ that I used to pump in the Church of Our Lady of Mercy too many years ago. It was a wheezing, hand-pumped affair, standing in a choir loft that was filled with ramshackle benches and torn hymn books. Standing in the rear of this wooden monster, I'd pump a handle up and down and the bellows would breathe air into the pipes, permitting my sister to play. Every third time you'd pump the handle down, the organ would let out a hideous moan as though possessed of evil spirits. I received modest pay for this religious chore, my sister giving me a nickel each Sunday. But I never could save the weekly nickels. Easy come, easy go.

Tuesday night Arnold Reuben, famous restaurateur, showed me through the kitchen of his new place. He pointed out the bakery, downstairs. I thought of the nights that I'd worked, as a kid, in the Port Chester Baking Co., which was owned by the father of a schoolmate of mine, Joe Butzbach. He worked once a week on Friday night, for the big rush came Saturday. We got $2.50 apiece for the night's work, reporting at midnight and working until 9 the following morning. It was very thrilling, and when they assigned me to throw the crumbs on the crumb-cake the first night, I was very happy. The pan of cake would emerge from the oven. With a huge brush I'd wash it over lightly with milk. Then I'd scatter handfuls of crumbs on top. I worked seven weeks at it and I've never had an appetite for pastry since then.

Don, the doorman in our apartment house, has just delivered the morning papers, which in New York are printed the preceding evening. The papers are folded neatly in half. It reminds me of the days when I had a newspaper route in Port Chester for Tom Connolly, who owned the town's biggest newspaper store. Every house had a porch, and it took considerable marksmanship to stand on the sidewalk and scale the folded papers so that they landed exactly on the doormat. In the winter months, when it got dark too early, I died a hundred deaths every night when invading King street estates where the rich people lived. Every tree was a potential ruffian, cutlass in hand, ready to possess himself of my salary of $1 a week.

There is a letter on my desk from George Hughes, reminding me of a benefit at Greenwich, Conn. When I caddied at the Apawamis Club, Rye, I never dreamed I'd be able to do him a favor. He was the caddymaster and master of all he surveyed. We looked up to him for another reason. He was the town's drum-major, and in every parade he'd twirl that baton better than I've ever seen it twirled since. When he won the New York State drum-major championship one year, it didn't surprise me or Gene Sarazen, another caddy, half as much as it surprised all of us when Sarazen won the United States Open championship.

At the dinner to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey two nights ago, he introduced me to John Borg, publisher of the Bergen Evening Record. "I'm just the editor of a small paper," said Mr. Borg pleasantly, "and you're a columnist." My memory shot back to the small paper on which I started, the Port Chester Daily Item, with a daily circulation of 3,900 copies. I started as its sports editor at $12 a week, and on the side covered board of trustees meetings, reported obituaries, whist and bridge parties and police court news. I did all my writing in longhand. I'll never forget the shocked surprise in the New York Evening Mail ocne when Jacob Jacowitz, the school editor, hired me and then learned I couldn't operate a typewriter. "What paper did you say you worked on?" he asked suspiciously. "The Port Chester Daily Item," I told him. He looked at me long and hard, and said: "Well, I'll be damned."

Dominica Seizes 4 On Ship, Is Report

Removal of Ex-Officials Is Told by Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, April 25.—Passengers aboard the steamer Borinquen, which called here today, said Dominican authorities yesterday recalled the vessel when she was an hour out of Santo Domingo and forcibly removed four former Dominican officials aboard.

Armed men boarded the ship, the passengers said, and ordered the quartet off.

The four, according to the passengers' story, were Maximo L. Vazquez, former Minister to France; Juan Esteban Bunols, former Consul at Boston; Felix Servio Ducoudray, former cabinet minister, and Jose Antonio Bonilla, former judge advocate.

The former Dominican officials were en route to Puerto Rico when they were detained, it was stated.

1 'Drunk' Plus 3 Arrests Equals a Fine of $20

William B. Bayles was arraigned yesterday before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in Police Court on intoxication charges.

Bayles, it was testified, was arrested Wednesday in the Second Precinct. He posted $10 collateral on drunkenness charges. A few hours later he was arrested in the Third Precinct. Again he posted $10. Not long after that, in the First Precinct, he was again picked up. By this time he was out of money and he spent the night in a cell.

Judge Hitt held that all three arrests resulted from just one "drunk," and fined Bayles $10 each on two counts and suspended sentence on the third.

Vacation Lets Scouts Launch Camp Activity

Roosevelt and Wilson Sites are Thronged; Capitol Unit Sets Hike.

Camping, the thing uppermost in the thoughts of the 4,000 Scouts in Washington and vicinity, is having its seasonal inaugural this week during the Easter school holidays.

The Council Camps on the Chesapeake Bay and the Woodrow Wilson Reservation at Burnt Mills, Md., and many troop camps, are alive with Scouts getting their first camping experience of a season which will be full of opportunities.

The traditional camporees, which are overnight patrol camping contests, get under way Saturday, May 11, when the Fourth Division patrols demonstrate their camping ability at Camp Wilson, Burnt Mills, Md. The following week, May 18, four more divisions, the White House, Arlington; Montgomery and Fairfax counties will hold their camporees, and on May 25 six more divisions, the Cathedral, Potomac, Chevy Chase, Red Skin, Capitol and Fourteenth will assemble for their overnight camping demonstration.

Saturday, June 1, has been set tentatively for the council camporee, when all patrols rating "standard" in their divisional contests will meet in one large final demonstration.

Camp Improvements Planned.

Preparations are going forward in many troops for development of new troop camps or further development of camps already established. Among these are Troop 5's Camp; Troop 8, Camp Livingston; Troop 14, Camp Jennings; Troop 72, Camp Thompson; Troop 52, Camp Seneca, and Troop 150, Camp Annadale.

The Capitol Division is having an overnight hike at Camp Wilson Saturday and Sunday. The division has also announced an "advancement effort" running from April 1 to July 1. The Fourteenth Division is holding a rally and the Montgomery County Division an inspection Saturday afternoon at the Chevy Chase High School.

Troop 97 won the Capitol Division inspection last week, with Troops 45 and 85 in second and third places, respectively. William Rohrer is scoutmaster of Troop 97; Philip Piece of Troop 45, and L. M. Pace of Troop 85.

Executives' Seminar.

A scout executives' seminar is being held next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Harrington Hotel. Executives from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia are participating. The sessions will include completion of a course of studies which have been made by the executive group; a conference on cubbing with William C. Wessel, national director of cubbing, and a tour over the camp site for the national jamboree. J. Wallace Talley, assistant executive of the District of Columbia Council, is chairman of the seminar.

At the Court of Honor and Court of Review last Saturday in the Powell Junior High School, the following scouts advanced in rank:

Advanced to first class—Troop 2, George Carter; Troop 12, Thomas Lawson, Jack Hardy, Robert Dinger; Troop 10, Ray Gustafson; Troop 33, Evan Fisher; Troop 40, Weston Carroll; Troop 43, Harrison Messgrie, Brown Hill and Marvin Anderson; Troop 51, Richard Mouser; Troop 54, Richard Hufty; Troop 209, William Howard, Jr., and David Crompton.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

The Washington Post.

D. C. Society Says Adieu To Mrs. Mann

Daughter of Minister From South Africa to Sail Today.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The party given yesterday afternoon by the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph W. Close was delightful, but withal a bit sad, for it was given as a farewell to their daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Mann, who will leave today for New York, whence she will sail tonight aboard the Aquitania to join her husband, Capt. Mann, R. N., in England. Mrs. Mann has been visiting her parents for several months and during the course of her stay in this country has become a favorite member of Washington society.

In the drawing room where Mrs. Close and her daughter received the guests were bowls of multi-colored flowers, English daisies most of them, bright and spring-like. Mrs. Close wore a gown of deep blue lace and a corsage of white orchids, and Mrs. Mann was in an afternoon frock of brightly flowered crepe, fashioned with long-fitted sleeves and a flowing skirt. Nearby stood the minister, always a genial and charming host. Guests were everywhere, for all who were invited had come to bid farewell to Mrs. Mann. Diplomats, officials and members of residential society gathered in the drawing rooms and dining room, and many stood in groups in the hallway. In the dining room there was a long buffet of appetizers and delicious hot hors d'ouevres were passed by smart maids in wine-colored uniforms.

From the British Embassy came a large group of guests, including Mrs. Harry O. Chalkley, wife of the Commercial Counselor, who wore a spring frock of rose pink crepe trimmed with a band of beige fox, and a soft felt hat to match; the First Secretary and Mrs. Arthur Wiggin, the latter wearing a black ensemble; Mr. Philip Mainwaring Broadmead, First Secretary, and Maj. and Mrs. Harry Frank Heywood, the former Commercial Secretary of the embassy. With them was Miss Christian Hedley, sister of Mrs. Heywood, in a youthful brown taffeta suit.

Ambassador There.

From the Italian Embassy there were the Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso, smiling and dapper; the Marchioness Rossi Longhi, wife of the counselor, in deep red crepe; the Naval Attache and the Marchioness di Sant'Orsola, the latter in navy blue.

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable were there, and the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Social Republics, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, answering the inquiries of all about Mme. Troyanovsky, who has been suffering with the unromantic but painful mumps; the Counselor of the Embassy and Mme. Skvirsky and Admiral Paul Oras, Naval Attache of the Soviet Embassy.

From the Cabinet there were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, with her daughter, Miss Grace Roper, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Roper, and Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General.

Others glimpsed were the lovely Mme. van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands, just back from Havana and Florida, and wearing a smart costume of navy blue; Mme. Wadsted, wife of the Minister of Denmark, in black with a wide-brimmed hat to match; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Associate Justice Stone, chatting with Mrs. Warren R. Austin, wife of Senator Austin, and nearby the Senator himself, deep in conversation. Also seen were Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama; Mme. Sze, wife of the Minister of China, in a handsomely embroidered tunic of deep blue; the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal, Mme. Petroff Tchomakoff, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria, with her sister-in-law, Mlle. Marie Petroff; Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, in a black-and-white printed crepe; Mrs. Harry Baxter and Miss Betsy Dern, daughters of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern; Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment, the latter in a navy blue frock with a charming jabot of pale pink net, and a large blue hat trimmed with pink gardenias; Representative and Mrs. George Burnham, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph K. Taussig.

There was a large group of young people there, including Miss Florence Harris, the counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Dr. Josef Nemeck, and the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens, the latter wearing a black frock and a charming hat of red grosgrain which she said was an Easter gift from her modiste.

Mrs. Swanson to Fete Mrs. Garner on May 23

Mrs. John Nance Garner is the guest in whose honor Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, will entertain at luncheon May 23.

Virginia Jordan, G. M. Maynard Wed in Chapel

Bethlehem Chapel of the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday at noon when Miss Virginia Lorraine Jordan became the bride of Mr. George Mandsley Maynard. The Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, D. D., dean of the cathedral, officiated

The bride wore a gown of two-piece lace with a three-quarter length jacket with long, tight-fitting sleeves, which finished in points over her hand. The high neckline in front was tied at the back. With this she wore a large white horsehair hat with a shallow crown, trimmed with a white velvet ribbon and a white carnation on the left side under the brim.

Mrs. Linwood P. Safford, sister of the bride, who was the matron of honor, wore a gown of yellow mousseline do soie with a large yellow picture hat and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses and blue spring flowers. The best man was Mr. William Westlake, and the ushers were Mr. Robert Pfahler and Mr. Linwood P. Safford.

Mr. Maynard is on the office staff of the cathedral and is also connected with All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church.

Various Types Of Wry Neck Are Described

Congenital Phase in Young Infants Curable by Tedious Process.

By Dr. Irving S. Gutter.

WE ALL have seen cases of wry-neck, or torticollis, which is described as a pulling and turning of the head to one side of the body. Sometimes children will exhibit the symptom almost from birth. This is called congenital torticollis and, fortunately, is rare. There is a change in that part of the spinal column that forms the neck. Occasionally the condition appears, after the child has reached the age of 6 or 8 years, as a result of tuberculosis of the spine or an acute inflammation of the muscles, rheumatic in type.

Nervous Phenomenon.

When the condition appears in young infants and is of moderate degree, it may be corrected by methodically stretching the muscle of the shortened side. This is a long and tedious process and requires cooperation and patience on the part of the parents.

Spasmodic torticollis is a nervous phenomenon characterized by jerking movements of the head toward one side. It is frequently found in women in whom there is a family history of nervous disease.

The onset of this form of the disease (spasmodic) is, as a rule, insidious. At first there may be scarcely recognizable symptoms with only rarely a feeling of stiffness or a drawing sensation in the neck. This may be followed by a momentary pulling of the head to one side. Usually the symptoms are noticeably exaggerated during periods of excitement and disappear during rest.

Still Another Type.

Another type of torticollis is known as acute or rheumatic. This may come on suddenly as the result of infection or exposure to cold. It is sometimes extremely painful and the muscles of the affected side of the neck may be tender to the touch. This form of the disease yields readily to treatment and may disappear as quickly as it appeared.

At any rate, relief from the chronic condition was infrequent until the operative procedure, originally devised by W. W. Keen and somewhat modified by later surgeons, was employed.

Copyright, 1935.

Among the most scintillating women speakers brought to Washington by the New Deal was Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillen.

Rep. Kahn Sees Mastery Developed Through Necessity.

The politician who started his speech with a joke (generally about "the two Irishmen") and worked himself into a lather before he reached his pompous peroration is now out-dated. In his place is a more logical, more stimulating type of speaker who recognizes the difference between the stage and the stump. Have women politicians kept abreast of the changing trends in oratory? This is the fourth of a series on women public speakers.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHILE SOME WOMEN are born to be orators and others aspire to the platform, women politicians have public speaking thrust upon them.

"So we soon get used to it," said Representative Florence Kahn, "the genial gentlewoman from California," who is a familiar figure on the floor of the House, who has put through bills even when her male colleagues thought "it couldn't be done," and who believes teaching school is a good preparation for public speaking.

Considering their lack of experience in public life, women are making remarkable strides as speakers in Mrs. Kahn's opinion. "But a woman must still be twice as good as a man in order to 'get by,'" she said, her eyes twinkling.

"Furthermore, people today demand facts instead of words." She further believes those facts must be stated briefly ("I never speak longer than five minutes at a time") and in simple words ("flowery language is a remnant of the 'dark ages' of oratory"); that the modulation of one's voice is important; that any successful speaker must impress her listeners with her sincerity, and must be careful "not to arouse their antagonism."

Spontaneity Stressed.

Mrs. Kahn also convinced that a memorized speech loses the quality of spontaneity that a good address must have. For this reason she never commits her own speeches to memory and rarely writes them out.

Although she is noted for her sparkling wit, Mrs. Kahn is careful never to resort to the moth-worn device of punctuating her speeches with frivolity. "But when I'm heckled and can think of a pungent retort, I don't mind using it," she admitted.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, is another Congresswoman who is convinced "people are too harassed to listen to oratory. They want plain facts stated in the simplest terms," she said. "I try to remember that each time I plan a speech."

Rep. Norton Never Nervous.

Next to "knowing your subject," Mrs. Rogers believes a good voice is essential to a public speaker because "no matter how well you know your facts, you can't impress an audience unless you can make yourself heard."

"Have you ever been heckled?" Mrs. Rogers was asked.

"Yes," she replied, a smile curving her soft mouth. "But I don't allow hecklers to upset me. I try to answer each question as if it were asked merely for information and not to confuse me."

One of the most sought-after speakers in Congress, Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, had no formal training as a public speaker before she went into politics, but admits she has "always liked to talk." Perhaps this accounts for the fact that once she is started on a speech she is never nervous. "I have all my 'stage-fright' before I get on the platform," she said. "After the first sentence, I feel perfectly at home and forget all about myself."

Mrs. Norton rarely writes out a speech. She sometimes makes notes but rarely uses them. "Something that happens at a meeting, a remark from another speaker, or a question from the audience, will remind me of something I'd rather talk about," she said.

Listing qualities she considers essential to forceful public speaking, Mrs. Norton mentioned "a good voice—not loud, but with plenty of timber—a thorough knowledge of one's subject, and a sincerity of purpose."

Before 1928 Representative Virginia Jenckes of Indiana never made a public address. But when she became head of a farmer's organization she knew she had to learn to speak. "Despite my lack of preparation, however, I wasn't perturbed," she said. "I knew I had something to say and could speak the language of the farmer. I tried to talk slowly enough to be understood and to make my speeches as conversational as possible."

Among some of the best women speakers she has ever heard, Mrs. Jenckes lists Mrs. Carol Miller (a sister of Senator Joseph F. Guffey) and Miss Stella Akin, special assistant to the United States Attorney General.

Seldom Lack Attention.

Modern men are not, as a rule, prejudiced against women public speakers, in the opinion of Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona. "The traditional chivalry of men keeps them even more attentive when a woman is on the floor of the House," she said. "From what I have observed, men in Congress don't expect women to be any worse—or any better—than their male colleagues."

One of the most popular women speakers in Washington, Mrs. Greenway never fails to impress her listeners with her enthusiasm and her sincerity. In these respects she is very much like the woman whom she mentioned as "the best woman speaker I ever heard"—Mrs. Douglas Robinson (a sister of Theodore Roosevelt), whom she described as having "a beautiful intelligence, a humor that has never been surpassed, and kindness that spoke louder than words."

Tomorrow—More modern women speakers.

Representative Florence P. Kahn, "the genial gentlewoman from California," has gained much favorable attention for her brief and impressive speeches on the floor of the House.

Rep. Norton Stresses Good Voice and 'Sincerity of Purpose.'

Feminist Triumph in Turkey Presents 'Old Maid' Problem, But Not as America Knew It

By Malvina Lindsay,

THE FEMINIST sweep in Turkey has brought to that country a previously unheard-of problem—that of the old maid, reports Selman Ekrem, Turkish writer and lecturer and daughter of a former Governor of Jerusalem.

• • • •

Turkish women, no doubt, are finding some difficulty making their readjustments, now that they are outside the protecting walls of the harem. But Turkey need not fear that in the long run its spinsters will cause it any worry. To speak of the "old maid problem" in terms of economics seems a joke. For never has any class been less of a burden on state or community than has that group that the world derisively calls "old maids."

• • • •

Certainly in this country the old maid has always managed to pay her way. Even back in the period of her disgraceful economic peonage she earned her keep ten times over. Invariably she took care of the old folks so her brothers could marry and found families; and later in the home of her nearest male relative she became the household drudge. She looked after the children, nursed the sick, gave up her bed to visitors, entertained the bores, and performed most of the chores that nobody else wanted to do. In most instances she was the backbone of the home.

WHEN THE ECONOMIC world was opened to women the old maid was the first to go out and make good in it. First she taught school. Then she invaded business and the professions. Aged parents were supported by her earnings, weak-kneed brothers-in-law were reinforced by her aid, nieces and nephews were educated through her savings. During the depression her industry and thrift frequently kept two or three households going.

• • • •

There are few adults of today who have not been aided and blessed in some way or another by spinster relatives. Today's adult generation especially is indebted to the old maid because the period of its youth—the late 90's and the early twentieth century—saw her in her most ambitious and sacrificial mood. Her newly found personal and economic liberty she used lavishly for the enrichment of others.

• • • •

For that matter, the world is especially indebted to the old maid. To her it owes much of its cultural, educational and humanitarian advance. To a spinster queen, England is beholden for much of the glory of the Elizabethan age. To such spinster writers as Jane Austen, Charlotte Bronte (who made her literary achievement before she was married) and to Emily Dickinson literature is forever obligated. To Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton and later to such women as Jane Addams and Lillian Wald the suffering and the underprivileged owe eternal gratitude. To Susan B. Anthony and Anna Howard Shaw women of today owe much of their economic and political self-expression.

THE OLD MAID probably will appear in Turkey in modernized version, judging by the phenomenal progress Turkish women are making in entering business and official life and in breaking down time-worn conventions. And thus she may escape much of the ridicule and stigma that spinsters up to recent years suffered in the American social scene.

• • • •

She may escape the patronage of smug wives and the superiority of "advanced" youngsters. She may escape being the butt of every political orator's trick and the victim of every parlor trick. She may be able to keep a cat or adopt a baby, to go in for music, painting or the collection of hairpins, to wear fussy clothes or plain ones, to be giggly or prime, to smoke or not to smoke, to drink or not to drink, without being card-indexed by labelists or becoming data for amateur psychoanalysts.

• • • •

Yes, it is unlikely that Turkey will ever know old maids in the sense that England and America of the last two centuries have known them. Unmarried women of today are adopting a philosophy that calls for more self-expression—some call it selfishness—than sublimation. They are showing less of a tendency to make sacrifices of themselves. Turkey probably will never know the wistful, gallant, self-effacing figure of the maiden aunt. And thus she will miss a great spiritual blessing.

Women of D.C. Will Attend P.-T. A. Parley

District President Heads Delegation to Miami Session Next Week.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA Parent-Teacher Association will be represented at the thirty-ninth annual convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, opening Monday at the Miami Biltmore Hotel, Miami, Fla., by Mrs. L. B. Castell, District State president; Mrs. Arthur Birney, first State vice president; Mrs. William T. Bannerman, adult education chairman of the District, and Miss Ellen Lombard, home education chairman of the local group.

The theme of the convention program will be "Home the Index to National Life."

To Present Secession Play.

"Uncle Sam's Troublesome Daughters," a play of the secession of the States, will be presented by the Maj. Charles M. Steadman Chapter, United Children of The Confederacy, at 8 o'clock tonight at the Confederate Memorial Home, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest.

The proceeds from this entertainment will go toward the purchasing of a portrait of Robert E. Lee to be presented to the Army Engineers School at Fort Humphreys, Va.

Junior Alliance Plays Tonight.

The Junior Alliance of All Souls' Church will present two one-act plays tonight in Pierce Hall under the direction of Miss Helen Nicolay.

One of the plays to be given will be "The Princess Marries the Page" by Edna St. Vincent Millay.

The other play, "And the Lamp Went Out," will be played by Lois Gish, Jean Evans, Barbara Schmidt, Oma Hackstaff and Mary Hackstaff.

G. O. P. Women to Hear Myer.

Dr. Walter E. Myer, director of the Civic Education Service, will speak before the League of Republican Women today at 11:30 a. m. at the league's headquarters, Sixteenth street and Scott Circle. His subject will be "Socialistic Experiments in the United States."

Mrs. Lyman Swormstedt will introduce the speaker.

Swami Vividishananda will give an illustrated lecture on the "Art and Culture of India" at the meeting of the Women's Alliance of All Souls' Unitarian Church today. Mrs. Eugene F. Mueller, president, will preside.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

WITH DEEP FEELING indicative of grievances long suppressed, women shoppers in this city continue to articulate their indignant rebuttal of the argument advanced by a saleswoman that the former are rude and inconsiderate in their dealings with the latter.

Perhaps it is the restraint presumably exacted by their profession which prohibits women in the salesperson classification from rallying to the support of "Jaundiced's" contention that "about 90 per cent of the time, if the customer is a woman, she's in the wrong when finding fault with a salesgirl."

• • • •

At any rate, no one has yet appeared to defend "Jaundiced's" position. Without exception, all of the many excellent letters which have come to this desk as a result of her broadside have been in the nature of counter-attacks. In the interest of fair play, and for the purpose of bringing both sides of the question fully into the open, we should like to hear more of the saleswoman's side of the story.

• • • •

More Light Shed.

DEAD MISS HAWORTH: Although you have probably been deluged with letters in refutation of "Jaundiced's" charges against the manners of the majority of women shoppers, I am venturing to send you some of my observations. Whether they shed any light on the subject is for you to decide.

It has been brought home forcibly to me, after five years of shopping here in the city, that the unreasonable shopper is the one who receives the best attention. Especially is this true at the counters where smaller articles of clothing such as hose, gloves, notions and the like are for sale.

• • • •

Let an insistent, domineering customer come dashing up to a saleswoman and demand: "Have you so-and-so?" and the clerk will wait on her with all the deference in the world, entirely ignoring the quiet women who have been courteously awaiting their turn. I have seen this happen times without number and never have I heard the clerk make any sort of apology to the customers who should have received attention first.

• • • •

In the dress and millinery departments I have always, after one or two visits to a store, managed to find competent, courteous women to wait on me. After I have made those contacts I always ask for these women and I have nothing but praise for their service.

Never have I written a protest against poor service to the management of a store. Always I have thought of the distress it might cause the girl if she lost her position through my complaint—and that is something I could not bear to have on my conscience. But I have written letters of commendation when I have received especially courteous, cheerful or efficient service—just brief notes telling the management that it had been a pleasure to be waited on by a certain girl at a certain counter.

• • • •

There are many, many good saleswomen. Otherwise, the shoppers would die of apoplectic rage at the other kind. The ones who rouse my deepest ire are the snobbish ones. I have stood aside when a tired, poorly-dressed woman with a child clinging to her hand has come up to a counter after me and I have said to the clerk, "Wait on this lady first," only to have the supercilious young thing behind the counter treat her with such disdain that the customer was visibly and helplessly embarrassed. That the girl then turned to me with great politeness was only due to the fact that my clothes happened to be more expensive than the other woman's.

• • • •

At a glove counter in a certain store when I stated that I did not want to go above a certain price the saleswoman at first viewed me with pained astonishment. This gradually changed to horror and then contempt. She withdrew a few paces and gathered two of her colleagues around her. She told them the whole sickening story and they put aside any personal worries they might have had and concentrated on contempt for the penurious customer. After an interval she returned to me, pulled out a drawer wherein rested dozens of pairs of the kind of gloves I had been asking for, tossed out a pair before me without a word, and made no further attempt to show them to me. I said quietly, "Thank you, I think I'll not buy today," and walked out of the store. I have never been back to that counter and I may add parenthetically that my glove bill for the year is fairly large.

• • • •

We are told to shop early in the day before the stores are crowded. I have done so and have found the clerks so busy comparing notes on their respective states of sleepiness and their boy friends that the service has been as unsatisfactory as later in the day. I have to argue with a clerk to convince her that she has certain brands of children's clothing in her stock and insist that she look in the proper places until she finds them.

I find I am going to such length that you will probably throw this entire letter in the wastebasket. But what I have tried to make clear is the fact that the average customer like myself only wants fair treatment from salespeople, and that we do have sincerest sympathy and consideration for the weariness of the efficient ones. As for the others, it has long been a matter of wonderment to me that the management does not post watchers to check up on the clerks and so learn which are snobbish, lazy and insolent, and replace them with some of the unemployed women who would be so grateful to have their chance. Sincerely,

MARY BLANK.

Book-Like Box Holds Season's Cosmetic Needs

Powder, Creams and Tonic of New Kit Serve Every Need.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A CASUAL glance, and you think it's a book. There's even a title, "Beautymaker" engraved across the top, and underneath the name of the author. Closer observation shows it to be a large black and silver box, brimful of cosmetics, enough to last you the entire season!

This is the attractive contribution of a nationally known beauty house that surprises us each year with some such unique offering.

Inside the book-box there's a generous box of powder—you choose your favorite shade—a beauty cream, highly recommended for its cleansing properties, and a skin tonic that both soothes and refreshes the skin. Besides these, there's a rich tissue cream which literally feeds the dry skin and wards off that withered look that comes from too much exposure to sun and wind. A protective cream is not only an ideal powder base for dry skins, but likewise a real beauty aid in helping you keep your skin smooth and soft all during spring and summer.

You'll not only be delighted with the contents of this "Beautymaker," but you'll be thrilled with its smart appearance and modest price.

Bargains in Basement.

Those of you who are prone to meandering around the store in search of sundry half-hidden bargains might have explored the basement shop of a certain large store. Here are many intriguing "buys" which tempt the budgeteer.

For instance, the lovely little "Polly Anne" frocks, in printed percale and cotton sheers which sell for $1 apiece. If you don't think that a little summery cotton frock can have loads of style, or if you doubt that $1 can buy a frock that looks like "anything at all," then you should, you must, see them.

There are dozens of styles, all colors, and combinations, and sizes to fit everybody. These dresses will prove real boons during the summer, for you can put them in the washtub, scrub them all you please, and they're none the worse for wear!

Shirt Sale Opens.

The poor wife who has not only her own shopping to do, but her husband's also, must busy herself on his behalf now, for there's a grand shirt sale going strong in a downtown store. Shirts which have been selling for $1.95 and $2 are reduced right now to $1.39. They're fine shirts, too. Oxfords, madras, and broadcloth, with neckbands, collars attached, two collars, etc. All types of shirts, solid colors, plain whites, figures and stripes. So, no matter what hubby's preference, he can surely be suited here! Don't delay. The sale is for a limited time only.

Lavender Cologne.

Lavender is of course an ever popular fragrance. But now it promises to be the real belle of perfumes with the appearance of a new distinctly French lavender cologne, which comes to us in a flacon of stellar beauty.

It has a charm, a piquancy, a lightheartedness brilliance that we never dreamt lavender could possess. Its creator has rightly called it "a new experience in perfumes."

Because this spirited fragrance is so sparklingly different, so typically French, and yet is basically the lovely lavender beloved by all generations, small wonder that popular demand is whisking it off the counters as soon as it is displayed.

Bags and Berets.

One certain counter in a downtown store reminds us of a spring flower garden filled with blooms, red, green, blue and pink. Here is a mass of spring finery, a colorful display of crocheted bags and berets!

The berets are close fitting little affairs, easily adapted to any type. They are so soft and pliable they can be pulled into any shape. The bags, bear a striking resemblance to the berets and look as though they might be berets themselves fitted onto a metal frame.

The set, beret and bag, is yours for $1.

New Note in Showers.

Something new in showers! Something really modern! Now every home can have a shower, and a shower which can be used for many things besides a mere bath spray.

It has a suction cup which fits to the wall so that you can place it against the wall by your tub for your bath or over the kitchen sink for your dishwashing. You can even attach it against the side of the house in summer to give the children a cooling outdoor shower. Or if you've a cottage on the seashore you can use it in your bath house.

This modern convenience is so light and compact that you can take it with you wherever you go, and put it up in a second's time. It is said to be a fine little bath massager as well as an ideal shower.

You'll also find it indispensable for home shampooing. It has so many uses you'll have to see it to realize them all.

Latest Version of Combination Grill Displaces Roast as Main Sunday Dish

The combination grill is a pleasant change from the ever-present Sunday roast. It banishes the unpleasant problem of leftovers that hang like a cloud over the woman with a small family. It can be prepared in a jiffy and varied to suit the individual taste.

Prepare Lamb Chops With Bananas and Mushroom Caps.

By Dorothea Duncan.

WITH the appearance of the latest version of the combination grill the Sunday roast has gone down in defeat. This dish, which has always been popular in dining out, combines two admirable features. It can be made ready in a short time and can be varied to suit the individual taste. Try this combination for the Sunday dinner this week-end.

Lamb Chop and Banana Grill.

Place rib or loin chops on the broiler rack, so that the top side of the chop is about 3 inches from the flame. When nicely browned turn chop and put the tomato slices, bananas and mushroom caps, upside down, on the broiler rack. Have the mushroom caps dotted with butter. Turn mushroom caps and bananas so that they may brown on both sides.

Serve the individual plates from the kitchen or arrange attractively on a hot platter.

Other suggestions for the week-end menu follow.

Saturday Dinner Menu.

Baked Eggs.

Break as many eggs as persons to be served into buttered muffin pans. Cook until set at 375 degrees F. or a moderately hot oven. The eggs should be cooked only until set and may be slipped out onto a hot platter without any fear of breaking.

Lemon Tarts.

For tart shells: Roll pastry to ⅛ inch thickness. Cut with 4 or 5 inch floured cooky cutter and fit carefully on outside of upturned tart or muffin pans. Trim edges. Prick with a fork. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) 10 to 15 minutes, or until slightly brown.

Filling.

1½ cup sugar
2 cups boiling water

Sample Breakfast Menu Includes Baked Eggs, Canadian Bacon.

4 tablespoons cornstarch
4 tablespoons flour
4 egg yolks
Grated rind two lemons
6 tablespoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons butter

Mix cornstarch, flour and sugar and add boiling water, stirring constantly. Stir until mixture boils and cook 20 minutes in double boiler. Add butter, egg yolks and rind and juice of lemon. Fill baked tart shells and cover with meringue made of egg whites and sugar, using two tablespoons of sugar for each egg white. Bake meringue until delicately browned in a slow oven (300 degrees F.).

Little Material and Sewing Makes This Cape Ensemble

Pattern No. 911.

IT LOOKS so dainty and "handmade," this little cape ensemble, that one expects it would require plenty of sewing and fabric. But it doesn't. Just ten pieces in the pattern—and that includes cape, girdle and ruffles!

This design has all the soft feminine charm that we need in warm-weather clothes. The short puff sleeves, the collarless cape with or without ruching, and the soft fullness at the waistline and neck make it very easy to wear. The pattern is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 5⅝ yards of 39-inch fabric for the dress and cape with ruching.

What TODAY Means

By Mary Blake.
"Taurus."

IF APRIL 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m to 1:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m.

This day is likely to be a very good one for friendly gatherings, as well as patriotic or political meetings. There may be an inclination to overdo things, so it will be wise to make sure you practice moderation, thus avoiding unfavorable reaction to the day's activities. Business is likely to be active in only a limited number of lines, catering to the public's needs and entertainment, as sociability probably will absorb the thoughts of those with money to spend.

Time is likely to pass rapidly on this date. Attention should be given to its passage, so there will be no danger of losing track of it, because lateness in keeping appointments is likely to cause quarrels. It will be wise not to attempt to give advice voluntarily regarding matters that do not concern you personally, as it is possible it will not be graciously received.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those about to ask or receive the all important question to lovers, will be wise to avoid being wishy-washy, or making evasive replies on this date to important questions.

If a woman and April 26 is your natal day, you have a great amount of patience, which some unappreciative people may try to take advantage of and which you must not permit. If you do not stand up for your own rights, no one else will. Through the dexterity of your hands, your success possibly will come. While you are naturally possessed of an artistic nature, there is danger that through lack of self confidence, you will fail to develop a decided talent, which will be a mistake.

If you do not allow a sense of fear to dominate your thoughts you will successfully handle almost any issue which is likely to confront you. Music, needle work, painting, sketching or journalism may have the most lucrative as well as satisfactory type of employment for one possessing your characteristics. Your home life should be all you could desire it to be.

The child born on April 26 is likely during the school career to display a decided talent for drawing, musical instruments, or craftsmanship, which should be encouraged.

If a man and April 26 is your birthday, you probably are gifted with an unusually sensitive sense of touch, which should be highly advantageous in surgery, playing the violin, piano, designing, or work requiring delicate handling.

Successful people born on April 26:

Hugh D. Evans, author.
Edward Maynard, dental surgeon and inventor.
Alice Cary, author and poet.
Horatio R. Palmer, composer.
Frederick Law Olmstead, landscape architect.
John Clark Ridpath, historian.

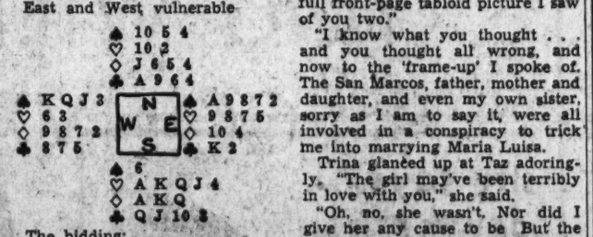
Culbertson On Bridge

1392.

Reversing an Old Saying.

There are just as many persons walking the streets of London because of their hurry to draw trumps, as there are for neglecting to do so. The following hand is one in which immediate extraction of trumps is fatal, although there is nothing to ruff in Dummy:

South, Dealer
East and West vulnerable



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	1NT	Pass
4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Play.

West led the King of spades and followed with the Queen, which was ruffed by the Declarer. He led a club from his own hand and took the finesse against the King, which lost to East, who returned a spade. The Declarer did not ruff the spade lead, but discarded the Queen of diamonds, guarding against the probable four-two trump split.

It is interesting to note that if the Declarer draws trumps when he obtains the lead on the second trick, his contract will be defeated because the opponents must get in with the King of clubs and cash the established spades.

Let Child Voice Dress Tastes, Mothers Told

PERMISSION to assist in selection of her own clothing, the use of practical dress openings and fasteners, and correct and simple styles will go a long way toward developing character and self-reliance in the very young girl, according to Miss Helen Shelby, clothing specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service. Investigation has shown that attention to a few of these details, not only aids in development of the child, but also greatly reduces the work for the mother.

According to Miss Shelby, the little girl should be permitted to assist in selection of the clothing she is to wear. This will give her an interest in her clothes and will also develop taste and discrimination in the selection of colors and fabrics. Even very young children have distinct personalities, says Miss Shelby, and, within reason, they should be permitted to develop these personalities through self-expression.

Only the simplest of garments should be used on very small girls to develop self-reliance in dressing and undressing themselves, it is said. Experience has shown, according to Miss Shelby, that the openings should always be in approximately the same location and only the simplest of fasteners should be used. Dresses which are cut in coat or smock style, with full-length openings, and those which slip over the head and fasten at the center front, have been found most practical for tiny hands, it is emphasized.

Paris Is Taking To Calf Shoes

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 25. — American shoe styles have left their mark on Parisian foot fashions.

The American vogue for calf—which, shoe men here say, sprang up because the cattle that died as a result of last year's drought in the West, left an oversupply of calf and cowhide—is being reflected on this side of the Atlantic. Calf shoes are being shown for smart walking models and with them come fairly low heels—another American foot fashion.

The shoes which will walk out on Fifth avenue and the Champs Elysees stress three new trends: (1) A forward movement reminiscent of the new hats. (2) Many trimmings in keeping with the regency styles of the nineteenth century which are in vogue this spring. (3) A predicted vogue for shoes whose color contrasts with the frock it accompanies.

Backless Shoes Fashioned

To go with the new hats, whose brims jut out like a visor in front but are negligible behind, designers have fashioned "backless" shoes which mold the toes and front of the foot but have nothing around the back but a strap. Their heels are generally about two inches high.

Buttons, buckles, bows and side fastenings—reminiscent of the days of the early nineteenth century when George IV was Prince Regent of England—are all seen on the new models, designed to go with spring clothes which reflect many regency touches.

Buttons run up the side in a row, though they are there for ornament rather than fastening, while buckles and bows perch over the instep.

The fronts of the new spring shoes are generally fairly high, though they do not climb so far over the instep as they did last winter. Heels, no longer spikes, have descended to about a two-inch height, though they have not come down to the low model popular in the United States.

OBJECT—Not MATRIMONY

BUT HER mind still more on that hospital wedding than on the song she was playing and singing, she wondered how she'd ever get through even the first song on her program.

Get through it she did, though. To the delight of a whole drawing-room full of people, too, judging by their handclapping. Bowing to acknowledge it, Katrina glanced with smiling cursoriness over the audience, till all at once she found herself staring, unbelievably, into a pair of brown eyes. The dark-love-impelling eyes of Taz Bronson!

If the beginning of the program has been difficult, the continuing of it seemed impossible to Katrina. But only for a brief moment. For still gazing at Taz, spurred on by pride, she resolved to sing better than she'd ever sung in all her life, just to show him something.

Evidently she did show him something, too, because after the final encore, the moment he could wrench her away from a mob of congratulators, he whisked her out in the hall and said:

He Was Delighted.

"My little Dixie songbird, how marvelously you put over that program. You did us both proud, didn't you? But get your wrap, darling, right away, quick! My car's waiting downstairs, and I'm going home with you. We have lots to say to each other. For one thing, I rushed back from Europe to marry you."

"Oh, no, I'm not married," Taz told Katrina, "and never for a second was I engaged to the San Marco girl. The announcement of that engagement was a 'frame-up.' But all that's a long, long story which I'll have to tell you later, when we get through untangling your tangled affairs. As for me, I have nothing to straighten out. I'm as free as a bird in the air and I am yours—for the having.

Here—for the having! In a daze of rapture Katrina rode home. And in that same daze, romantically alone with Taz, sitting beside him on a divan, she yielded to his caresses, forgetful of everybody and everything else in the world.

Elena Told News.

"Oh, precious," he lamented, "what a fool I've been! Why couldn't I have come to my senses without separating myself from the only girl I've ever loved? But you may be sure I've paid for my folly. No doubt I did deserve the tortures, as Elena Holt said——"

"You saw Ellie in Rome, then?" Trina lifted her head from Taz's shoulder.

"Un huh. Ran into her and Sid at an American Embassy dance and she gave me all the news about you. Said she'd just received a letter from you in which you spoke of your booking at the Calhoun Beverleys today. That put an idea into my head, for Calhoun, jr., was a Princeton fratmate of mine and I knew I could barge in on the musicale. She told me about you and Mel Edwards, too. I figured that by catching the first boat I could make it to New York—in time. And I have, haven't I, precious, for you've just proved you still love me? And to marry one man while loving another would be unfair to both and positively cruel to yourself."

If only Melvin weren't in the hospital," deplored Tazewell, "it would be so much easier for you to go to him, Trina, and tell him the whole truth. Knowing him as I do, I'm confident he would release you. That's the sort of fellow he is. When I said we'd untangle your tangled affairs, I didn't dream he'd been critically ill."

"Of course, you didn't. And because he is convalescing it would be just too cruel to hurt or shock him, wouldn't it? Mel's such a wonderful person and I'm under eternal obligation to him." Katrina's lips quivered. "And long, long before that when I read in a tabloid, first, that you'd held up the Rex half an hour in order to sail to Italy with 'the glamorous countess, and later in the same paper that you were soon to marry the countess, Melvin did everything possible to console me.

On Business Trip.

"That was noble of him," Taz conceded, "but no matter what the tabloid said I did not hold up the Rex in order to sail with Maria Luisa San Marco. Nor was I ever for a second engaged to that Italian girl. But to my departure! I caught the Rex in a grand rush because of business . . ."

"Business! You went to Europe on business?"

"I should say I did. Big business in Italy. So to take care of it I took the first liner sailing, not even knowing Maria Luisa San Marco was aboard till she ran up to me on deck, thrust her arm through mine and told me how charmed she was to see me . . ."

"That must've been the pose in which the news photographer snapped you," concluded Trina, "for her arm was linked with yours in the full front-page tabloid picture I saw of you two."

"I know what you thought . . . and you thought all wrong, and now to the 'frame-up' I spoke of. The San Marcos, father, mother and daughter, and even my own sister, sorry as I am to say it, were all involved in a conspiracy to trick me into marrying Maria Luisa.

Trina glanced up at Taz adoringly. "The girl may've been terribly in love with you," she said.

"Oh, no, she wasn't. Nor did I give her any cause to be. But the countess, egged on by her parents, also by Muriel, no doubt, claimed it. He just rushed her downstairs and drove fast and furiously to the hospital, remaining in his car while Trina hurried inside the big stone building on her difficult mission.

But supposing the hospital wedding were not a mere whim—a sick man's whim! To lose Tazewell now. To lose him!

Hikers to Essay The Riggs Road Gorge Sunday

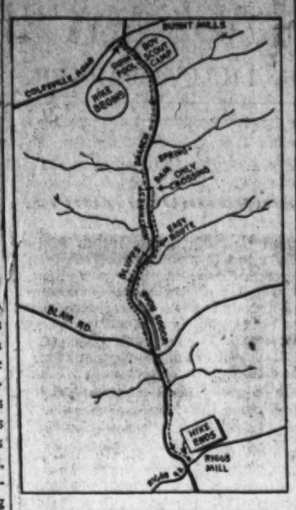
By Robert Shosteck.

Those hikers who missed the fine show of spring flowers on the trip along the Billygoat Trail two weeks ago can anticipate just as good a floral display on Sunday's scenic trip along the gorge of the Northwest Branch between Burnt Mills and historic Riggs Mill, on Riggs road. This 5-mile hike includes short stretches of rocky climbing, at some points the trail being little more than a narrow ledge along the wall of a 40-foot rock.

Members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this trip will meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. for the bus trip to Burnt Mills, the starting point of this hike. The round-trip fare will be 30 cents and reservations must be made at National 4200 in order to insure a seat. Bring lunch and a cup for water.

Route of Hike



At Burnt Mills the group will inspect the new dam and plant on the site of the old mill, and then proceed along the right bank of the Northwest Branch past Camp Wilson, the Boy Scout reservation. The boulder-strewn gorge is very picturesque, particularly the numerous giant potholes to be seen everywhere. Near the Scouts' swimming pool the trail divides, one path following a narrow ledge around the face of a sheer granite wall, the other detouring to the right.

The route follows the trail along the bank of the stream, crossing a small brook. Many showy spring flowers are to be found in the moist crannies of rocks and on ledges. The anemone, or windflower, is rather common here and several varieties of violets are to be found. It is at this time, too, that one sees the unfolding fiddleheads of the large ferns which grow in the vicinity.

At the dam one may cross over to the easier trail on the left bank or continue on the right side, following the trail along the top of the bluff. In the pine woods are several varieties of flowers not found elsewhere on the trip. From several points along this portion of the trail one can obtain fine views of the valley below.

We cross Blair road about 3½ miles from the start and continue along the trail on the left bank of the branch to Riggs Mill, which is nearly 1½ miles from this road. This old mill, abandoned many decades ago, was one of a series along the Northwest Branch which served many small communities in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md. Despite much weathering, the mill wheel and house as well as much of the race are still in a fair state of preservation. The buses will pick up the hikers at this point, returning to Washington by 6 p. m.

Next week the Wanderbirds and the Department of Agriculture Hiking Club have arranged a joint excursion to the Appalachian Trail in the vicinity of Harpers Ferry. Watch Friday's Post for complete details. The Wanderbird calendar of hikes for May and June will be off the press during the week. Besides the regular Sunday trips, a series of Saturday afternoon tours of several of Uncle Sam's experiment stations is planned.

• • • •

The Potomac Appalachian Trails Club plans a "mystery trip" Sunday, a hike of 6 or 12 miles through territory which the club has not previously visited. The group will leave by bus from the south end of the Treasury at 7 a. m. Reservations can be made with A. H. Jackman, District 6384.

• • • •

An all-day trip in the vicinity of Sugar Loaf Mountain is planned Sunday by the Department of Agriculture Hiking Club. The group will meet at 10:30 a. m. at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest and go by bus to the mountain. The fare will be $1. R. O. Gustafson, District 6350, is handling arrangements for this trip.

• • • •

The Red Triangle Outing Club will join the Baltimore Wanderlusters on a 9-mile trip through a wooded and hilly section north of Baltimore. The group will meet at 8 a. m. at the W. B. & A. Terminal, Twelfth street and New York avenue. The trip will include a visit to Lake Asburton and Gwynns Falls Park. Reservations may be made through B. C. McGee, North 9190.

Apostolic Delegate To Visit Here Today

The Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani, apostolic delegate, will make his official visit this afternoon to the missionary exposition of the Catholic Mission Crusade at Catholic University.

All religious orders at the university will be represented at the ceremony. Students from all the parochial schools in the city will attend. St. John's Academy cadet band will entertain.

Randall Jones to Talk On West's Wonderlands

Taking as his topic "Western Wonderlands of Color," Randall Jones, widely-known travel lecturer, will speak at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Connecticut avenue and Bancroft street, tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Mr. Jones will describe the scenic beauties of America's national parks in the Far West. The program is under the auspices of the Rector's Aid Society.

Mother and 3 Children Buried at Big Island in Church Yard.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., April 25.—Funeral services for five persons, including a mother and three children, who died yesterday in a three-automobile crash just east of Spout Spring in Appomattox County, took place today.

Rites were held at Big Island (Va.) Baptist Church for Mrs. F. L. Mattox, 38, wife of a bank cashier of Big Island; Miss Roberta Mattox, 18, her oldest daughter and a sophomore at Farmville S. T. C; Addison Mattox, 20, and Miss Margaret Mattox, 15. All were buried in the church yard.

Services for W. Dabney Anderson, 46, of Vera, a rural mail carrier, who died in a nearby home soon after his car had collided with the Mattox machine, took place at his home.

Lieut. J. A. Bingham, of the State police, cleared the way for a court investigation of the triple crash by placing technical charges of reckless driving against Richard T. Jess, 27, salesman of Richmond, who plunged head-on into the entangled Mattox and Anderson machines. He was bruised and sustained a cut on the head.

"We are bringing the charge simply to get the case in court for an investigation," Bingham said.

J. H. Cyrus, whose father-in-law, Ed Martin, was killed in an accident near the same spot four years ago, was burned as he and Hess tried to remove the victims from the Mattox machine. Fire drove them back, however, and the four occupants were burned beyond recognition.

The accident, which reduced the ...ox family from eight to four, ...rred while Mrs. Mattox was ...ing Roberta back to school at ...rmville.

George A. Davidson.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, April 25.—The funeral of George A. Davidson, 73, member of prominent Frederick County family, will be conducted here tomorrow. Mr. Davidson, who was born at Cedar Grove, was for many years in the mercantile business in New York, where he was associated with the late Charles Broadway Rouss.

Surviving Mr. Davidson are three sisters, Mrs. Davis Wingerter, of Winchester; Mrs. Hamline Haines and Miss Nora Davidson, of Washington, and three brothers, T. Edward Davidson and D. Newton Davidson, of Newport News, and A. Hunter Davidson, of Winchester. He was unmarried.

War on Auto Accidents Spurred by 5 Deaths

Campaign of Education Carried On by Road Workmen; Safety Committees Aid in All Subdivisions.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 25.—Commenting upon the triple auto collision which cost five lives at Spout Spring yesterday, officials of the State Highway Department today pointed out that an organized campaign to prevent automobile accidents had been launched in every residency, or subdivision, of the eight Virginia road districts.

The campaign of accident prevention education is being carried on among the hundreds of workmen employed on construction and maintenance of Virginia's system of primary and secondary roads.

"Our primary purpose in seeking to cut down the number of accidents is to prevent human suffering," Giles M. Robertson, safety engineer, explained.

Safety Committees Named.

"The campaign is not being confined to prevention of accidents to employees while at work, since our principal interest is to prevent accidents from happening to anyone—including motorists," he said.

Safety committees have been set up in each of the highway residencies in the State, he said. Each committee is composed of the resident engineer and six other men and meets once each month to report on accidents in its territory during the previous 30 days and to devise ways of blocking them in the future.

General points of the program include the education of school children in highway safety, education of drivers and the general public in ways to prevent accidents, and the maintenance of roads in good condition. Highway forces are being shown how they may further these objectives by their own personal efforts.

Stressed in Schools.

Particular stress is being given to the education of school children, Robertson said, since their daily travel to and from school brings them in contact with highway workmen.

Typical of the meetings which are being held was one at Tappahannock Courthouse THuesday, which was attended by approximately 100 employes of the highway department from the counties of Essex, King and Queen, King William, Richmond, Lancaster and Northumberland.

Prevention of accidents on the public highways was the keynote of the meeting, which was addressed by Robertson, J. H. Walker, district engineer; C. W. Staggs and W. F. Smith, resident engineers, of Tappahannock and Warsaw, respectively, and F. M. Pates, shop superintendent of the Fredericksburg district. Employes also joined in the discussion.

Farmer Given 5-Year Term In Attack Case

Mercy Is Recommended by Jury as Maryland Man Is Found Guilty.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., April 25.—John Newcombe, 56-year-old farmer of the Broad Neck section of Kent County, was sentenced today in Kent County Circuit Court to serve five years in the Maryland Penitentiary after having been convicted by a jury of attempted criminal assault on a 6-year-old girl last December. The jury deliberated nearly seven hours and a recommendation of mercy was attached to the verdict.

William Johnson and Alton Hewitt were given eight months in the Maryland House of Correction after conviction on a statutory charge.

Archie L. Akers and his wife, Mary B. Akers, both of North East, Md., were awarded $2,500 damages for the death of their daughter, Selma W. Akers, in September, 1933. They were suing for $25,000 from Maurice Friedman and Beulah Friedman, of Essex, Va., and Dorothy Dinsmore, of North East.

Miss Akers was riding in Miss Dinsmore's car when it collided with the Akers' car in North East.

Jurors Convict Man In Fist-Fight Death

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 25.—Charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Carl E. Twigg, of Spring Gap, whose neck was broken during a fist fight on the night of March 8, John W. Bierman, 37, of Mexico Farms, was convicted yesterday in Circuit Court before Judge David A. Robb, who deferred sentence.

Bierman testified that he struck Twigg in self-defense after the latter attacked him in the service station of George Reuschel on the Uhl highway, about 4 miles from Cumberland. Both men had been drinking, witnesses said.

Telephone Co. Plans $690,000 Storms Repair

Greater Part of Money Will Be Expended in East Maryland.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., April 25.—Approximately $690,000 will be spent in Maryland by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. over a period of ten months to repair damage done by last winter's storm. The greater part of this sum, it is announced, will be expended in eastern Maryland, not only to replace equipment destroyed by snow, wind and sleet, but to protect equipment from similar damage in the future.

Construction plans, it is said, have the approval of the Federal Communications Commission. Cable will connect eastern shore towns instead of, as at present, open wires, and telephone messages will henceforth follow cable routes between the various towns on the shore.

About 90 men will be engaged in addition to 24 splicers. Some men will be engaged from among local labor in the vicinity of towns where work is to be done. The majority of poles to be bought, to replace those torn down by the storms, will be bought on the shore, it is stated.

More than 4,000 poles in Maryland fell during the winter, and about 2,500 miles of wire was torn down. In Maryland, the eastern shore was hardest hit and more than 1,200 miles of wire was strung on fence posts and trees for emergency use.

Wilkinson to Quit Job as Collector

Will Assume Roads Position on May 15.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 25.—City Tax Collector C. Nice Wilkinson, who will be appointed a member of the State Roads Commission by Gov. Nice, yesterday announced he will submit his resignation May 6 to the mayor and City Council in order to assume the Sate position on May 15.

The council will appoint his successor as tax collector at the regular meeting May 6, according to city officials. Among those mentioned to fill the unexpired term of approximately ten months are John Donaldson, present assistant collector, and James M. Conway, former manager of the Maryland Glass Co., who has been active in recent municipal campaigns and in Republican Party work. P. J. Stakin and several others are also seeking the position, it was said at the city hall.

$52,750 Granted Virginia Schools

Board Approves Literary Loan Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, April 25.—The Virginia Board of Education today approved new literary loan funds to Virginia schools totaling $52,750. Grants were as follows:

Rockville School, Hanover County, $24,000; Tom Brooks School, Shenandoah County, $25,000; Prater School, Dickenson County, $2,250; Rachel Chapel School, Dickenson County, $1,500.

A novation of $38,164 was granted to Chesterfield County schools at Colonial Heights and Ettricks.

Widow Tells Of Payments For Sheriff

Mrs. Hodges, Sr., Names Defendants in Liquor Plot as Payors.

Saw Husband Get Cash, Airs Meetings to Split Alleged Bribes.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 25.—Mrs. J. P. Hodges, sr., widow of a former sheriff of Franklin County, today testified that she knew of payments made to her husband while sheriff by persons named in a conspiracy indictment, but that meetings at which a division of money among officers was discussed did not occur at her home until her son, Wilson Hodges, became sheriff.

Mrs. Hodges was called as the first witness in the fourth day of the trial of 23 persons who pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging a conspiracy to violate the internal revenue laws through liquor operations in Franklin County. Wilson Hodges is one of the four persons who pleaded guilty.

Later in the day defense efforts to draw from a witness the statement that Government investigators had told Franklin County moonshiners they were not after "little cobwebs" created considerable amusement in the court.

Samuel R. Price, defense counsel, in cross-examining E. W. Sledd, who admitted making liquor, asked if he did not talk to a Federal investigator, M. M. Caffey, about the testimony of a previous witness during the recess. He asked specifically about alleged "protection" payments to Deputy Sheriff Howard L. Maxey.

Sledd denied any discussion of payments to Maxey, but said Caffey had asked whether he had talked to defense lawyers about anyone saying the Government was not after "little cobwebs."

Judge John Paul interrupted to ask what Caffey said.

Doesn't Recall Statement.

"He asked if I had told that him or anyone else had told me at Harrisonburg that the Government was not after 'little cobwebs,'" Sledd said.

The incident was followed by another defense request for an opportunity to see the transcript of the testimony, which Judge Paul previously had refused.

Judge Paul told the defense lawyers District Attorney Sterling Hutcheson could show all testimony they have, but denied the motion to have the transcript furnished.

Names Frequent Visitors.

Mrs. Hodges said Herman Shiveley, "Peg" Hatcher, Claude Shiveley and Nick Prillaman, all named in the indictment, were frequent visitors in her home. She named Edgar A. Beckett, a State prohibition officer under indictment, as an occasional visitor.

Payments made to her husband were seen by her, she said, and some times after her husband's death, payments were left with her for her son. The payments left with her, she testified, were by Leonard Fralin, who pleaded guilty, and by Jeff Richards, a deputy sheriff, now dead.

Mrs. Hodges said she did not discuss the payments with her husband, but that she had once told him he might get in trouble. Judge Paul ruled that what she had told him could not be considered evidence.

Advised to Resign.

Her husband was sick for about two months before his death, she said, and had been advised to resign by Circuit Judge P. H. Dillard. said the judge offered to appoint her son, Wilson, then 21, to the office, but that neither she nor the boy's father wanted him to take the office, because "he might get in trouble." She said she wanted him to continue in school.

She testified that Carter Lee, Commonwealth's attorney under indictment, also had urged her son's appointment, saying he wanted things to go on as they had been and that he would help Wilson.

After Wilson's appointment, she said he would meet with deputies in her dining room and that they would drink heavily. It was during such meetings that she would hear discussions of the division of money, she said.

Age Pensions Become Law In Maryland

36 Other Bills Enacted Include 11 Dealing With Banking.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 25.—Maryland's old-age pension plan became law today as Gov. Nice and the presiding officers of the General Assembly signed the bill passed by the recent Legislature.

The measure, which is designed to dovetail with Federal legislation along that line, was one of 37 enacted into law today by the signatures of the three officials. The others ranged in importance from purely local bills to one setting up a veterans' relief commission with a yearly appropriation of $50,000.

Old-age pensions will be available only to indigent persons more than 65 years of age who have been residents of Maryland for at least seven years prior to their application. The pensions would be limited to $1 per day, but each applicant would be given only as much as his need justified.

Share Cost Equally.

The State and Federal governments are to share the cost of the pensions equally. The State will provide two-thirds of the cost and local units in Maryland the remainder, and the Federal Government will reimburse those agencies for half of the expenditure.

Maryland provided $1,500,000 for old-age pensions, the funds to be taken from receipts from the 1 per cent gross receipts levy.

The measure becomes effective June 1 and will be administered by the newly created State department of social welfare.

Eleven of the measures signed today deal with the State banking laws, most of them designed to coordinate State bank statutes with regulations of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Other bank laws have the following provisions:

Setting the term of office of the State bank commissioner at four years.

Providing qualifications for directors of banks and trust companies.

Banking Board Created.

Establishing an unpaid banking board of three members, representing the Clearing House Association, the Association of Mutual Savings Banks of Baltimore and the Maryland State Bankers Association, to consult with the State bank commissioner.

Requiring security for deposits made by the bank commissioner in his capacity as receiver of any bank.

Providing that banking institutions shall not have affiliate or closely allied corporations.

Increasing the fee for examining banks.

The Veterans' Commission bill authorizes appointment of a commission by the governor which may expend up to $20,000 a year in salaries and expenses. The commission is to distribute relief to widows and infant children of veterans and to members of the Maryland National Guard injured in line of duty.

Other measures signed today included:

Requiring additional lights on trucks, trailers and buses having a width of more than 90 inches.

Paying Morgan College $100,000 for the Princess Anne Academy and turning the property over to the University of Maryland.

Masquers Plan Picnic At Sligo Creek Park

The Masquers of Sligo Park Hills, Md., a dramatic group which won third place in the District of Columbia one-act play tournament in Washington in February, will hold a picnic Sunday in Sligo Creek Park.

Mrs. Carson Lyan, of Takoma Park, Md., is in charge of arrangements. The club will meet at the home of the president, Robert S. Pilgrim, from where they will go to the picnic grounds.

Woman Witness of the Battle Will Relive Chancellorsville

Mrs. Sue Chancellor's Girlhood Home Was Used by Hooker as Quarters; She Will See Reenactment of Famous Fight She Vividly Recalls.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 25.—One woman, who was in the midst of the fighting at Chancellorsville for three days, and who, with her mother, had as her house guests during the time Gen. "Joe" Hooker, Adjt. Gen. Joseph Dickenson, their staffs and dozens of other officers, will witness the reenactment of the famous battle on May 2. She is Mrs. Sue Chancellor, of Fredericksburg. She is undoubtedly the only woman living who saw the battle.

Mrs. Chancellor, 14 at the time of the battle, lived in the Chancellorsville house with her father and mother, five sisters and a brother. Later she married her cousin, Vespatian Chancellor, a member of the Ninth Virginia Cavalry, who was given wide publicity as one of the leading figures in Robert W. Chambers' novel, "Operator 13."

When the Federal troops began to arrive, Mrs. Chancellor says, she stood on the porch of the house, the same porch where Gen. Hooker was later injured by a piece of shell. When the Northern soldiers called to her and several others, they answered back, "Don't stop to talk to us, Gen. Lee is waiting just down the road."

Hooker Takes Over House.

Continuing, Mrs. Chancellor says, "Gen. Hooker came and told my mother while I was with her that he must take our house, and that we could have one room. The house suddenly filled with officers. Gen. Hooker's office was in the parlor. I only spoke to him once after this conversation. Once he came to my mother in the hall and said, 'Madam, there are two wounded Confederate soldiers in the back room. You may care for them if you wish.'

"On the second day, Gen. Hooker was standing by the pillar on the second-story porch when a shell struck the porch and either a piece of the shell or one of the pillars injured him.

"On the morning of the third day, Adjt. Gen. Dickenson came to us. We stayed in the basement when the Confederates began to shell toward the house. He said the house was afire and we must leave. We went, my mother holding to Gen. Dickenson's stirrup, to aid her, as she was not well. One of my sisters, Fanny, was ill, and on the way had several hemorrhages. When we reached the United States ford, Gen. Dickenson had a stretcher brought and we crossed over the Federal pontoon bridge there. We were taken to the top of the hill and left there, my sister lying on the ground. While she was lying there, very ill, and her face covered with blood, a little drummer boy came and talked to us. Just before he left he said, 'If this is the way to Richmond, I do not want to go. I have a sister at home.'

Taken to Near-by House.

"We were taken to a nearby house," Mrs. Chancellor continued, "and held as prisoner for ten days. After that we were taken to Falmouth and allowed to cross into Fredericksburg.

"The first day of the battle we heard firing toward Fredericksburg. On the second day there was a lot of excitement and officers coming and going with their horses at a run; but nothing happened until dusk, when we were ordered to the basement, from the windows of which we saw thousands of Northern troops rushing back down the road and through the woods, passing the house, while other troops were coming up from the river. The shells were breaking in the fields and near the house at dusk and almost all night. But it was nothing to the next morning, when the whole air seemed filled with bursting shells and a noise of the rifles, over toward Fairview, which was very near and was also part of the Chancellor property, sounded louder than any thunder I ever heard."

Two Embassy Attaches To Attend Battle Fete.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 25.—Two military attaches of embassies of foreign nations are among those from whom acceptances have been received to attend the Chancellorsville celebration here next Thursday.

The two are Lieut Col. Vincenzo Coppola, of the Italian Embassy, and Lieut. Col. Emanuel Lombard, of the French Embassy. Among other interesting personages will be Maj. John Biglow, U. S. A., retired, author of "The Chancellorsville Campaign."

Officers Sent To N.Y. to Get Alleged Killer

2 Going to Haverstraw for Shell, Coleman Case Suspect.

Virginia Trial Soon Is Expected for Him and 'Pal,' Also Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 25.—Sheriff Maxie L. Blaydes and Constable S. Walker Burgess, who trailed John Shell, colored, alleged murderer of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Coleman, through several States to Haverstraw, N. Y., were to leave tonight to bring Shell back to Spotsylvania to stand trial for the brutal murder of April 2. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, today ordered Shell's extradition to Virginia.

Spotsylvania authorities will return the suspect late this week and lodge him in the Henrico County jail, where Joe Jackson, colored, also is being held on charges of murdering the couple, unless judicial proceedings take Shell's case into the New York courts, which is not believed likely.

No date has been set for the trials of Shell and Jackson, but it is almost certain they will be brought before the court quickly.

Both have denied the charges, although Jackson admitted being accessory to the crime, which he blamed on Shell. The latter has disputed Jackson's story.

One of the chief points in the prosecution centers on the watch of the dead man, the case and works of which were found in Shell's possession when he was arrested. Shell contended the watch had been given him in Philadelphia five years ago. The watch has been identified as Coleman's.

New Tax Collector To Qualify Today

Young Will Retire as Cumberland Postmaster.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 25.—Postmaster George C. Young, recently appointed tax collector for the First District in Allegany County, will qualify tomorrow at the meeting of the board of county commissioners. He was named by the board to succeed John J. Stump, whose term expired this month.

Young's bond for collection of county taxes has been approved by the commissioners and his bond for State tax collections will be submitted later. The bond totals $150,000. Alban C. Thompson, named deputy collector, started preliminary work yesterday.

The postmaster's resignation, sent to Postmaster General James A. Farley, has not been accepted as yet and it is not expected to be effective until June 1. Henry J. Koelker, assistant postmaster, will be in charge until Young's successor is named.

Austin James Resigns Frederick County Post

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 25.—E. Austin James, recently appointed by Gov. Harry W. Nice as people's counsel to the Public Service Commission of Maryland, announced yesterday that he had resigned as attorney to the county commissioners effective June 1. Mr. James, who is chairman of the Republican county committee, was appointed attorney soon after the present Republican members assumed office December 3.

A. H. Deer, president of the commissioners, said the resignation had been received but no action on appointing his successor had been taken.

Studios Learn Secret of the Present Trend

Good Behavior Pays Well; More About Benefit; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Maj. Albert Warner, that stalwart third of the Freres Warner who occupies the post of vice president in charge of distribution, has just returned East from the Coast, brimming over with enthusiasm, adjectives and optimism.

It is the good major's opinion that "pictures with a punch are returning to the screen." Personally, we had not been aware that they had been away. Nevertheless, the major seems impressed by the fact that the West Coast producers have solved the riddle of making "audience pictures" that will thrill those who view them and still elude those questionable qualities that precipitated the national drive for improved ethics and morals on the screen about a year ago.

There seems to be no doubt in any mind of the fact that the so-called "decency" crusade has had a definite and salutary effect. The pictures being currently made and released unquestionably strike the highest general average in the history of the cinema. More people than ever are attending the "movies," more money is being made by producers and exhibitors than for years past and, by and large, the goose hangs high—to coin a phrase!

Four for May.

As proof of the soundness of his views Maj. Warner points out that Warner Brothers-First National will release four important pictures during the month of May, each of which may be relied upon to provide those elements of dramatic interest that insure wide public attendance. These productions, one is given to believe, will be shown on the screen of the Earle Theater during the ensuing month.

Topping the May list is "G-Men," first of the film plays dealing with the Federal Government's greatest drive against crime in America. Jimmy Cagney is the star of this front-page feature, with supporting roles of importance in the competent hands of such favorite players as Ann Dvorak, Robert Armstrong, Margaret Lindsay and Monte Blue.

"Dinky," young America's "Flirtation Walk," stars Jackie Cooper, with Mary Astor, Roger Pryor, Henry Armetta and many others in support of the pouting, tow-headed juvenile star, whose best work heretofore has been done in partnership with Wallace Beery. This is a military schol story directed by D. Rose Lederman and Howard Bretherton.

Third on the list for May release is "Black Fury," hailed wherever it has been previewed as the best vehicle Paul Muni has had since "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang." Karen Morley heads the supporting cast in this thrilling drama of the coal mines, which, incidentally, was not translated into terms of celluloid without some travail.

Story Packed Dynamite.

Originally it was a story of the feud between the coal miners and the operators and, although the scene of the original occurrence on which the film play is based was Hungary, it still was considered dynamite, labor conditions in this country being what they are.

A way was found around these major difficulties, however, and now Mr. Muni Weissenfreund, which would be Mr. Muni for screen purposes, is said to have himself a real picture.

"In Caliente," fourth for May distribution, is an elaborate musical production starring Dolores Del Rio, with Pat O'Brien, Leo Carillo, Edward Everett Horton and Glenda Farrell importantly assigned. Busby Berkeley directed this one, so it should not surprise you that in one sequence he has his chorus of beautiful gals executing their maneuvers on horseback instead of deployed in cute geometrical designs in large swimming pools.

It is just barely possible that Maj. Warner may be correct in his Burbank deductions and ebulliences.

Elsewhere on this page today there should appear the likenesses of two screen players who are described, respectively, as an old-timer, and a newcomer. As though to make up for lost time, the week beginning tomorrow will offer double doses of both these distinguished gentlemen. Conrad Nagel is conspicuously cast in both "Death Flies East," at the Metropolitan, and "One New York Night," at Loew's Fox. Charles Boyer—which is pronounced "Bo-yay" and not "Boy-er"—is no less importantly assigned in both "Thunder in the East," coming into RKO-Keith's, and "Private Worlds," with Claudette Colbert, at the Earle.

If it has been a source of any worry to you, the report that William Powell and Ginger Rogers may go a third week at RKO-Keith's is without foundation. They go back into the tin boxes tonight.

The Benefit Benefits.

Latest developments in the preparation of the Actors' Fund Benefit performance, with which the National Theater Players will inaugurate their eleventh consecutive season in the National Theater on Sunday night, include the definite consummation of plans already tentatively announced and the addition of new names to the list of participants that has previously been published.

Most important, perhaps—as I had the temerity to forecast over the air through WJSV in this column's regular weekly broadcast yesterday afternoon—is the eager acceptance of Miss Frances Starr to appear and make the formal introduction of Daniel Frohman, dean of American producers and for more than half a century president of the Actors Fund of America, Inc. Miss Starr, in private life, is Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of Washington, and is one of the American theater's most distinguished actresses.

Godfrey Will be M. C.

Arthur Godfrey, the air's ace master of ceremonies, yesterday consented to serve in the same capacity at the benefit and will share the duties of announcing the acts that will follow the Players' first presentation of "Accent on Youth," with Audrey Sieber, the trig mistress of ceremonies from the Earle.

Bob Hall, that amazing exponent of improvisation and impromptu rhyming, appearing on this week's stage bill at the Earle, is remaining over for the express purpose of taking part in the benefit show and adds one more famous name to the long list of those who will take part.

This constantly growing program already guarantees one of the greatest amusement bargains in the history of Washington theatricals, when thought is given the fact that the top price for tickets will be $1, plus the 10 per cent Government tax—the same scale, precisely, as regularly charged for the National Theater Players' "little season."

The Montgomery Players will bring their 1934-35 season to a close tomorrow and Saturday nights in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School with the presentation of Elmer Rice's drama of "Counsellor-at-Law," played on the stage by Paul Muni and on the screen by John Barrymore. The leads will be played by Ralph S. Fowler, Betty Chase, Dee Shannon and Martha Williams, supported by a large group inclusive of Harrison L. Hathaway, Elizabeth Moore, Doris Dewey Day, Hubert L. Teitman, Margaret Keyhoe, Edmond Soper, Russell Nicholson, Pauline Whitacre, Richard W. Westwood, Irving M. Day, Anne Hathaway, Taylor Chewning, Harold Norton, Howard Bandy, Dorothy Young, Howard Bryan, Don Pollock and Fred Perkins.

Last for the Kiddies.

In planning its closing program of the season for children, the Women's International League had in mind the fact that magic is fast becoming a lost art insofar as today's movie-made, radio-reared youngsters are concerned.

Time was when a weekly vaudeville matinee was part of every normal child's theatrical upbringing. Acrobats and jugglers almost invariably appeared on the bills and frequently masters of magic mystified with the baffling trickery of their hocus-pocus and black art. But times have changed.

In presenting Spencer Howell, magician, in Pierce Hall on Saturday, the league introduces a very gifted young man. Although a Washingtonian and a student at George Washington University, Mr. Howell has mastered much of the abstruse business of legerdemain that made Hermann, Thurston, Keating and others famous and rich.

In addition to Mr. Howell's long list of tricks and illusions, the program will embrace a considerable list of specially selected motion picture shot-reel subjects.

With your indulgence—or even without it—we wish to take this opportunity gratefully to acknowledge a charming note from Yvonne Lewis, winner of Arthur Godfrey's last Saturday night's amateur radio broadcast from the rose room of the Washington Hotel, on which we sat as one of the judges; Brooke Johns' invitation to be his guest at the opening of "Brooke Johns' Old Barn," out Norbeck, Md., way, come Saturday—open every day this year, with luncheon from 12 to 2:30, special fried chicken dinner 5:30 to 8 and special Sunday morning breakfast by reservation—and season passes to Glen Echo Park and the Crystal Pool, from that veteran of open-air entertainment, Leonard B. Schloss, one of the few managers in the United States who runs a park the way a park should be run. These thoughful and kindly gestures are deeply appreciated. You-all must come up and see us some time!

They screened "Thunder in the East" for a preview audience at RKO-Keith's last midnight. So that is probably what you heard.

Or did yours come from the West?

An Oldtimer and a Newcomer

2 Church-Going Governors Hit For 'Allowing' Sunday Wine

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 25.—In his second statement in as many days, State Senator W. Worth Smith, of Louisa, yesterday flayed the State administration for failing to see that the sale of wine and beer was prohibited on Sunday.

"I must ask this question," Senator Smith said in part of a formal statement. "Where is the great Baptist former governor of Virginia, John Garland Pollard, that he has not devised ways and means to correct this evil (the Sunday sale of wine and beer) and where is the great Methodist, now governor of Virginia, from the dry ninth, that he has not seen the way if he wants to stop the sale of beer and wine on Sunday?

"In fact where is the whole State administration, who do not want any one to serve in the Senate of Virginia who entertains individual ideas, that they have not found some method through their own channel of intelligence that would correct this evil situation?

"I am forced to but one conclusion, and that is that our present administration operating under the short ballot, now controlled by Gov. Peery, unless he is controlled by others, necessarily favors the sale of beer and wine promiscuously on the Sabbath day."

St. Marys Booming Nice for Presidency

County Republican Club Unanimously for Him.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., April 25.—At a meeting just held here by the St. Marys County Republican Club resolutions were adopted indorsing Gov. Harry W. Nice as Republican candidate for the Presidency in the 1936 campaign. Chairmen of the election districts of the county, all members of the club, unanimously backed the resolution.

Plans for a dinner in honor of Albert Lomax, delegate of St. Marys County, who has been appointed tobacco inspector for the State, after a hard fight, are going forward.

It will be a gala occasion, the Governor will set the date, and many distinguished guests have been invited, including Gov. and Mrs. Nice.

Brittingham Assumes The Duties of Mayor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philippi, W. Va., April 25.—Harry F. Brittingham, councilman at large, appointed by city council to fill the unexpired term of Mayor W. A. Mason, who died last week, is now discharging the duties of that office.

Brittingham's place as councilman will be taken by Roy J. Moore, former city clerk.

Cumberland Firm Incorporated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 25.—The State Tax Commission has received a certificate of incorporation for Ira M. Bollman Equipment, Inc., of Cumberland, to deal in fixtures, tools and other equipment. Capital stock consists of 2,500 shares, with par value of $10 each. The incorporators are Ira M. Bollman and Mrs. E. Jamison, of Cumberland, and James M. Snell, of Bedford, Pa.

Actors' Benefit Scheduled for ComingSunday

Heads Events of NewWeek; New Screen and Stage Bills Are Varied.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

On Sunday night, the National Theater Players will inaugurate their eleventh consecutive spring and summer season by presenting for the first time in Washington "Accent on Youth," a comedy that is a current Broadway attraction at the Plymouth Theater in New York.

Ordinarily the National's "little season" would open Monday night. The special Sunday night performance will be in the nature of an Actors' Fund Benefit, with many special attractions added to the performance of "Accent on Youth," with Nancy Sheridan, Roy Roberts, Edwina Wise, J. Arthur Young, Adelaide Hibbard, Forrest Orr, Raymond Bramley and others in roles of importance. Following the enactment of the play, another form of entertainment will be presented when all of the stage acts playing the Earle and Loew's Fox will appear, Mr. Frohman will speak briefly on the purposes of the benefit and other notables of the theater, who will accompany him down from New York, will be heard from.

There will be no advance in charges for this elaborated performance over the regular $1.10 top customarily assessed for the Players' productions. In view of the length of the program it is announced that the curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock.

"Accent on Youth" will continue the bill at the National throughout the ensuing week, with the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

• • • •

"Private Worlds," the screen adaptation of the best-selling novel by Phyllis Bottome, will be the feature of the bill at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Claudette Colbert in the stellar role. This subject is said to afford its star the best opportunity she has had since her academy award performance in "It Happened One Night." She is supported by Joel McCrea, Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson and others of note. On the stage, the 32 Roxyettes will be included in the bill which will be headined by Johnny Perkins, "A Ton of Fun," and also embrace acts by Ruth Petty, "Five Feet of Blues;" Eleanor Whitley, dancer, and Stan Kavanaugh, juggling comedian. Herb Cook and His Three Little Words again will participate in Freddie Clark's overture and the new issue of the newsreel will complete the program.

• • • •

Franchot Tone and Una Merkel are the principal players in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "One New York Night," which comes to Loew's Fox Theater as chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow. The story is based on the stage play, "Order, Please," by Edward Childs Carpenter. Conrad Nagel, Steffi Duna, Harvey Stephens and Charles Starrett lead the supporting cast. Gertrude Niesen, that exotic young songstress of radio, stage and screen, returns to the Fox tomorrow to headline the vaudeville bill, which also will include Cookie Bowers, comedian and impersonator, and the 24 Capitol Dancing Girls. Prof. Lampkin's overture and a new Fox Movietone News will complete the bill.

• • • •

Merle Oberon, John Loder and Charles Boyer appear in the pivotal roles of "Thunder in the East," the screen feature which supplants "The Bride of Frankenstein" as the new week's major offering at RKO-Keith's. The story is one of romance, adventure and intrigue in the Far East and was adapted from the French, "The Battle," by Claude Farrere. Short sound subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News will round out the entertainment.

• • • •

"Ten Dollar Raise" arrives on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow as foremost feature of the new cinema week. Edward Everett Horton and Karen Morley have the principal roles, supported by Alan Dinehart, Burton Churchill and Frank Kelton. The story was written by Peter B. Kyne and directed by George Marshall. Short sound subjects, comedy and newsreel will augment the feature.

• • • •

Murder in a speeding transcontinental plane furnishes the theme upon which the action of "Death Flies East" is based. This thrilling subject takes possession of the screen at the Metropolitan tomorrow, with Conrad Nagel and Florence Rice in the featured roles. Others in the cast include Irene Franklin, Purnell Pratt, Raymond Walburn, Geneva Mitchell and Oscar Apfel. Morton Downey in "Castle of Dreams;" Easy Aces in "Some Bridgework" and a full 15-minute newsreel are added.

• • • •

Jean Harlow, William Powell and their excellent supporting cast have scored so decisively in "Reckless" that that sophisticated subject is being held over for a second week at Loew's Palace. "The March of Time," an oddity, "The Lost Chic," and newsreel will continue integral parts of the bill.

• • • •

George Arliss in the role of Arthur, Duke of Wellington, conqueror of Napoleon at Waterloo, will continue through a second week as pictured star of the bill at the Belasco Theater. The title of his vehicle, made by Gaumont-British, is "The Iron Duke." It is supplemented by an animated Terry-Toon comic; a juvenile comedy, featuring Shirley Temple and Junior Coughlin, and the Pathe News.

• • • •

Ruth Draper will make her first appearance in Washington in many seasons in the National Theater at a special matinee on Tuesday, April 30. She will be seen in a series of the solo character sketches of the type which she was among the first to make famous. In addition to being the sole actress appearing in them, Miss Draper also writes all of her own vehicles.

• • • •

"Beauty Revue" is the title of the new burlesque attraction coming to the Gayety Theater for a week's engagement, opening with the usual matinee on Sunday. Buddy and Betty Abbott, Harry Evanson, Vida Leslie, "Honey" Bee Keller, Palmer Cote and Milt Bronson constitute the cast of principals. The extra added attraction will be provided by Hinda Wausau, greatest of the display artists.

• • • •

Spic and span after months of preparation, Glen Echo Park, once more under the managing directorship of Leonard B. Schloss, will officially inaugurate the outdoor amusement season on Saturday. All of the 50-odd amusement devices have been put in tip-top shape; McWilliams' Orchestra again will play for dancing in the Spanish garden ballroom, and a new thriller has been added to the list of attractions in a crazy ride in the dark known as "The Pretzel." The Crystal Pool, one of the finest in the country, will not open until May 25.

Wallace to Address Rally at Petersburg

Secretary's Speech Starts Town's Youth Week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, Va., April 25.—Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, will speak in this city Saturday as the opening feature of the local observance of National Youth Week. His address will be before a mass meeting in Gray's Armory at 1:30 o'clock.

Secretary Wallace will come to Petersburg direct from Richmond, where he will address Virginia farmers at the City Auditorium in the morning. His Richmond address will deal with the AAA program. No subject has been announced for his Petersburg speech.

Student Senate At Virginia U. Wins Vote Rule

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 25.—The University of Virginia student senate yesterday found itself in complete control of the disputed election of officers for the academic department, when the honor committee called off its plans for an election and withdrew "from all further participation in the question."

The regular election had been scheduled for yesterday by the honor committee, after two ballots had been previously taken to determine the method of selecting candidates. On one ticket the students voted to remove the nominating power from two honorary social fraternities and place it in the hands of the senate. This referendum was conducted by College Topics, student newspaper, which attacked the nonrepresentative manner of naming candidates and questioned the "fitness" of those up for election.

At the same time the honor committee took a vote and found that opinion favored retaining the old system. The senate stepped in and declared the actions of both illegal, and set a third referendum for Wednesday. Approximately 1,200 are eligible to cast ballots on the question.

A statement released yesterday by J. Davis Marret, chairman of the honor committee, recognized that "the control of all matters pertaining to student government which have not been edelagted to other authorities rests in the hands of the student senate."

It added that, "since we, the honor committee, have no written constitution delegating this control to us, we hereby withdraw from all further participation in the question of the academic elections."

Rookie Wilshere Shuts Out Nats With Two Hits as A's Win, 10-0

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, April 25.

THIS Vernon Wilshere, who left-handed the Nats into submission with his two-hit pitching performance, is the sole survivor of a half dozen college pitchers signed by the Athletics last summer, but his lack of professional experience today was about as noticeable as a Singer Midget on Mars.

Connie Mack corraled him on the campus of the University of Indiana last June when he finished his sophomore year after the venerable manager of the A's had watched the big college kid strike out 18 Temple University batters in a game here a month before. It then developed that he was some pumpkins as a pitcher even before he reached college, and he won 18 games in 19 starts for Indiana in 1934.

If a no-hit game entitles a pitcher to his proudest boast, then Wilshere can shout his triumphs from the housetops. And if Freddie Sington and Lyn Lary had not interrupted Wilshere's bid for a no-hit game today it would have been no new experience for him. In his time he has pitched four no-hitters and, what's more, pitched 'em consecutively, and if that isn't the peak of pitching performance, then Huey Long has lockjaw.

I am taking Harold (Speed) Johnson's word for it all. In his "Who's Who in the American League," Johnson lists Wilshere's sensational performance for the Skaneateles (N. Y.) High School team when in four consecutive games he allowed his opponents neither a hit nor a run.

CONNIE MACK last fall singled out Wilshere as the best of his collegiate pitching crop, but until today even Mack had not dreamed that he could be so effective. It was Mack's intention to confine him to relief roles until he had been seasoned by sufficient big-league appearances to take a regular turn.

Last year Wilshere pitched 22 innings for the A's with an indifferent record, walking 15 hitters and fanning 19. It was his wicked curve ball that captured Mack's fancy, although Connie's enthusiasm was tempered by the rookie's wildness. He failed to start him in a single game.

But down in Fort Myers, Fla., during the training period, Jimmy Foxx prevailed upon Wilshere to change his pitching style from sidearm to overhand in a move designed to curb his wildness. Apparently it succeeded without affecting the lad's curve ball. In Chattanooga, on the way North last month, Connie let him pitch three innings. He faced nine batters and struck out seven.

Few have been the college pitchers who have made the long hop from the campus to the big leagues in one stride with any success. Others have done it, notably infielders like Frankie Frisch and Eddie Collins, but pitching is a more highly specialized art. Wilshere turned in his two-hit performance today against a club that was no set-up. In the first two games of the series here the Nats had made 24 base hits against Mack's veteran talent.

With the failure of Walter Stewart on the mound today, Manager Bucky Harris is able to arrive at definite conclusions anent his pitching staff. He still has his pitching problem, but, like the fellow on the gallows down in Kentucky the other day, he at least knows where he stands.

Harris realizes now that he owns but three trustworthy pitchers—Whitehill, Burke and Hadley. For his No. 4 pitcher he must now go hunting. Monte Weaver has received two trials and failed. Stewart today was about as effective as a pea shooter in the Battle of the Marne.

As he casts about for his fourth starting hurler, Harris' eyes naturally fall on little Lefty Leon Pettit, the grizzled veteran of the Southern Association wars who in two relief appearances has manifested not only evidence that he knows how to pitch, but that he pitches with a fair degree of success.

Young Ed Linke, who had been regarded as a health addition to the Nats' staff in Biloxi, has shown a tendency toward wildness that makes him a risk. Henry Coppola is fast falling from grace. Harris' only other alternative is Jack Russell, and Russell he is bent on keeping for relief work only. Thus the selection narrows to Pettit—he's going to start a game any day now.

Babich's One-Hit Game Proves Dodgers Are Grave, Not Daffy

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

EBBETS FIELD, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 25.—Gone are the goats from the Flatbush lots. Gone, too, are the dopes from the Brooklyn Baseball Club. Brooklyn isn't Brooklyn any more. You come over here for laughs, and they keep you quaking with excitement and shivering in suspense over a no-hitter. For seven and one-third innings I have been perched in the Dodger press coop. Swallowing my heart, holding my thumbs, knocking wood, and trying to make contact with the proper baseball gods while Johnny Babich, young Brooklyn pitcher, was throwing what looked like a no-hit game.

And for that seven and a third innings he pitched the perfect game until a utility infielder by the name of Haslin slashed a single past the box, a grasser that Linus Frey couldn't reach, and the show was over.

And right after Haslin hit his wretched single, Frey, Cuccinello and Leslie engineered a perfect double play, and the Phillies were no nearer a score than they had been all afternoon. Why was Mr. Haslin born? And isn't it always the substitute or the utility man who plays the role of Philistine to some pitcher's thing of joy and beauty?

You know, this isn't comedy out here, but baseball. Red hot, rooting baseball. The pressure that piled up as Babich went along, inning after inning, without a hit or a walk was terrific. All the odds were against him. It was early in the season. The Phil's are a hard-hitting club. And as each inning grew into the next the laws of averages waxed against Babich. Phew! I'm weak.

Now, you know when a pitcher is serving up what looks like a no-hit game, it isn't all pitcher. The fielders, around the bases and in the outfield, do a lot of tall galloping, stretching and spearing. And Babich had support all the way. Not the old Brooklyn support, but ball players working behind a smooth kid. Why, the next thing they know out here, the club will be losing its patronage. They hit, they field, they bunt, they use their heads for thinking. Their pitchers are hard to hit. Gee, maybe I'm in the wrong park.

And I wish you could see those boys on the base paths. Fast, keen, accurate and one at a time playing for a bag. Why, it's marvelous. Why, Mr. Terry is going to have the devil's own time with this club. Oh, I don't envy Mr. Terry if he has to play them any crucial games over here. The boys go around rolling their tongues inside their mouths. I inquired of Mr. Stengel, the impresario over here, whether they all chewed tobacco. He said no, that the young men were still tasting the blood of these Giants they bit

Baer to Fight Three More, Then Quit

Braddock, Joe Louis and Schmeling Are Next Rivals, He Says.

Champ Would Abdicate and Give Throne to Brother Buddy.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, April 25.—Heavyweight Champion Max Baer today peered with his one good eye at the simple life and solemnly announced he would quit this "too tough" fight racket after three more titular appearances.

Like Dizzy Dean, who a few weeks ago said his "fast one" would be just a baseball memory after the 1936 season, Barnsorming Max declared he would abdicate the heavyweight crown in favor of his brother, Buddy. Diz, when he said he'd quit, was confident li'l brother Paul would take over the lion's share of National League pitching laurels.

With his left eye in mourning as a reminder that exhibition fights can be serious, King Max came here to take on Babe Hunt tomorrow night in another of those four-round no-decision shows. The crepe was hung on Max's eye by Eddie Simms at Cleveland in just such an exhibition.

While Max went through his preliminary paces he formally introduced the Max Baer retirement plan, which provides, among other things, for the champion to step down in a blaze of glory.

The champion has his plans well laid. A few well-timed punches that could ruin the whole business get no consideration in the Max policy.

"First, it will be Braddock. Then Joe Louis—if he beats Carnera—then maybe Schmeling in England. Those fights will give me enough money. And I'll appoint my brother Buddy as my successor and let him defend the title against outstanding fighters."

Belittles Joe Louis.

King Max retired Braddock with a nod. Then he dismissed the brown bomber. "I saw Louis fight. Why all this smoke about him? If I fight him in September in Chicago I'll lick him as sure as I'm sitting here."

As a climax to Maxie's dream, the champion will polish off Schmeling and step out, with the plaudits of the throng ringing in his ears, and—more important—the rattle of cash in his jeans.

Yankee Sets Sail For British Races

By the United Press.

Boston, April 25.—Unofficial good will ambassador of international yacht racing, the trim white Boston sloop Yankee cut across windy, star-lit Atlantic waters under her own sail tonight on a 3,000-mile trip to Gosport, England.

First big American yacht to invade England in 30 years, the big Class J boat that was twice runner-up for America's Cup defense honors, passed Boston Lightship at noon to a bon voyage of whistles, blasts, gunfire, spouting water and roar of seaplanes.

Yankee will compete in more than Class J regattas, against such craft as King George V's Brittania, Capt. T. O. M. Sopwith's heaten America's Cup challenger, Endeavour, Velsheda, Shamrock V, Astra and Candida.

P. Dean Bows As Cubs Win 7-5 Game

Klein Leads 12-Hit Attack; Cards' Rally in 6th to Even Score.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, April 25.—Paul Dean, serving in a relief role, lost his first game of the season today as the Chicago Cubs landed on the offerings of three Cardinal pitchers to defeat the world champions, 7 to 5, in the odd game of their series. The crowd numbered 2,500.

"Daffy," who replaced Kleinke in the seventh, was hit three times in the two innings he stayed before being supplanted by Heusser. He went to the mound after Kleinke had been batted for five runs in six innings and the Red Birds had tied the score.

Cubs Bunch Hits.

The Cubs bunched their 12 hits successively while Charlie Root and Bill Lee, although hit for 11 bingles, were backed by good fielding that ruined the effect of the St. Louis batsmanship. In the second inning four solid drives—by Collins, Delancey, Terry Moore, and Durocher—failed to bring in a Cardinal run. Moore's hit was the only triple of the game.

The slim 3-to-2 lead gained early by the world champions vanished in the fifth when Chuck Klein, Cub right fielder, knocked a long home run to the roof of the right-field pavilion and scored behind Root and Herman, who had singled.

Runs by Collins and Moore tied the count in the sixth. In the eighth Cavaretta's single off Collins' glove and Hartnett's double against the right-field screen put the Cubs ahead, 6 to 5. They added the final run off Heusser in the ninth on Klein's single, a balk and Durocher's two-base wild throw. Cuyler, running for Klein, brought in the score.

Two Americans Defeat Chinese Davis Cupmen

Ojai, Calif., April 25 (AP).—China's two Davis Cup players, Kho Sinkie and Guy Cheng, were eliminated in the first round of the annual Ojai Valley tennis tournament today.

Alan Herrington, of Hollywood, former Stanford star, defeated Cheng, 7—5, 6—0; 6—1, while Jess Millman, one-time University of Southern California player, trounced Sinkie, 6—1, 6—3.

Ruth Kept Indoors.

New York, April 25 (AP).—Babe Ruth, ill with a bad cold, did not go to the Polo Grounds today for the third and final game of the series between the Giants and the Boston Braves. Physicians advised Ruth to remain indoors until the cold improves.

Bobby Jones to Pair With Miss Wethered

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—Bobby Jones, one-time "grand slam" winner of golf, was announced today as the partner for Miss Joyce Wethered, British women's ace, in the four-ball match with which she will open her American professional tour on May 30.

The announcement was made by Charles H. (Chuck) Howe, manager of a store which is sponsoring Miss Wethered's tour.

Jones and the British star will meet Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, five-times winner of the American women's title, and an as yet unannounced partner, at the Women's National Golf and Tennis Club, Glen Head, Long Island.

The four-ball contest will be the second time Jones has toured the links with Miss Wethered.

In 1930, at St. Andrew's, after he had won one of the four titles that made him the greatest golfer in the world, he, Miss Wethered, her brother, Roger, former British Amateur titlist, and Dale Bourn, who won the English championship two years later, competed in an exhibition foursome.

Allison Blasts Tom Mangan In 3 Sets

By the Associated Press.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 25.—The dazzling service and crafty returns of Wilmer Allison, Austin (Tex.) ace, today blasted Tom Mangan, of Washington, out of the semi-finals of the annual Mason and Dixon tennis tourney by a 6—1, 6—0, 6—1 decision.

Playing brilliant tennis that called forth rounds of applause, Allison slashed steaming forehand drives over the net and frequently placed the ball on the sidelines with a backhand stroke, keeping Mangan on the defensive all the way.

8-Run Third Pounds Out Stewart

Harris Removes Three Regulars From Game as Rival Stars.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, April 25.—Hard-pressed for pitchers after four straight defeats, Manager Connie Mack today was forced to call upon young Vernon Wilshere, only a year off the campus of Indiana University, and it was too bad—for the Nats.

The Washington club might just as well have sat the game out. They made more errors than base hits. The left-handed, tow-headed Wilshere today lived down the fact that he was born in a place called Skaneateles, N. Y., by pitching just two base hits to the Nats.

Wilshere's two-hit performance explains Washington's share of the 10 to 0 score. The harrowing details of an eight-run inning by the Athletics in the third against the pathetic pitching of Walter Stewart and Monte Weaver explains how come the ball game lost all semblance of a contest early in the proceedings.

Three Regulars Derricked.

In fact, it wasn't until the seventh inning that the Nats ascertained that they were not to be the victims of a no-hit game by young Wilshere whose curve was dipping away from the Washington bats as if Catcher Jimmy Foxx was pulling a string on the ball. Before it was all over, Wilshere had struck out seven and Manager Bucky Harris had conceded defeat by removing three regulars from the line-up.

The most unpopular man in Philadelphia today is Freddie Sington, the Nats' utility outfielder who interrupted the futility of his teammates by blasting a clean single to left field in the seventh and jarred Wilshere, the Athletics and the 2,000 fans in the park out of their no-hit dreams.

Up until that point, the most serious threat made by the Nats occurred in the sixth inning, when they staged a rousing rally comprised of an error, a base on balls and a count of two balls and no strikes on the third hitter.

Lyn Lary was the maker of the second and last hit. He drove a burning single through the infield in the eighth inning when the Nats threatened to reduce the A's lead from 10-0 to 10-1, but a double play cut him down.

The Nats not only were shut out—they were never nearer than two bases to a run at any time. Only one Washington player advanced beyond first base and he perished in an attempt to reach third. That was the kind of a ball game that Wilshere pitched.

This was the appointed day for Bucky Harris to determine the effectiveness of Pitcher Walter Stewart. He was not long in determining it. With two out in the first inning, Bob Johnson walloped his third home run of the year into the left-field bleachers for the first and decisive tally. Jimmy Foxx followed with a triple that fell only

Red Sox Bow To Yankees By 12 to 4

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 25.—The Yankees turned on some of their old-time pressure today in a seven-run fifth inning, to take the series final from the Red Sox, 12 to 4.

All the Yanks except Johnny Broaca, who was busy hurling his second winning game of the season, hit hard and they received the benefit of a lot of loose play by the Red Hose. Boston made four errors, three by Will Werber, tossed in a handful of walks, and, in general, performed like anything but a first-place team. They had been charged with only one misplay in seven previous games.

Up to the fifth Gordon Rhodes had waged a fairly close duel with Broaca, with the Sox leading, 3 to 1, largely because of Werber's homer in the third. Jesse Hill had clouted one for the Yanks in the first half of the same inning.

Fumbles Grounder.

The trouble started when Werber fumbled Hill's grounder and before the inning ended the Yanks had sent 11 men to the plate for four hits, three walks, two of which forced runs in, and a hit batsman. Rolfe followed Hill with a single and George Selkirk poled a homer over the fence in left center to send the Yanks ahead.

After Gehrig singled, Rhodes was relieved by George Pipgras, who hit Dickey, passed Lazzeri and gave

10,000 Watch Gelding Win Feature

Peters Applies Whip and Mount Takes Lead From Rival.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 25.—Touched with the whip as he approached the finish in a head-and-head duel with Nautch, the Foxcatcher Farm's Rosemont made his first appearance of the year a victorious one in today's feature race here. It happened in the Shenandoah, a dash of 6 furlongs for 3-year-olds, and proved a triumph for the favorite players, as the winner paid a $3.30 mutuel.

Third, and hardly a factor in the battle for the first award, came Bachelor Dinner, half of the A. G. Vanderbilt entry. Seven other excellent 3-year-olds competed.

A crowd of 10,000 witnessed the program, conducted under ideal conditions. The track was the fastest for the meeting. A warm sun shone and a mild breeze rustled the bed of tulips in the infield. Some of the more hardy customers went in for shirt sleeves, but they were rushing the season.

Rosemont, winner of the Eastern Shore Handicap here last year, showed the critics that he is in excellent shape and ready to go the longer route necessary for a successful Preakness appearance. The hefty son of The Porter broke alertly under the handling of Mouse Peters.

Nautch cut out the early pace, with Bobby Merritt doing the kicking. Peters was content to follow the front runner until well into the stretch, where Rosemont moved abreast of his rival. When it appeared that Rosemont might lag, Peters gave the colt a slash with the whip and the race was over.

The time of 1:12, while not the best of the meeting, was creditable.

Sonny Workman came from last to first with the horse Venetian to win the third race, another sprint. Postscript had forged to the front and Believer was next when Workman came bouncing through the stretch to nip that pair in the final strides. Fredrick was raced out trying to save the purse from Postscript. The winner, owned by Bob Robertson, paid $17.70.

The program opened to the tune of an $89.50 mutuel when Tody Con, a filly, which showed some early speed in a previous race, led from start to finish to graduate from the maiden class over the 6-furlong route. Ridden by little Georgie Watson, Tody Con was hustled into a long lead and lasted, under severe punishment, to offset the closing rush of Flight of Gold.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TODY CON, $89.50, $24.60, $11.10; FLIGHT OF GOLD, $4.80, $3.40; QUEEN HELEN (field), $4.20.

TODY CON began quickly, moved clear when leaving the back stretch, was placed to severe pressure after reaching the home stretch and barely lasted to stall off FLIGHT OF GOLD. Latter, in tight quarters in the early running, secured racing room on the inside and finished full of run when clear. QUEEN HELEN went strongly from the beginning, was hard ridden and held on well. BULL FIGHTER came through on the inside entering the home stretch, but hung after entering contention. BEST BUTTER was hurried into a contending position, but failed to rally in the final drive. BAYDROP broke slow.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:13. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's b. f. (2), by Rock Man—Cherry Laurel. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 0:54 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHERRY STONE, $5.10, $3.50, $2.60; HIATUS, $4.90, $3.90; PROSY, $3.70.

CHERRY STONE, quick to begin and in close pursuit of PROSY, displayed excellent courage when the final drive came and, closing gamely, was up in the concluding strides. HIATUS went in the thick of contention from the beginning, drew abreast of the leaders in the closing furlong and fought it out determinedly. PROSY went in his best form, displayed good speed when setting the pace, and held on resolutely approaching the run for home. SEABISCUIT worked his way up on the outside, responded to vigorous pressure, and was going fastest of all at the end.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:44. Winner, R. Robertson's ch. h. (5), by Colonel Venie—Waterflag. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625, second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VENETIAN, $17.70, $7.60, $6.20; POSTSCRIPT, $6.50, $5.00; BELIEVER, $10.60.

VENETIAN, squeezed back coming out of the chute and a trailer in the early running, circled his field when entering the home stretch, closed with a belated rush, and wore POSTSCRIPT down inside the final sixteenth. Latter, on the outside and closer up in the early running than usual, took command midway of the turn, met persistent efforts from FREDRICK, but could not resist the winner. BELIEVER improved his position steadily, saved ground entering the home stretch, and finished stoutly. FREDRICK showed speed strongly for six furlongs, but tired from his early efforts. DESERT CALL was used up getting to the front and is beaten tiring approaching the home stretch. DALMATIA weakened after a half-mile. CANDESCENT was in tight quarters and could not engage the leaders.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Shenandoah. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:19. Winner, Foxcatcher Farm's b. c. (3), by The Porter—Garden Rose. Trained by R. E. Handlen. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROSEMONT, $3.30, $2.80, $2.40; NAUTCH, $3.30, $2.60; BACHELOR DINNER (entry), $2.90.

ROSEMONT, nicely handled and kept close up while on the outside of the pacemaker, drew abreast of NAUTCH when midway of the home stretch, then closed gamely to get up in the last sixteenth. After being forced to the outside entering into the lead and saving ground until challenged, responded willingly and held on well after bearing out nearing the finish. BACHELOR DINNER secured racing room on the inside to reach a forward position, saved ground and continued with good courage. HOWS CHANCES closed with a rush after trailing his field early.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:52½. Winner, Mrs. D. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOODY GOODY, $25.70, $6.90, $3.90; MASTER LAD, $2.80, $2.40; JACK CHEVIGNY, $3.30.

GOODY GOODY, restrained back of the leaders for the first six furlongs, gained steadily when placed to a drive, came around the pacemakers and, under a strong drive, was up in the last sixteenth. MASTER LAD followed along under slight restraint until leaving the back stretch, engaged the leaders to take a brief lead, but could not withstand the winner. JACK CHEVIGNY raced strongly from the beginning, wore RIVER ROSE and HOGAN'S FOX down, but could not stave off the first two. RIVER ROSE weakened after six furlongs. HOGANS FOX stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:22½. Winner, E. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHEST POINT, $6.20, $3.20, $2.70; SMEAR, $3.20, $2.70; GENERAL LEJEUNE, $3.00.

HIGHEST POINT assumed command without effort when straightened into the back stretch, saved ground thereafter and held on determinedly when hard ridden in the closing test. SMEAR improved his position gamely, came through on the inside of GENERAL LEJEUNE, met with slight interference midway of the home stretch, but closed courageously. GENERAL LEJEUNE raced strongly from the beginning and held on strongly under punishment.

Heavy Timber Awaits Field in Gold Cup

By Bill McCormick.

BACK to the site of its inception in 1922, the fourteenth Virginia Gold Cup race will be run on May 4 this year at the Broadview Estate of Alexander B. Hagner, near Warrenton, over a greatly improved course. The Gold Cup race, a four-mile affair, will be run over a stiff timber course and the Virginia Grand National, which may draw a larger field and steal the spotlight from the more traditional steeplechase, will be run over the well planned and difficult brush course which has just been completed at Broadview.

The 10 unyielding timber jumps on the Gold Cup course are from 3 feet 8 inches to 4 feet 2 inches in height. Nineteen such jumps must be successfully navigated before a horse can even finish in the race, let alone win it.

First Grand National.

The Virginia Grand National, which will be run for the first time this year, will christen the carefully prepared brush course. Jumps on the brush course are from 5 feet to 5 feet 8 inches in height and some of them require a prodigious broad jump to be successfully cleared. Twenty such obstacles must be hurdled to finish in the Virginia Grand National.

The two Liverpool jumps, almost exact duplicates of the Liverpool jumps on the English Grand National course, are fronted by ditches 6 feet wide and 3 feet deep. The brush on these fences is trimmed at 5 feet, 8 inches and the horse must leap through the air 14 feet from take-off to landing to clear.

Jump No. 5, which corresponds to the Canal turn in the Grand National, has a sharp turn just before the take-off and the brush is trimmed at 5 feet 8 inches.

Ditch 8 Feet Wide.

No. 7, a water jump patterned after the Beeches, is trimmed at 5 feet, 8 inches and has a ditch 8 feet wide on the landing side. It is generally considered the most difficult jump on the course. A broad jump of 18 feet is necessary for safe clearance.

Mrs. R. C. Winmill's Chalice and Mrs. George Eustis' Massapequa, two possible starters in the Virginia Grand National, were schooled—briefly—over the brush course yesterday afternoon.

Massapequa bit the dust on the first jump. Chalice cleared the first and second jumps without too much trouble, but unseated its rider after going over the difficult Liverpool.

Full View of Course.

The new course offers an unimpeded view, either from the center or from the hill near the Hagner home, of the entire course. The course, used since 1928, proved somewhat unsatisfactory from a spectators' viewpoint as the horses could not be kept in view at all times.

It is estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 persons will attend the races on May 4 and ample parking accommodations for more than 10,000 cars have been provided. Luncheon may be obtained at the grounds during the races.

Among the social events held in connection with the races will be a subscription dance to be held May 3 at the Fauquier Recreation Auditorium.

Dear Al:

There are few more popular horses in Maryland than Ilchester. The veteran son of Dunlin drew four claiming checks yesterday and following his victory was led away by J. E. Smallman. Pardon me for bringing it up, but I guess I didn't warn you that Goody Goody was a real race horse. I admit that I didn't pick him for today, but I hope that some of you, who were clipped when he failed, got even. The touts are running wild at this track. They approach everyone with the usual entre of, "Well, who do you like?" or the equivalent. These men stimulate betting, and probably that's why they are allowed to operate. Buddy Ensor may try a new saddle comeback at Pimlico. Speaking of claiming horses, there were no claims for Hut the other evening. C. V. Whitney's Today was shipped to New York, where he will compete in the Wood Memorial, later being sent to Kentucky for the Derby. Head Play is likely to run here in the $7,500 added Philadelphia Handicap on Saturday. But Discovery will not see action until Belmont Park opens. Bud Stotler, trainer of the Vanderbilt horses, has saddled 12 winners in 20 days.

BILL.

First race—True Charm is a cheap one at best, but he set a fast pace last out and stayed well for the final drive. Has only to improve a little to take care of this field. Sky Haven will appreciate an off track but is formidable opposition. Scotch Queen for the show.

Second race—Conquer was knocked back in his last start, but ran a very capable race. The J. H. Jones juvenile was scratched out of the Aberdeen when no suitable rider could be engaged. Merrit has the mount tomorrow. Wise Will has worked well and is dangerous. Mr. Quick for the show end.

Third race—Witan has been bouncing around of late. Draws Workman for the saddle work tomorrow and I'm stringing along. Jim John has a certain amount of class but may need a race. Golden Sceptre for the minor award.

Fourth race—Legume should repeat if given a capable rider. I don't believe Reid is strong enough to win with this one. Boston Brook looms as the one to beat.

Fifth race—Kate showed excellent form in her first outing of the year. Tries a longer route tomorrow and I expect the result to be the same. Speedmore may run under Workman's handling. Xandra is consistent and at her best. Must be respected here.

Sixth race—Mary's May was rushed off her feet last out after the clockers had reported that she was ready to win. If she gets a rated ride tomorrow we may find this one finishing on top. Salisbury has been working well.

Seventh race—Cousin George didn't do much running for Appleton Phillips the other day. Lynch will ride tomorrow and I expect no mistakes. Pretty Wise and O'Neill for the other pay positions.

Burnett Defeats Allen, 3 and 1, to Win Rock Creek Golf Title

Closes Round With Birdie On 17th

Medalist Victor in Final After Beating Rippy in Semi-Final.

By Dave Herman.

VOLNEY BURNETT, Washington fireman, won the Rock Creek spring golf tournament yesterday by defeating Herman Allen, 3 and 1, in the finals.

Medalist by virtue of his 70, two over par, in the qualifying round Monday, Burnett waded through the field in championship fashion for his first important victory since he won the "Uptown" title in the fall of 1932.

Burnett dethroned the defending champion, Claude Rippy, 1 up, in a stirring morning semifinals, negotiating the hilly municipal layout in 71. In Allen, he also encountered a rugged opponent, who lost because he was unable to match Burnett's brilliant par 4 on the 435-yard sixteenth and his spectacular birdie deuce on the 159-yard seventeenth.

Trims Ernie Garlem.

Allen went to the final by turning back Ernie Garlem, Central High student, 2 and 1.

Burnett's victory over the big favorite, Rippy, was not unexpected, since the fireman has been playing in his best form and Rippy obviously has been showing lack of practice after the 77 he scored in the qualifying round. Burnett overcame a 1-up lead Rippy gained at the turn, winning the fifteenth with a par to even the match, and sinking a spectacular 30-footer for a birdie on the seventeenth for his margin of victory. They halved the eighteenth.

The new champion and Allen rounded the turn all even in their finals, after Burnett had won the second, lost the fifth, the seventh and won the eighth.

Chips Dead For Birdie.

Burnett chipped dead for his birdie three on the 284-yard twelfth as Allen parked his shot in the woods and took a four. He won the thirteenth with a par 3 to go two up when Allen three-putted, but Burnett took a ghastly seven on the long fifteenth, losing to Allen's par five.

Par golf gave Burnett the sixteenth, and he clinched the battle on the seventeenth with a mashie shot that anchored no less than 3 inches from the pin for a birdie deuce. Allen got a three.

Champions in all other flights were decided, the big upset being Buddy Sharkey's setback at the hands of C. M. Beall in the third flight.

Pitcher Proves Team Not Daffy

Well, now that the spell is broken, Babich just walked Boland, Philly pinch hitter, in the ninth. Did I tell you that this was Philly playing here, or was I too excited? Why, doggone it, these Brooklyns had you pale and perspiring up here, and it was a chill breeze that nipped off the Gowanus Canal.

Ow! Babich just walked another man. But Allen popped an easy one to Frey, to end the game, and with the baseball season no more than two weeks old, a Brooklyn pitcher has pitched a one-hit shut-out. I saw it myself. And but for the evil day that a certain Mr. Haslin wooed the lady of his heart, and she said, "Yes, dear; I will marry you!" it would have been the sweetest sight in baseball—a no-hitter. For to that happy couple a son was born, and that son of Haslin had to be the one to get the lucky hit.

The ball didn't even get off the ground. A yard or so to the left and Frey would have gobbled it up. And from then on, Babich had weak hitters to pitch to. Nor is this the kind of a club that will let a pitcher work his heart out with a run lead, or no lead at all. In the fourth they came up with three runs, and two of them were scored by Babich himself.

You couldn't have had a more perfect set-up for a no-hit game than with the pitcher socking a double with two on board. I suppose there was a full moon out when Haslin, sr., wooed the future mother of his boy, and she just couldn't say no.

Well, I convince easy. If I want to see a red hot ball game, I know where to come now. Dear old Brooklyn. Casey said it is the same team he had last year, but he thinks the boys found themselves somehow during those hectic pre-autumn days when they were pasting the Giants out of the pennant, last year.

He wasn't sure whether he had four pitchers who would stand up, but he's certain about one more now, any way, that being Babich. Gosh, that kid had stuff on the ball. After the first couple of innings in which he was a little wild, he put two strikes over on every batter so fast that they must have thought they got them on the bench. Give a good long cheer for Brooklyn, kiddies, and come out and see some baseball.

Nats and Red Sox Open Series Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, April 25.—With an even .500 rating to show for their first eight games of the season, the Nats tonight entrained for Boston to open a three-game series tomorrow with the Red Sox, who have dealt them three of their four defeats.

Manager Bucy Harris will send Earl Whitehill to the mound in the series opener in an attempt to end the string of successes by the Red Sox against the Nats. Lefty Grove is expected to oppose him.

Richmond Nine Downs W. & L.; Tops Race

Wins, 5-4, Aided by Errors; Checks Rival's Rally in 9th Inning.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Va., April 25.—Richmond University collected three runs in the second and two in the ninth here today, to defeat Washington and Lee, 5 to 4, and take undisputed lead in the State Baseball League.

The Spiders got their three tallies in the second, when the Generals handled the ball carelessly. With Campbell and Lacy on, Diedrich drove a ball through second and Mattox let it go through his legs. Diedrich went all the way around, scoring Campbell and Lacy ahead of him.

Hash, Spider hurler, smashed a hard ground ball that bounced off Dickman in the ninth, and Campbell and Diedrich scored. Diedrich had got on through an error chalked up to Dickman.

W. and L. Threatens.

Washington and Lee, also scoring twice in the ninth, threatened to tie the game with two out when Ship Jones, hitting for Pullen, drove a hard liner to right that Morris misjudged. The ball bounded over his head and Jones completed the circuit, Short scoring ahead of him. Field, next man up, was called out on strikes, and the rally ended.

Norman Iler, General shortstop, hit safely three times out of four up and got on in the eighth when Brown dropped his long fly to left.

Babe Didrikson In Semifinal At Houston

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 25—By a 3-and-2 margin, Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, outstanding girl athlete, entered the semifinals of the women's Texas Golf Association tournament today. Her victim was Mrs. F. C. Rochon, of Wichita Falls.

Miss Didrikson tomorrow plays Mrs. R. E. Winger, Fort Worth City champion, who was forced to extra holes today to eliminate Miss Helen Warren, of Dallas, 1 up, on the twentieth.

Beats Mrs. Armstrong.

Playing over the par 37-40—77 River Oaks Country Club course, Mrs. Chandler, former State champion, defeated Mrs. O. R. Armstrong, of El Paso, 5 and 3. Mrs. Chandler played out the 18 holes and had a medal score of 80.

Miss Jameson shot her best tournament golf to easily eliminate Mrs. W. C. Johnson, Houston champion, 8 and 7.

Miss Didrikson shot a 40 on the first nine and was even par for the seven holes after the turn.

5-Run Rally Wins For Shepherd Nine

Shippensburg Teachers Nosed Out, 7 to 6.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sheperdstown, W. Va., April 25. Staging a five-run rally in the fourth inning, Shepherd State Teachers' College defeated Shippensburg (Pa.) State Teachers' College here yesterday, 7-6.

The outstanding player during the game was the second baseman of Shippensburg, DeFrank, who got five hits, two of which were two baggers, and who accounted for five of the six runs scored by Shippensburg.

The game was a hitting spree for both teams. Shepherd, however, took advantage of an error by Bolan in the fourth, scoring three runs on the play.

V. P. I. Tops Roanoke In Net Match, 7 to 2

Blacksburg, Va., April 25 (AP).—The Virginia Tech tennis team swatted out a 7-to-2 victory over the racket wielders of Roanoke College here this afternoon. The Tech team swept through the meet, losing only two singles matches to the hard-fighting Roanoke team.

The feature of the afternoon was the renewal of old feuds between Capt. Vandyke, of Tech, and Beane, of Roanoke, and between Buchanan, of Tech, and Glass, of Roanoke.

Both the Tech men won their matches, Vandyke winning 6—3, 4—6, 6—4, and Buchanan, 8—6, 6—4. Both matches were extremely hard fought and furnished thrill after thrill for the gallery that crowded the courts.

Singles—Lindsey (Tech) defeated Shackleford, 6—2, 6—4; J. D. McCullough (Tech) defeated Holt, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3; Vandyke (Tech) defeated Beane, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4; Buchanan (Tech) defeated Glass, 8—6, 6—4; Hure (Roanoke) defeated Nashner, 4—6, 9—7, 6—3; Spinney (Roanoke) defeated Snead, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2.

Doubles—Vandyke and Lindsey (Tech) defeated Beane and Holt, 6—3, 6—8; McCullough and McCullough (Tech) defeated Hure and Shackleford, 9—7, 6—4; Buchanan and Snead (Tech) defeated Glass and Spinney, 7—9, 6—4, 6—3.

Small Virginia Squad Off to Penn Carnival

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., April 25.—Grover Everett, University of Virginia track captain, who headed a small squad of Cavalier track and field men departing today to compete in the Penn relays tomorrow and Saturday, will make a bid to retain the 110-meter hurdles championship he won last year.

Everett will be pitted against the best hurdlers in the East when he lines up for the special event scheduled for tomorrow afternoon. Running in the mud at Franklin Field last year, Everett skidded over the high barriers to set a new relay record of 15.1 seconds for the distance.

Coach Archie Hahn also has entered his shuttle relay team, which will run Saturday afternoon. With Everett running anchor, Edgar Hawlay, Bill Rust and Don Smith will round out the quartet.

Hyndman High School Tops Everett Nine, 12-4

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hyndman, Pa., April 25.—Hyndman High chalked up its second straight baseball victory by defeating Everett High, 12 to 4, here yesterday in a Bedford County League fray. The locals play their third game tomorrow, meeting LaSalle Institute, of Cumberland, here.

John Albright allowed Everett only seven hits and struck out 12. Shaffer and Foor worked the points for Everett.

THE FLOATING RAILROAD
12 MILES OF TRACK WERE LAID OVER CHAT MOSS, AN ENGLISH PEAT BOG SO SOFT A HORSE COULD NOT WALK OVER IT!
Liverpool and Manchester line, 1830
4-26-35

Railroad builders a century ago knew the trick of overcoming natural obstacles to lay their lines where they wanted them. One of the most momentous engineering feats of early railroad construction was the spanning of Chat Moss, a soupy, semiliquid peat bog in Lancashire County, England, so soft that a horse could not walk over parts of it. The bog was from 30 to 60 feet deep. Many engineers said that it would be impossible to lay such a line without going completely to the bottom of the bog—at least one such engineer gave his testimony to that effect before a House of Commons committee investigating the proposed line in 1825.

The road was completed, however, and it literally floated on the surface of the bog. In softer areas of the peat, builders threw down ballast of brushwood and heather to help support the ties. On one half-mile stretch a 20-foot embankment was thrown up to maintain the grade—but this, with the thousands of cubic yards of materials, sank silently out of sight beneath the spongy bog.

Eventually the whole mass underneath and on either side of the line became consolidated by the superincumbent and lateral pressure—enough so that the Rocket steam engine pulled an experimental train over the new track, George Stephenson was chief engineer of the project.

Virginia's Nine Ends Streak; Wins, 5-4

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 25.—Scoring three runs in the eighth inning, Virginia nosed out West Virginia here today, 5 to 4, to break its losing streak.

Male opened the eighth by drawing a pass and on Rogers' infield top he beat the throw at second. Both runners advanced on Hall's sacrifice and counted on Hooff's drive to left field. Hooff registered the winning run on a squeeze play.

Abbitt held the Mountaineers to six hits, one a double by Johnston and another a home run in the eighth by Stewart. He fanned eight and issued a lone pass. Capt. Rogers went to the mound in the ninth and retired the side.

Balks Are Costly.

Two balks by Morgan, starting twirler for West Virginia, proved disastrous, each costing a run. Cunningham's single in the second frame, scoring Barna, gave the Mountaineers their first run and two were added in the seventh on Lang's drive through short stop.

Yates' 71 Leads Qualifying Field

Freddie Haas, Jr., With 73, Second at Athens, Ga.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, Ga., April 25.—Charlie Yates, the young Georgia Tech sharpshooter and national intercollegiate champion, set a dizzy pace through the first 18 holes of the 36-hole qualifying round of the open Southern intercollegiate golf tournament, shooting a sub-par 71 to take a two-stroke lead.

The Georgia Tech golf team captain carded two eagles during the morning round, getting one on the sixth by sinking a 6-foot putt, and the other on the eighteenth with a 5-foot putt. He went out in 35, one under par, and returned with a 36, also one under par.

Playing with Yates, young Freddie Haas, jr., of Louisiana State, Southern amateur champion, was ragged on the outgoing nine, taking a 39. But he turned in the best of the morning on the incoming layout when he posted a 34, three under par.

Everett, Brown In Fight Here On May 6

Local 'Natural' Arranged After Much Dickering and Bickering.

WASHINGTON'S greatest local heavyweight "natural" was signed yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who finally brought Buck Everett and Natie Brown to terms for a 10-round bout to be held at the Auditorium on May 6. The bout probably will be the last held in the Capital before the Tony Canzoneri-Frankie Klick contest at Griffith Stadium June 10.

Following a long winning streak, Brown was soundly trounced by Joe Louis in a recent 10-round bout in Detroit. Despite the whipping he took from Louis, Brown excited the admiration of the fistic world by remaining on his feet for the distance instead of falling in a knockout as have most of the Negro sensation's professional opponents.

Lost to Bob Tow.

Everett has become established as a great local favorite since he made his bow to Washington fans in a contest against Bob Tow last winter. Losing to Tow on a disputed decision, Everett went on to hand the highly regarded Steve Dudas an artistic pasting in a bout which set a new high for local heavyweight action, then scored handily over Al Boros of Bridgeport shortly before Boros knocked out Charley Massera.

The bout was signed only after much dickering and bickering between the Turner forces and the Everett and Brown camps. Brown's manager, Billy McCarney, finally agreed to the bout, however, when it was pointed out to him that the contest was a "natural" here and might be expected to set a new indoor record.

Bethesda High Revises Its Baseball Schedule

The revised baseball schedule and completed tennis card were announced yesterday by Managers Bishop and Brinkeroff, of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. Changes in the baseball schedule include Washington and Lee away on May 2, Maryland Frosh at College Park on May 9, Poolesville at Bethesda on May 14 and shifting Eastern from May 3 to May 21.

Manager Brinkeroff of the court team announced a five match card. Shepherd Holt, finalist in the District Badminton championship, will lead the team, with Pasma and Brinkeroff sure starters.

May 4—Georgetown Prep, at Garrett Park; 8, Emerson (undecided); 10, Friends, at Friends; 20, Roosevelt, at Rock Creek; 22, Rockville, at Rockville.

King OF CLUBS — A particularly rich, full-bodied blend. 40% straight whiskey 5¼ years old; 60% neutral whiskey. $1.70 pt. $3.35 qt.

Queen OF CLUBS — A gentler blend—wonderfully smooth and fragrant. 30% straight whiskey 5½ years old; 70% neutral whiskey. $1.50 pt. $2.95 qt.

3,000 Compete in Penn Relays Opening Today

Banner Field Will Vie for Laurels

L. S. U. Favored in Four Events; 78 to Race in Sprint Feature.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—An army of 3,000 athletes—track aces from East, South and Midwest—marched into Philadelphia tonight, aiming at honors in the forty-first renewal of the Penn relays, oldest cinder-path competition of its kind in the country.

Representing a banner field, in most events larger than ever before, the track and field stars begin tomorrow the two-day warfare in the University of Pennsylvania carnival on Franklin Field.

Headed by Louisiana State's nine-man team, favored in two of the classic relay races and as many "special" individual competitions, many of the top flight performers worked out on the battle ground today.

Others Due to Arrive.

The East's leading contingents—Manhattan, Cornell and Columbia—were due to reach the scene during the night, along with the two most powerful Western groups, Michigan and Michigan State, and North Carolina's squad, headed by a highly rated 4-mile combination.

The field of 78 in the sprint feature is "Tops," led by Tulane's Herman Neugass; Michigan's one-man track team, Willis Ward, Columbia's speed twins, Ben Johnson and San Maniaci; Eulace Peacock, Temple's Negro flash, and last year's Penn relays winner, Earl Widmyer, of Maryland.

Glenn (Slats) Hardin, Louisiana state's world record holder, heads the pack in the 400-meter hurdles, and Amsden Oliver, of Miami of Ohio, in the 110-meter timber-topping event.

Manhattan and Cornell between them defend five of the eight major relay crowns, the former in the four-mile and distance medley; the Ithacans in the 440, 880 and shuttle hurdle.

Either Penn or Maine in the distance medley, or North Carolina or Michigan State in the four-mile may topple Manhattan, while Cornell's chances of retaining its laurels depend on the Ithacans abilities to fight off the threat of Columbia, with Johnson and Maniaci featured performers, in the quarter and half mile relays, and New York University and Penn in the shuttle hurdle.

In two of the three relays titles left undefended by Indiana—the mile and 2-mile—Louisiana State's quartets, anchored by Hardin, look to be strongest, with Pitt a threat in the mile and Maine, Columbia and Manhattan rated strong in the 2-mile.

The third of Indiana's 1934 crowns, the sprint medley, may fall to Manhattan if the green-shirted New Yorkers overcome Columbia and North Carolina, the other favorites.

Torrance to Compete.

"Baby Jack" Torrance, Hardin's mighty teammate, will exhibit his power in both the 12 and 16 pound shot, and Keith Brown, latest of Yale's long line of soaring pole vaulters, will seek to dethrone McWilliams, of Princeton, in that specialty.

Michigan's Ward and Temple's Al Threadgill top the high jump field; Horace O'Dell, of Manhattan, appears strongest among the javelin hurlers; Michigan State's Tom Ottey heads the steeplechasers, while Buddy Blair, of Louisiana State, and Peacock, of Temple, look to be the powers in the hop-step-and-jump and broad jump, respectively.

Among the schoolboys, Mercersburg Prep, of Pennsylvania, is back in an attempt to make it four victories in a row for the interscholastic quarter mile, while St. Benedict's, of Newark, will seek to hang on to the prep school mile; George Washington, of New York, the high school mile, and Mount Pleasant, of Schenectady, N. Y., the interscholastic medley and 2-mile, all against strong fields.

Chief Little Wolf Pins GinoGaribaldi

Finish Comes in 27 Minute as 2,000 Look On.

Gino Garibaldi, faithful trial horse of the wrestling circuit, got tangled up in the Indian death lock of Chief Little Wolf at the Auditorium last night, couldn't find the key and, lo, poor Garibaldi was thrown in 27 minutes. Some 2,500 wrestling regulars paid plenty of wampum to be on hand for the Washington debut of the Indian, who is the latest "sensation" of wrestledom.

Jack Donovan, a handsome Irish lad, tossed Andy Rasher, another handsome, although not Irish, lad, after 24½ minutes of nice, refined semifinal wrestling. Donovan utilized his Irish flip, which is a rasslin' holt and not a soft drink, to finish off Andy after matters had been fairly even for two dozen minutes.

Rudy Dusek flopped Tex Morgan in 21 minutes of a rousing preliminary scheduled for 30 minutes. The action was fast and furious in the ring, but even faster and furiouser after Rudy had pinned Tex. Not satisfied with having bounced Morgan to the mat for a three-count, Rudy clapped his face after the bout, the nasty man. Tex resented his action and bounced him into the orchestra pit. As Dusek was climbing back from the space usually allotted to musicians, an infuriated fan tossed a whole cup of soda-pop in his face, giving Rudy something to really sputter about. Some fun, eh Elmer?

Dodgers Score; Babich Gives But 1 Hit

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, April 25.—Johnny Babich, 21-year-old Brooklyn right-hander, shut out the Phillies with one single today as the Dodgers won their fourth straight game, 6 to 0, to retain the National League lead.

Babich had a no-hit, near-perfect game in hand until one was out in the eighth. Then Mickey Haslin, playing third for the Phils because of Johnny Vergez' injured finger, pushed a base hit past second. He died in a double play, as did one of the two Phillies who previously had reached first on errors. Babich allowed two walks in the ninth.

The Dodgers collected 12 hits off Syl Johnson and Orville Jorgens, four going to Joe Stripp.

But the A's were not content with their 1-0 lead. In the third inning they spent a half hour at bat, compiling eight runs and seven hits with the aid of a grievous error by Lyn Lary.

Levinsky, Gallagher Battle Here June 24

A FIGHT between King Levinsky, colorful Chicago heavyweight, and Marty Gallagher, flailing Foggy Bottom fisticuffman, virtually was assured Washington for June 24 as "Broadway" Charley Rose, Eastern representative for the Kingfish, and Joe Turner, local promoter, came to terms yesterday for the match. Broadway Charley will leave this morning for Chicago to obtain the signature of Lena Levinsky, the King's sister-manager, to the contracts upon which he and Turner already have agreed.

That Lena Levinsky will agree to the match on the date and terms agreed upon by Turner and Rose generally was considered almost a certainty. Levinsky is expected to box Joe Louis, the Detroit Negro heavyweight sensation, in Chicago shortly after Louis' bout with Primo Carnera scheduled for New York on June 25.

Knocked out by Max Baer in the second round of what was scheduled to be a four-round "exhibition" last December, Levinsky since has scored 10 consecutive victories over a varied assortment of opponents—some good, some bad and some indifferent fighters. Gallagher has not fought since he handed the highly touted Ray Impellittiere an artistic trouncing last December 3.

The bout was scheduled for June 24 instead of earlier in order not to conflict with the Canzoneri-Klick match to be held for the benefit of the Shrine Convention on June 10. Frankie Klick was sent money for his transportation from San Francisco yesterday at his own request. Klick will leave California May 1 in order to be here as soon as possible to start training for the bout.

Grays Drill, Seek Games.

The Mount Rainier Grays will practice tomorrow afternoon on the Mount Rainier High diamond at 2 o'clock. The Grays are seeking Saturday and Sunday games for May, June and the rest of the summer. They will open their season Sunday at Fredericksburg, where they will meet the Fredericksburg Elks, also starting their season.

Rowe Pounded, Chisox Down Tigers, 9-8

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 25.—The rampaging Chicago White Sox blasted Schoolboy Rowe out of action with a seven-run drive in the fourth inning and choked off a ninth-inning Detroit rally today to win, 9 to 8, and sweep the three-game series with the American League champions.

Vernon (George) Washington, with two doubles and a single, led a ten-hit assault on Rowe, Joe Sullivan and Clyde Hatter, which enabled the Sox to come from behind for the second straight day. Wildness on the part of Vernon Kennedy, who started for Chicago, staked the Tigers to four runs in the second, but the onslaught on Rowe in the fourth gave Joe Vance a lead the Tigers just failed to overcome.

The triumph was the Sox's fifth in six starts with Detroit this season.

West Virginia Plays Hoyas Today

Track Meet and Two Net Matches Also Carded for Colleges.

A RATHER meager but diversified program, including a baseball game, track meet and two tennis matches, will help entertain the stay-at-home college fans this afternoon while Georgetown and Maryland are striving for national honors at the Penn Relay Carnival in Philadelphia.

Georgetown, aided by a virtually unheard of West Virginia U. nine, will manufacture the ball game starting at 3 o'clock at the Hilltop. Gallaudet's captainless track squad will engage Randolph-Macon at Kendall Green, while tennis will be supplied by George Washington and Johns Hopkins at Columbia Country Club, and Bridgewater at American University.

Ed Hargaden, main-sprocket in a rather skimpy pitching staff, probably will draw the assignment against West Virginia and if he does as well as he did against Penn State last week the Hoyas virtually are home. Ed received good support from his mates in that game and won handily and he probably could use more of it this afternoon.

Victors in 13 Matches.

George Washington's racqueters have won 13 in their last 15 matches, extending back over a period of several years and today's combat will afford the Colonial netmen an excellent opportunity of avenging those defeats, since both were inflicted by Johns Hopkins. The Blue Jays are as strong as usual, but, on paper, not strong enough for their hosts.

Without Co-captains Ladner and Leith, both hurdlers, Gallaudet will be a distinct underdog against Randolph-Macon's cinderpath crew. The loss of this pair places the brunt of the burden on Bob Layne and Tom Delp, although Coach Ted Hughes may slip a couple of aces out of his sleeve.

Giants Score, 2-1; Braves Get 3 Hits

Ott's Homer With Terry On Provides Margin.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 25.—For the second day in succession the Giants lost a shut-out because of a home run as they turned back the Braves, 2 to 1, in a battle of pitchers and homers today.

Wally Berger hit for the circuit in the seventh for the second Boston hit off Roy Parmelee, who gave only three blows. Berger also connected for a single. Ben Cantwell, who did most of the hurling for Boston, had just as bad luck. He granted only five blows, but one was Mel Ott's third circuit swat, which came after Bill Terry's single.

Stocks Push Higher With Silver Rise

Buying Extends Into Other Metals With Heavy Trading.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 25.—Stocks thrust vigorously upward today, led by soaring silver shares as the Treasury again advanced its buying price for the white metal.

An outright scramble for the relatively limited number of silver stocks on the exchange spilled over into buying in the copper and lead group, with many of which companies silver is a by-product, and the gold mines were carried along in the wake of the upward rush.

The buoyant market brought a sizable increase in turnover to the second best day for 1935 in this respect. Transactions aggregated 1,693,070 shares.

Wheat Dips 2c in Sales;

Cotton Active and Firm, With Old Crops at New Highs.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 25. — Maximum breaks of about 2 cents a bushel in wheat prices today accompanied clearing away of open accounts for the $6,000,000 Rosenbaum Grain Corporation.

Despite heavy selling that resulted and which caused grain values to be lower most of the day, stubborn resistance to price downturns became apparent, and rallies at times lifted quotations in numerous cases above Tuesday's level. Strength of securities, together with forecasts of probable frost in Kansas and Nebraska, encouraged buying on setbacks of prices.

Wheat closed unsettled, ½@1⅛ under yesterday's finish, May 98@98⅛, corn ⅞ off to ⅛ up, May 87¾@88, oats at ½ decline to ½ advance, and provisions varying from 7 cents loss to an equal gain.

Trade estimates were that a total of 5,000,000 bushels of grain futures of all kinds were liquidated for the Rosenbaum Corporation, not including big general selling from other sources. Official announcement made within an hour after the Board of Trade opening that all of the Rosenbaum futures contracts had been wound up exercised an evident stimulating influence.

Cotton Market.

New York, April 25.—Cotton was active and firm today with old crop positions making new high ground for the movement on trade buying and covering. Closing quotations were 6 or 7 points off from the best but steady at net gains of 16 to 28 points.

The firmness originated in the old crop situation. There was an active demand for the first May notices which amounted to only 3,500 bales and the old-crop months led the advance selling 27 to 35 points net higher, while the new showed net gains of 17 to 24 points at the best levels of the day. Considerable realizing was encountered on the advance, but it was readily absorbed on moderate setbacks.

Paris—Trading improved slightly on the bourse today with international issues leading the advance. French industrials were slow and rubber and petroleum shares declined slightly. The market closed heavy.

Berlin—Prices weakened on the bourse today due to the lack of orders and the market closed very quiet.

Proposed Old-Age Reserve, if Doughton Bill Is Adhered to, Provides for Virtually Wiping Out National Debt and Deposit Inflation.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 25.—The proposed reserve for old-age pensions, if accumulated and maintained in the manner provided in the Doughton bill already passed by the House, would furnish a means for virtually liquidating the national debt and gradually eliminating the inflation of bank deposits which has assumed such spectacular proportions during the past 18 months, those now analyzing the financial effects of the most striking feature in the pending social security bill point out.

The conviction of interested bankers and insurance company executives generally that this measure is perhaps more significant as a financial than a social insurance enactment and the reasons, therefore, were outlined in this column yesterday. A concerted drive by insurance company executives to apprise the public of the pertinent facts and to urge a sharp reduction or elimination of the reserve that must be set up for the old-age contributory pension scheme, is now being mapped.

Effects of New Deal Might Be Liquidated.

Bankers point out, however, that there is another aspect to the old-age reserve account provisions of the bill which would permit a liquidation of many of the effects of the New Deal through its use during the years to come. Thus, the plan would accumulate, according to actuarial estimates, $26,000,000,000 within 25 years as a reserve against the Government's liability to pay old-age pensions.

This reserve would have to be invested in Government bonds as rapidly as it is accumulated. Through such purchases, the national debt outstanding would be gradually reduced, especially if the budget should be brought into approximate balance before very long. Eventually the bulk of the outstanding volume of Government bonds, assuming no increase in the national debt from the present level, would be acquired by this account in the Federal Treasury. This would be equivalent in practice to retiring the national debt, for Government bonds would not really be outstanding in any true sense when they are owned by the Government itself.

A Government bond is of value because it represents a promise by the Government to tax its citizens to the extent necessary to pay interest and principal. For the Government to hold its own bonds as a reserve for old-age pensions, it is argued, would be meaningless, since the Government possesses this right to tax as a matter of course, regardless of whether or not it owns its own obligations. Because this reserve will not be used up, but will be kept intact at a high level much like the reserves of life insurance companies, Government bonds so acquired would actually be retired.

The commercial banks of the country now hold some $12,500,000,000 of Government and Government-guaranteed bonds. If the Doughton bill should be passed by the Senate also and become law, the old-age reserve account would begin to purchase Government bonds in the open market by 1937, and by 1950 it would have more than $13,000,000,000 invested in this way, it is estimated officially. Bonds for the reserve account would have to be purchased largely from the banks, and they would be paid for with Government bank deposits accumulated through taxation. The net result of such purchases of Government bonds from banks would be a corresponding contraction in bank deposits.

Liquidation of bank holdings of governments to the old-age reserve account would thus reverse the process now going on, whereby the banks are expanding their deposits through buying additional Federal obligations. It would permit the liquidation of the mass of additional bank deposits created through purchases of vast amounts of Government bonds by the commercial banks of the country. The reserve could thus constitute a great deflationary influence which would neutralize the inflationary effects of the fiscal and banking policies of the past few years.

The fly in the ointment, however, is the serious doubt entertained by realistic observers that any such huge reserve fund would actually be kept intact over any extended period of time. There would be constant pressure for increases in benefit payments, it is feared. Congress might be exhorted to raise the pensions payable to each person over 65, or to lower the age at which pension payments are begun to 60 or below. There would also be pressure, doubtless, to apply the fund to other uses, especially in periods of depression.

For these reasons, it is held far sounder policy by many students of the subject to modify the rates of taxes for old-age pensions so as to obtain each year, in revenue, approximately the amount that would have to be paid out as pensions in that year. This would eliminate the fiction of a reserve fund of government bonds. Lower tax rates than those stated in the bill would then be needed at first, but higher imposts would be required later.

Others favor the retention of the scale of tax rates in the Doughton bill, but would provide that all surplus tax collections in the initial period be used actually to retire the national debt, rather than to build up a "reserve." In this way, when the Treasury finds it must increase taxes in order to finance future payments of pensions under the plan, the total tax burden would be smaller because the national debt had been reduced first and interest payments would be smaller.

The Markets For the Day At a Glance

	Thurs.	Wed.
Advances	418	237
Declines	212	394
Unchanged	176	178
Total issues	806	809

Stocks—Led by the silver shares, virtually all sections of the market responded to vigorous buying. All metal shares were active. United States Smelting and Cerro De Pasco both up 5 points. Sales, 1,693,070 shares.

Bonds—Speculative enthusiasm revived and secondary loans turned in an excellent performance. Rails and utilities were in good demand. Sales decreased to $13,348,000.

Curb—Silver price increases predicted considerable buying activity. Mining shares were in the lead. Turnover of 352,000 shares was the largest this year.

Grains—Maximum breaks of 2 cents a bushel in wheat followed clearing up of $6,000,000 in open accounts of the defunct Rosenbaum firm. Resistance developed at various stages of the trading and closes were up from the lows though still unsettled. May wheat closed at 98; May corn, at 87¾.

Cotton—Active and firm with old crop making new highs. Closes were off from the tops but steady and firm at net gains of 16 to 28 points. May cotton closed at 11.70.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.35, while refined closed unchanged at 5.10 for fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 closed at 7, and Santos No. 4 sold last at 8½ to 8¾.

Bar silver—Up to a 15-year high in New York with a 5⅝ cents rise to close at 77 cents per ounce. In London the close was up 2 1-16d at 34⅞d ((75.97).

Stewart-Warner Net Gains 200% In First Quarter

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 25 (AP).—Earnings of the Stewart-Warner Corporation for the first quater were nearly 200 per cent larger than for the first quarter of 1934, the company announced today.

Consolidated net income, after all charges, was $496,063, equivalent to 40 cents a share on the common stock outstanding, compared with $167,495, or 13 cents a share, for the same quarter in 1934.

Net sales for the March, 1935, quarter were $5,262,701, compared with $4,045,721 in the first three months of 1934, a gain of 30 per cent.

Storage Wheat Decreases.

Stocks of wheat in interior mills, elevators and warehouses on April 1 1935, are officially estimated to have been 68,920,000 bushels, compared with 87,393,000 bushels on April 1, 1934 (revised); 95,911,000 bushels on April 1, 1933, and 66,366,000 bushels on April 1 1932. Stocks in these positions are less than last year in nearly every State west of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio, while a slight increase is shown in the area south and east of the Ohio River.

Home Repair Advance Told By Siddons

President of Bankers Association Talks Over Radio.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Salient features of the better housing campaign that is being sponsored by local banks in co-operation with the Federal Housing Administration were presented in a radio talk given by Frederick P. H. Siddons over WRC yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Siddons is president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, secretary of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. and has been a leading exponent of home financing under titles 1 and 2 of the Federal housing act.

Siddons reported that to date, Washington banks have made 1,208 loans for a total of over $540,000. Other loans for the same purpose but not protected by the housing act free insurance feature are not included.

His talk included also a report on the progress of the advertising campaign that has been carried on during the past two months by member banks of the District of Columbia Bankers Association to acquaint homeowners with the simple methods necessary to procure these loans.

Deposits Have Increased.

Washington banks, because of the great increase due to Government activities, have enjoyed a steady increase in deposits, Siddons continued. As a result a great deal of money has been made available for modernization loans and other credit purposes.

For the benefit of those considering improvements in their business or home, Siddons listed the primary requirements for obtaining loans under the housing act. They are listed as follows:

1. How much will the bank loan? From $100 to $2,000, depending on your income, for improvements on any one property.

2. May the owner of any kind of property apply? Applications will be considered to improve one-family, two-family or other residences, apartment buildings, stores, office buildings, factories, warehouses and farm buildings, in accordance with the terms of the national housing act.

3. What you must do: Obtain an application form from any of the eligible banks and supply the information it requires.

4. What the bank does: It will assist you in preparing the application to meet the requirements of the Federal Housing Administration in obtaining the loan.

5. What signatures are required: Only the signature of the applicant, and, if the applicant is married, the wife (or husband) in the ordinary cases.

6. One to three years to pay. This can be extended to five years. Regular monthly payments may be made over a period of one to three years and, in exceptional cases, for longer periods.

Member Bank Balances Rise 218 Millions to 4.7 Billions

Condition Apparently Due to Transfer of Funds as Treasury Cash and Deposits, as Well as Circulation Declined in Week.

By the Associated Press.

Member bank reserve balances soared $218,000,000 during the week ended April 24, 1935, to a total of $4,719,000,000, the condition statement of the Reserve banks revealed yesterday.

The change, apparently, was brought about by a transfer of deposits, as Treasury cash and deposits with the Reserve institutions were off $171,000,000 during the week and money in circulation was $53,000,000 less than the week before. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended April 24, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,477,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 compared with the preceding week and a decrease of $27,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On April 24 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,452,000,000, a decrease of $18,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with decreases of $53,000,000 in money in circulation and $171,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and an increase of $29,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increases of $218,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $18,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts.

"Relatively small changes were reported in holdings of discounted and purchased bills and industrial advances. An increase of $21,000,000 in holdings of Treasury bills was offset by a decrease of $21,000,000 in United States Treasury notes."

Changes During Week.

Changes in the amount of Reserve Bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended April 24, 1935, were as follows (in millions of dollars):

Diamond Match Co. Declares 20c. Extra

New York, April 25 (AP).—Diamond Match Co. directors today declared an extra dividend of 20 cents on the common and preferred stocks, payable June 1 to stock of record May 15.

The regular quarterly dividend of 25 on the common stock also was ordered payable as above.

Gen. Motors Net 68 Cents

Compares With 63 Cents on Common in First Quarter of 1934.

Net earnings of General Motors Corporation applicable to the common stock for the first quarter ended March 31, 1935, were equivalent to 68 cents per share on the average common shares outstanding during this quarter. This compares with earnings of 63 cents per share for the first quarter of 1934, Alfred P. Sloan, president, announced yesterday.

Net earnings available for dividends for the first quarter ended March 31, 1935, amounted to $31,510,371, compared with net earnings of $29,319,523 for the first quarter of 1934.

Total sales of cars and trucks to dealers, including Canadian sales, overseas shipments and production from foreign sources, during the first quarter ended March 31, 1935, amounted to 388,716 cars and trucks, compared with 316,604 cars and trucks in the corresponding quarter of 1934, a gain of 72,112 units, or 22.8 per cent. General Motors dealers in the United States delivered to consumers 258,093 cars and trucks during the first quarter of 1935, compared with 180,523 cars and trucks in the corresponding quarter of 1934, a gain of 77,570 units, or 43 per cent.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The rise in silver prices gave a further boost to Far Eastern silver currencies in principal world markets yesterday.

The Honskong dollar outstanding unrestricted silver currency jumped 2.65 cents in New York to 56.75 cents. The Shanghai Yuan dollar despite the export tax on silver, rose .40 of a cent to 40.75 cents. The Mexican peso rose .60 to 28.60 cents in New York and the dollar declined 10 centavos to 3.80 pesos in Mexico D. F.

Most of the Continental gold currencies were a little higher against the dollar, with French francs in New York up .00¼ at 6.59⅛ cents.

Metals Make Curb Active

Sales 352,000 Shares, Largest Volume for This Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 25.—Considerable buying activity developed on the curb market today following announcement of further increase in the price of domestic and world silver. Metal shares were particularly firm. The approximate turnover mounted to 352,000 shares, the largest this year.

Consolidated Mining & Smelting got up more than 10 points, while gains of fractions to 2 points were recorded by Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Newmont, Sunshine Mining and Hecla Mining. New York & Honduras Rosario rose 12 points in fairly active trading. A. O. Smith, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Dow Chemical were up about a point each. Hiram Walker, Lake Share, American Gas & Electric and others absorbed substantial profit taking.

Low-Priced Bonds Lead Day's Trades

Rails Show Strength While Government Issues Are Dull.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 25.—Speculative enthusiasm was revived in today's bond market and secondary loans turned in one of their best performances in some time. Issues in the lower-priced brackets, commanded the largest followings, while the investment type securities were permitted to rest in a narrow groove. Best gains were recorded by rails and utilities, although scattered industrials were not backward.

While transfers totaled only $13,348,000, par value, against $16,381,000 yesterday, the smaller volume was due largely to a restricted turnover in U. S. Government bonds. Small declines were in the majority in this department.

The news was generally viewed as constructive, most earnings reports apparently being satisfactory and business developments indicative of further progress in the recovery movement.

Among the rails, up fractionally to as much as 3 points, were Boston & Maine 5s, at 71; N. Y. Central 4s, at 81¼; Southern Pacific 4½s, at 65; Baltimore & Ohio 6s, at 72. Gains of fractions to a point or so were registered by such utilities as American Water Works 6s, at 80¼, and Columbia Gas 5s, at 88. In other divisions advances up to around 2 points were shown by Chile Copper 5s, at 95, and Murray Body 6½s, at 109.

Obligations of Denmark and Germany were slightly improved, but many other foreign issues were virtually unchanged.

Greene Declares First Dividend Since 1930

New York, April 25 (AP).—Directors of Greene Cananea Copper Co., today declared a dividend of $2 a share, the first since August of 1930, when 75 cents was paid.

LEGAL NOTICES

Harry W. Blair, Assistant Attorney General; Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney; Henry H. Glassie, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Alex H. Bell, jr., Special Assistant to the United States Attorneys. IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, holding a special term as a District Court of the United States. Filed April 8, 1935. FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. In the matter of the acquisition of parts of lots 92, 94, 95 and 107, in Wright and Dole's subdivision of part of the tract of land known as "Mount Pleasant," as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber District No. 1, folio 59, said parts of said lots being known for purposes of assessment and taxation as lots 854, 817, 849 and 830 in square 2880 in the District of Columbia. District Court, Docket No. 1341. Order of citation. Upon consideration of the petition of the United States of America filed herein on the 8th day of April, 1935, by Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, acting under the instructions of the Attorney General of the United States and at the request of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, seeking the condemnation of the following-described lands in the City of Washington, District of Columbia: PARCEL I: Part of lot 92 in Wright and Dole's subdivision of part of the tract of land known as "Mount Pleasant," as per plat recorded in Liber District No. 1, folio 59, of the Records of the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot and running thence along the northerly line thereof westerly 100 feet; thence southerly 15.67 feet to the south line of the land conveyed to Anna Nauck by deed recorded in Liber 2372, folio 490, of the Land Records of the District of Columbia; thence along said south line easterly 100 feet to the east line of said lot 92; thence with said east line northerly 12.67 feet to the place of beginning. Said Parcel I contains, according to the plat of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, 1,567 square feet. Said parcel is improved by premises 2452 Georgia avenue northwest, in the District of Columbia, and is designated for purposes of assessment and taxation as lot 854, in square 2880. PARCEL II: Part of lot 94 in Wright and Dole's subdivision of part of the tract of land known as "Mount Pleasant," as per plat recorded in Liber District No. 1, folio 59, of the Records of the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, described as follows: Beginning for the same on the west line of Georgia avenue (formerly Seventh Street road) at the southeast corner of said lot and running thence northerly along said Georgia avenue 16.67 feet to the southeast corner of the part of said lot conveyed to Roger Carroll by deed recorded in Liber 1681, folio 127, among the Land Records of the District of Columbia; thence westerly parallel with the south line of said lot 94, 128.333 feet to the northeast corner of the part of said lot 94, conveyed to M. Ferro by deed dated July 20, 1930, and recorded in Liber 6473, folio 490 among said Land Records; thence southerly along the easterly line of said last-mentioned conveyance 16.67 feet to the south line of said lot 94; thence easterly along the south line of said lot 128.333 feet to the place of beginning. Said Parcel II contains, according to the plat of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, 2,139.26 square feet. Said parcel is improved by premises 2458 Georgia avenue northwest, in the District of Columbia, and is designated for purposes of assessment and taxation as lot 817, in square 2880. PARCEL III: Parts of lots 94 and 95

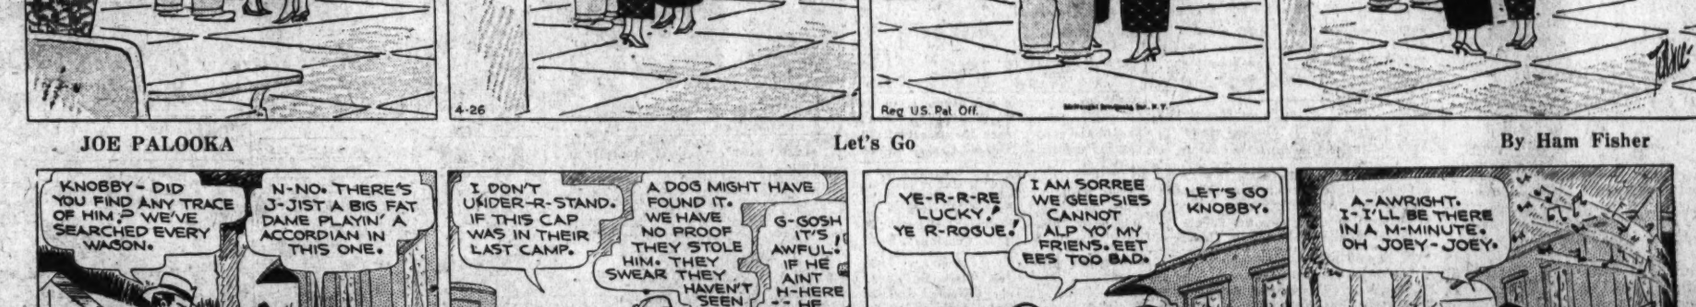
APPLE MARY By Martha Orr



OH, OH! THERE'S BILL BIFF TALKING TO APPLE MARY, AND THEY'RE DISCUSSING ME. I'D BETTER LISTEN IN ON THIS.
NO, BILL, I DON'T CARE WHAT YOU SAY ABOUT MR. SPROCKETT. EVERYTHING I HAVE TODAY, I OWE TO THAT MAN.
YES, BUT——
YOU WOULDN'T WANT ME TO TURN AGAINST HIM, AFTER ALL HE'S DONE FOR DENNIE AND ME.
WELL, YER GENERALLY RIGHT, MARY, BUT I WISH YOU'D THINK THIS OVER.
BOY, AM I SITTING PRETTY, SHE WOULDN'T EVEN LISTEN TO THAT BIG TROUBLE MAKER. SHE HAS PERFECT FAITH IN ME.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Threats By Harry J. Tuthill

Ah ha ha! So Mama Bungle... you too, like Peggy, laugh in my teeth when I, a millionaire many times, give her the big chance to be Mrs. Ivan Sierro.
Please, Mr. Sierro, calm yourself.
No! No! Many times I see from the way your mama watch me, like cat and mouse, that she try to put bug in your mind about me.
Please let go of my arm, Mr. Sierro. There's a law against...
Law? Ivan Sierro are the law here. Also, I are tired of somebody watch me like hawk every time I talk to girl I love. You hear that, old lady?
Old lady? Oh you're no spring chicken yourself, Mr. Sierro.
So! 5...10 minutes after I tell your daughter she will be Mrs. Ivan Sierro, you talk like regular mother-in-law, eh? Well, I fix that business. Also I marry Peggy. You hear that? Also...
Come Peggy, let's not haggle with this bully.

Rain Stirs Hope Of Good Crops For Northwest

Minnesota, the Dakotas See Chance for Millions in Farm Profit.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, April 25.—Good cheer replaced despair in three States severely stricken by drought a year ago as crop statisticians today counted in the millions of dollars benefits from recent continued rains which fell in territory dust-blown in 1934.

Statisticians in Minnesota and the Dakotas agreed crop prospects were the best in years and that, with normal rainfall through the growing season, early rains which assured crops a good start will put millions in the pockets of Northwest farmers. The Weather Bureau predicted more rain for tonight and Friday.

Morale High.

"Practically every field in the State is now in fine shape either to plow or seed," said Theodore Martell, North Dakota's commissioner of agriculture, "and the spirit of the farmers has improved considerably."

Precipitation was near normal in several sections of North Dakota after rains the last two days ranged up to 2 inches.

In South Dakota the outlook was even brighter. In the Huron area, heart of the State's drought section, 5.92 inches of rain had fallen this year, as compared with a normal of 4.25 inches. This was typical of developments which led Roy Cave, Minnehaha County agent, to describe soil conditions as the "best in five years." The State last year suffered its worst crop failure in history.

Good Prospects.

Paul H. Kirk, State and Federal agricultural statistician, described prospects for Minnesota as "much better than in years."

Minnesota had received nearly an inch of rain in the last two days, following good general rains several days earlier.

Pneumonia Claims Boy's Life in Dust Belt

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Colo., April 25.—Seven-year-old Harvey Dwight died of pneumonia here today in one of the two Red Cross emergency hospitals set up to treat 26 pneumonia patients in the Baca County dust belt.

A new silt storm of terrific force swept through the stricken area during the morning while, by contrast, virtually all other sections of Colorado were deluged with snow and rain.

The Dwight child was the son of Norman Dwight, a farmer. Sixteen Red Cross nurses are operating in the dust bowl, with a second emergency hospital at Walsh, Colo.

Dr. William De Kleine, medical adviser from Washington, has mapped out an extensive program to bring all cases of pneumonia aggravated by dust to hospitals from farms and remote communities. Private physicians, however, have insisted that a chemical analysis of the dust disclosed no harmful germs and have disputed that outside assistance is necessary.

Blind Man's Dog Resents Overtures, Bites Official

Friendly overtures to a blind man's police dog yesterday cost F. Joseph Donohue, an attorney, painful bites on the hand.

The dog, with its master, was in the office of Assistant District Attorney David A. Hart. When Donohue entered and spoke to the animal, it nipped him sharply several times.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Slowly, but inevitably, New York's daylight saving time is creeping up on us. And, New York's day-light saving time is no small problem to Washington radio workers and writers. So be patient, when, after Sunday, you find all your favorites either on new time or off the air altogether.

New York's Columbia studio clocks will be moved ahead by a young man who does his duties without much ceremony. At New York's N. B. C. studios the ceremony is a bit more elaborate—for one hour all the synchronized clocks will move in double quick time, due to a special 120 current cycle rather than the usual 60. N. B. C. doesn't bother with workmen and a hand-turning process. Electricity is good enough for them.

So, Columbia's young man and N. B. C.'s quicker current will do their bit—and radio people will lie awake nights trying to remember whether that particular program is scheduled an hour ahead or an hour back, or whether they will have to cancel to take care of a local commerical, or what they will do with the baseball game—and so on.

Guests and hosts:

Dinner Will Benefit Church Building Fund

A chicken pie dinner will be held Tuesday at the parish hall of the Trinity Episcopal Church, corner of Dahlia street and Piney Branch road, Takoma Park, D. C., under auspices of the Ladies' Guild of the church.

Mrs. Frank McKenzie and Mrs. Ada Stump are joint chairmen of the dinner, which will be served from 5 until 7 o'clock. Mrs. H. L. Stevenson is chairman of the dining room and Mrs. F. Sore Stoddard is in charge of the sale of tickets.

Cigarettes Valued at $1,500 Are Stolen

The cigarettes were in 50 cases, police were told. Thieves apparently backed a truck to a rear door of the company, sawed iron bars on a window, loaded the cases and fled.

• No fancy frills! Every penny goes into the sound construction that has made Leonard a leader in the refrigeration industry for more than 50 years.

• One-piece smooth porcelain interior, easy to keep clean. Leonard-approved insulation all around.

NO MONEY DOWN
